Auxiliary Membership Campaign Expected To Secure 400 Members

Mrs. V. M. Eastwood, newly-elected president of the Nicholls Hospital Auxiliary, and sister of Matron Agnes Neal of the 15th Canadian General Hospital, Hindhead, England, presided at the first Fall meeting of the Auxiliary Monday afternoon in Mark Street United Church. The large attendance of members included canvassers in the Auxiliary membership campaign, to whom Mrs. S. J. Graham, as convener of the membership committee, expressed her gratitude for what they had done to help the Auxiliary bring Nicholls Hospital and its need for expansion before the public. She announced that the membership campaign is about 1900 to date, and is expected to exceed the 2,300 of last year.

The report of the Peterborough Hospital Auxiliary, when presented at the general meeting of the Hospital Aids Association during its convention October 9, 10 and 11 at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, aroused much favorable comment among members of other associations, and received the warm commendation of the chairman of the sessions, Mrs. O. W. Rhynas. Although a very young organization, Nicholls Hospital Auxiliary has one of the largest memberships in the Association, and has raised more money during its short history than many groups of mature years. In tribute to the fine work of the Auxiliary, the past president, Mrs. I. T. Lillico, was elected to the Advisory Board, the first time a Peterborough member has ever been so represented. Miss Violet Davidson, who attended as a delegate, presented her report in a concise but delightfully human manner.

Mrs. E. M. Leeson, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, spoke briefly of present hopes for a "wooden building" which would accommodate from 20 to 25 more patients, and partially help in the lack of sufficient hospital accommodation for the present. The matter has already gone to the Municipal Court for approval, she stated, and is to be built at an approximate cost of $10,000. With close to a thousand soldiers in the city, and an increase in factory help, the need for more room is steadily increasing, Mrs. Leeson said. Keen appreciation of the "shower" of jams and jellies brought to the meeting was also expressed by the superintendent.

Reporting for the Thursday club, Mrs. W. H. Hill stated that two baby layettes are sent to the Hospital each months, and that the club had enough layettes ahead until Spring, and were now busy each week with Red Cross sewing. Announcement was made of a tea to be held by the club at the home of Mrs. L. D. W. Magie, 371 Reid street, to which Auxiliary members will be especially welcomed. Proceeds from the tea, which is to be held Thursday afternoon of this week, are to go towards the $500 which is the club's objective for the hospital fund, and which is now almost reached.

A total of 78 life members, an increase of two since September, was announced by Mrs. G. R. Scott, convener. A report by the treasurer indicated that the Auxiliary has bought a Government War Savings Loan with funds raised during the past year in addition to the purchase of an electric food conveyer and curtains for the women's public ward.

Mrs. E. Breckenridge expressed the appreciation of the Auxiliary to Rev. M. Rowland of Bailieboro.

Rev. Rowland welcomed the Auxiliary in the absence of his father, Rev. E. W. Rowland, and thanks to Mr. Rowland and officials of the church was expressed by Mrs. E. Breckenridge.

Miss Violet Davidson was convener of the tea which was held after the meeting in honor of campaign canvassers. Mrs. R. Ross and Mrs. W. H. Hill poured tea, and the table was charmingly arranged with lighted tapers and shaggy pink chrysanthemums. Serving were Mrs. Gordon Hall, Mrs. G. R. Scott, Mrs. W. Gordon, Mrs. I. T. Lillico, Miss E. Morrow, Mrs. J. Detcher, Mrs. S. J. Graham, Mrs. Chris. Hughes.

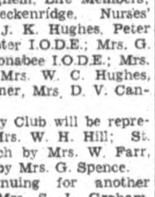
Help the Young People To Health - Happiness



What a common sight to see a young person whose bloodless face and feeble frame are evidences of poor circulation and weakness where bounding health and rosy cheeks should reign.

Young people in such a condition are generally of an anaemic nature and require a preparation containing iron to improve the blood content.

Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills meet this requirement, as they contain three concentrated forms of iron of an easily assimilated nature together with other valuable ingredients indicated for building up the system and helping to improve the blood content.

A commentary on the scripture was received by Charles Brooks. Marian Rea led in prayer, after which Eleanor Sherin read a Hymn of Peace by Ernest Baurner Allen.

The hymn, "One to Every Man and Nation," closed the worship period. Owing to the absence of the president, the vice-president Marian Rea took charge of the business.

Committees were appointed for the Patriotic Tea to be given on November 11; Rev. R. M. Patterson took charge of the discussion, "Making Peace Possible." The speaker stressed the difference in historical backgrounds between the people of Europe and the people of the New World.

The problem of peace to-day is a world problem and of even greater importance than the problem of winning the war. Mr. Patterson finished his address by appealing to the Young People to study the Bible and follow its dictates.

After the singing of the National Anthem, Mr. Patterson pronounced the benediction.

The A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church met in the basement Monday evening at eight o'clock. The meeting opened with hymn, "Stand Up for Jesus," followed by prayer. Scripture was read by the rector.

A short business period followed and George Stephenson was appointed dramatic convener. A social half hour was spent. Quartet, "There'll Always Be An England." Quiz contest conducted by Jane Magee. Bingo was then enjoyed by all, conducted by Vernon Hunt.

John L. Lewis Is Given Cue To Resign C.I.O.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—(AP). — President Roosevelt's apparent victory over Wendell Willkie gave John L. Lewis his self-appointed cue today to step down as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and it likewise encouraged conjecture that new efforts would be made to end the schism in union ranks between the C.I.O. and the American Federation of Labor.

Lewis staked his C.I.O. leadership on a Roosevelt defeat when he issued his dramatic call to followers two weeks ago for a Willkie triumph.

Basked Roosevelt in 1936.

A New Deal backer in 1936, Lewis announced in his Willkie appeal that if a third term were given to President Roosevelt, he would regard it as a vote of "no confidence" in his judgment and retire from office when the C.I.O. meets in convention November 18.

Despite this, however, a movement got under way at the first sign of a Roosevelt victory to have Lewis reconsider and continue in his present post.

If that move fails, Philip Murray of Pittsburg, a C.I.O. vice-president, probably would be the choice to carry on the leadership of an organization which split into two political camps as soon as Lewis came out for Willkie.

Labor Peace Move

The triumph of the pro-Roosevelt leaders in C.I.O. brought predictions from some sources that an A.F.L.-C.I.O. peace settlement within six months would be worked out. A.F.L. leaders have blamed Lewis for the failure of past conferences to produce a labor settlement.

On the other hand, the pro-Lewis forces asserted that Lewis would continue to exert a major influence over C.I.O. policy and direction since, along with his C.I.O. presidency, he has been the leader and outstanding figure of the powerful United Mine Workers' Union, regarded as the key unit of the C.I.O.

The C.I.O. presidency paid Lewis no salary. The Mine Union post carries a salary of $25,000 a year.

If Murray succeeds Lewis as the top man of C.I.O., Lewis will be handing over the title to one of his closest associates for 30 years. Murray, like Lewis, is a miner, and ranks next to Lewis in the Miners' Union.

Lewis was the founder and first president of C.I.O.; it grew out of a break with the A.F.L. over organizing policies in the big mass production industries in 1935.

We Have Lost a Good Citizen

The passing of Roland Denne strikes close home to many people in Peterborough. To an unusual degree there is that feeling of personal loss because the number who knew him was so large. He had within him that peculiar genius for knowing people and meeting more of them. He always talked sensibly and well and had something to say.

It is not necessary to review his activity in affairs of the Board of Education, the City Council, of which he was Mayor for seven consecutive years, nor yet of his efforts on the Utilities Commission. All these have been an open book before the citizens, and there have been no pages which Roland Denne might have wished to be hidden from the people who had confidence in him.

There was one characteristic about him, and he was essentially a Peterborough man. We are as certain as can be believed with all the intensity of conviction that Peterborough was the best city which could be found. He wanted it to be better; he desired that it should be well and sanely governed, that its financial structure should have included within it stability and sound judgment. Roland Denne possessed that persuasive power which enabled him to bring to pass many of the ideas which he formulated.

It seems only a few days ago since he was in this office. The Examiner had made the suggestion that Roland Denne would be the ideal industrial commissioner for this city. We had not consulted him previously and had nothing on which to base an opinion as to how he would receive the suggestion. Mr. Denne was actually glad that the suggestion had been made. His explanation was simple and sincere: "There is something right there which I would like to try and do for Peterborough. I have the time now and I don't think it would cost the city a great deal of money. I might not succeed every time, but I would at least like to have the opportunity of trying."

And that was his outlook: "I would like to do something for Peterborough." In his own capable way he had already done a great deal—but there was something more he would like to accomplish. We prefer to remember him as a capable citizen who thought in terms of his community.

The Lightning War Bogs

The "blitzkrieg" form of war is not sure fire. It worked when Hitler tried it out on Poland; it was successful in the Scandinavian countries, and it over-ran the Low Countries and had much to do with the downfall of France. It was then operating in territory of its own selection.

The blitzkrieg did not work when confronted by the English Channel and the determined people on the other side of it. The war machine did not readily take to the water and the great array of lesser boats which were to convey the troops provided exactly the sort of target for which the R.A.F. had been waiting.

It took Russia three and a-half months to break the resistance of Finland and the air force was the only part of the service which did effective work. How much of Russia's mechanized material was bogged we do not know, but it was a dismal failure in land where there were mountains, snow and ice—and determined Finns.

The Italians have found that the blitzkrieg idea has not worked well on the way to Alexandria and the Suez. Drifting and shifting sand is not a good track on which to place mechanical giants. They are making another discovery of the same sort in their attack on the Greeks. Lack of roads in the Epirus sector is probably the main factor in holding up the Italians, and the coming of snow has not helped.

As a rule mule pack trains on a narrow trail provide whatever transportation facilities are in demand. The Greeks, although outnumbered, and not having at their disposal the equipment of the armaments, know these mountains; they are aware of their strength and of their weakness. The superior invading force should have been well on its way now, but it has so far been halted and serious losses have been inflicted on it.

Whether there is truth in the claim that Hitler will have to go to the assistance of Mussolini to aid in the Greek attack we do not know. There are plenty of rumors about it but they are not dependable, but the one thing which is abundantly plain is that the blitzkrieg has its limitations. Also apparent is the weakness of Italy and it is not inconceivable that a determined drive against that country would take Mussolini out of the war.

Satisfies This Country

Residents of Canada have nothing to do with electing a President of United States, but we are convinced the election of Roosevelt for a third term is the way our folk would have wished it to be.

It would probably have made little difference to us had the election gone otherwise, but with no change in the occupant of the premier position across the border it gives us the feeling that an old friend has been returned to power.

Canadians have come to respect President Roosevelt on account of his wholesome attitude on matters of world scope, on account of his outspoken words and his fearless outlook, and more recently by reason of his declaration of increased assistance for British arms.

It takes some time to thoroughly classify the vote, but it is sufficient for the moment to know that President Roosevelt has been endorsed by his own people.

A Fitting Climax

We noticed a picture of Piper A. Robertson, a member of the 4th Pipe Band attached to the No. 2 Infantry Training Centre at Camp Borden. Piper Robertson in the picture is playing upon them or into them or at them—or whatever it is that is done to make the pipes play. We learn that these pipes are now 178 years old, and that would have brought them into existence about 1762.

And that would be during the years when Frederick the Great was the power in Germany, and it would be the best part of a century in advance of the time when Bismarck became a power in the German world.

We are told by one who knows quite well that the pipes get better with age. They actually produce a more mellow tone when they reach the century mark and that mellowing process proceeds with each passing year. It may be these pipes of 178 years are quite pleasant. It is not outside the range of human probability that the Germans may yet hear these fine old pipes. They may yet be played in the grand parade up and down Unter den Linden for we are ready to believe that pipes which have lived for so long have actually been spared and mellowed in anticipation of some climax in their long career. At the moment we can think of nothing more thrilling than a pipe band on the great street of that proud city of Berlin.

It's a Great Big Job

Whether the correspondents at Ottawa know more than the Government is not certain, but some of them have already stated that Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, has failed on his mission to England. He is in company with Hon. J. G. Taggart, charged with the operation of the Bacon Board. Ottawa reporters hear Mr. Gardiner is coming back with nothing in his bag, and he went forth looking for a better price for wheat and a chance to supply more of it to Britain, and he sought also a new contract for bacon. Added to that drab outlook we read that no one in Britain had suggested that Mr. Gardiner should come over and see what he could do. Whether that means anything we do not know. Certainly this country wants to sell all the wheat it can, and it would be more definite if a new bacon contract was made as the former one has expired. So Mr. Gardiner would appear to have had sufficient reason for the journey, but he should not have been handling the National War Services Regulations at the same time.

Mr. Gardiner we think should be one or the other. He cannot handle both departments, nor should he be expected to do so.

It is abundantly certain a Minister of Agriculture is going to have an enormous task on his hands. So great that he will have to camp right on that job early and late, and even then he may meet with defeat.

Primarily it has to do with wheat in the Canadian West. There has been added capacity for 75,000,000 bushels, and elevator companies have been allowed to expand in the West, and they can charge construction costs off against their excess profits tax. But the Western elevator interests are opposed to any such expansion of capacity being made in the East.

The average individual has read a good deal about the wheat surplus, and perhaps has taken it for granted it would right itself. But it has done nothing of the sort. We are informed that by next August there will not be a place to put an added bushel of new wheat, and if that great producing area in Western Canada cannot find a place to store the 1941 crop what is it going to do? If that is not a big enough problem then we do not know much about big problems.

The reason for this piling up of wheat until it has bulged all our storage capacity to the point where much of the 1940 crop will remain on the farmers' premises is not hard to find.

Our production has been maintained while our customers have been departing.

Years before the war started the fear of war was taking wheat sales from us. That was why we lost Germany, France and Italy as customers a good many years ago. They wanted to grow their own wheat so they might be sure of a supply in case of war.

Since the war started we have lost our trade with the Scandinavian countries and with the Low Countries, leaving Britain as the one customer, and there have been times when Britain, for diplomatic reasons, has seen fit to place orders for wheat outside of Canada.

Probably Mr. Gardiner was well enough justified in making the trip to England; he may have considered the solution in part was with our overseas customer, but he will find the problem waiting for him when he gets home. If the West cannot store its crop for next year, then what is going to be done about restricting the amount of land to be seeded? And if the farmers have to deliberately go about the business of handling a decreased acreage, then how are they going to make a living?

As we see it a Minister of Agriculture is going to face so great a problem that he cannot possibly attend to anything else. One man trying to hold two portfolios is an impossible situation, and it should be corrected at once.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Nazi forces since August 8 have lost 2,450 bombers and fighters. They had made a one-way trip to England.

Since the deer hunters took to the bush farmers in the area have wisely put into winter quarters everything that walks on four legs.

No matter how impressive the moving picture may be it is bound to be greeted some place with the remark: "Well, this is where we came in."

Premier Bracken of Manitoba favors a non-partisan government, and this rather wise man in the West is blazing a trail along which others could well follow.

London has a supply of 4,000,000 ear plugs to be used during raids, but there is no demand for them. People claim if they wear them they cannot well and intelligently discuss the latest raid.

German freighter well loaded made an attempt to leave a port in Brazil and shortly after ran aground, and that is slightly more comfortable than running into an expectant cruiser.

Two stock salesmen were sent to Reformatory by Magistrate Makins at Goderich because they had sold no-good stuff to people who depended on their savings to see them through. The magistrate's description of the accused was pretty much confined to the few words: "Vermin such as these."

Man at Camden, N.J., has to spend ten days in jail, and he wants to hold his job as well. So he spends two days a week in the coop and will do that for five weeks. When he goes out for a while each week the folk at home will at least have the satisfaction of knowing where he is.

CHANGED

(By A.R.K.)

¶ At school I used to have to learn, just where each boundary line would turn, of nations here and there; I knew the capitals as well, how many folk might therein dwell, I ranked up rather fair.

¶ I knew the names of queens and kings, the trade they did and all such things, the armies that they had; and I could pass my tests with ease, and name the oceans and the seas, when but a little lad.

¶ I knew the places I'd pass through, in going from here to Timbucto, the oceans that I'd cross; the ports at which I'd have to call, so I would neither stop nor stall, of good days have no loss.

¶ And I could draw a map and say, the border line ran just that way, it might look rather queer; just why they didn't all run straight, is something one could never state, they bulged both there and here.

¶ But since then kings and queen have gone, the list today's not very long, the thing's been rearranged; and boundaries that I used to know, I find they are no longer so, for they have been so changed.

¶ So when I look at maps today, I do so in a frightened way, nor walk with clever men; I must forget the things I learned, for they've been badly scorched and burned—and I must start again.

Albanians Are Rough People If They Fight

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

WASHINGTON.—The Greek legation in Washington is considerably depressed by Italy's war move against its small home kingdom.

Chas. P. Stewart

As a Helenic diplomatic attache put it to me, "One Greek soldier is a match for three or four Italians, but if they pile in five or six to one against us, they may make us a deal of trouble."

American military men take it for granted that the Axis will make short work of the little country, possibly with the exception of its coastal fringe, along which they think that Britain's eastern Mediterranean fleet may help it formidably.

To be sure, the Greeks are rated as first rate fighters and the Italians as pretty weak-kneed warriors. However, the Greeks are away outclassed in numbers, and those they have lack much equipment, whereas the Italians are quite well supplied in the latter respect. Furthermore, it's assumed that, even if Dictator Mussolini does need any assistance, Dictator Hitler will provide him with it—and nobody questions the Germans' prowess on the battlefield.

ALBANIA A FACTOR

ALBANIA may prove to be an anti-Axis factor in the equation.

It seems funny that that wee little country should signify in the situation. Yet it's across Albania that the Axis forces have been striving to get into Greece overland, dodging the British fleet's superiority on the water.

Now Italy recently grabbed the Albanion realm, kicking King Zog out into exile. According to Italian accounts the Albanians were glad of it, but other stories are to the effect that they were as mad as hornets, and that, today, they're in a state of anti-Italian insurrection—determined to resist the passage of Axis troops across their territory into Greece.

The Italian version is that the Greeks caught an "Albanian patriot" (a pro-Italian) and chopped his head off. It really happened, probably. But the Greeks' yarn is that the chap wasn't a patriot. The say he was a bandit and that the Albanians were delighted to have his bean amputated.

Anyway, there are reports that Albanians in anti-Italian revolt. Rome denies it, and there's no knowing, due to the censorship.

The rumors sound probable, though. The Albanians are a super liberty-loving people. Their methods of fighting also are decidedly primitive.

In the days before the last world war I was in Turkey, which then was fighting Albania.

The Turks, none too civilized themselves, complained that the Albanians were outright savages. They charged that the Albanian custom, when a Turkish prisoner was captured, was to cut his hands off.

JUST MAKING SURE

THE Albanian high command did not deny the accusation, but it deeply resented its implications.

From Antivari (then their capital) they broadcast their explanation.

"When we take a war prisoner," they pointed out, "we haven't the facilities to intern him. Yet we do not want to turn him loose to go on fighting us. Neither do we want to kill him. That would be barbarous. So we put him on his honor to remain a non-belligerent if we release him. And, to make sure that he keeps his pledge, we cut his hands off."

It's imaginable that Albania may have considered the Greek chopping off of one patriot's head a trifle too drastic.

All the same, that's the sort of bunch the Axis will have to deal with if it tries to fight its way overland into Greece.

Whether or not Italy has Albania completely licked and pacified and satisfied, I don't know, because of the censorship. But if it hasn't, it has a mean little stretch of country to fight its way through to put Greece on the spot.

TINY BABY GROWS UP

Letter in Minneapolis Star Journal

SIR:—In your recent story about the birth of a pound and a half baby, you stated that 20 years ago this baby "certainly never would have lived."

When I was born, 26 years ago, two months prematurely, I weighed one and one-half pounds. The baby which you pictured is about two inches longer than I was. My hands were tiny enough to be concealed under an adult's thumb nail. While the baby in the picture appears to have hair on her head I was entirely bald and was also minus eyelashes and finger nails.

I was born by the light of a kerosene lamp. My incubator consisted of a market basket surrounded by fruit jars filled with hot water. The doctor who officiated is still living in Luverne, as is also the nurse who fed me with a medicine dropper.

• Aiding Grower Makes Us Whine

EDITOR EXAMINER:—Sir,—I agree with the view expressed in your editorial columns, that the wheat problem will not solve itself, and deserves the attention of the best minds in the Dominion. Certainly any attempt to gloss over this grave situation when Parliament meets next week, or any effort to revert to the original intention of a merely "formal" session, will not be in the public interests.

In this readers' opinion, the time is ripe for a full-dress debate on Canadian Agriculture, and a disclosure of the government's long-term agricultural policy. So far as Western Canada is concerned, I assure you that the apparent and woeful lack of leadership in dealing with such issues as farm-storage finance, has already caused a great deal of unnecessary suffering and anxiety among the growers.

Personally, I am very tired of the continuous harping on "the cost to the taxpayers" of governmental assistance during the depression years. A few dollars have, it is true, been passed back to the wheat growers, in an effort to avert total ruin as a result of the synchronizing of drought-depression-self sufficiency over the past decade. So far as I can figure it out (and the official blackout on the data makes the facts obscure), from 1930-1939 the total "governmental assistance," by way of price stabilization for wheat, aggregates under $70,000,000—i.e. in the vicinity of $7,000,000 annually.

As a beneficiary, I am inclined to say "thanks a lot"—but I do protest the eternal "whine" about the "financial burden" of our vital wheat industry. The fact is, that we have come through amazingly well, and, in the light of the following figures, the primary producers have operated pretty well under their own power: "Federal benefit payments to farmers this month (October, 1940) are officially estimated by Washington at $70,000,000"....Toronto Daily Star, Oct. 26.

It may be wholesome for urban Canadians to measure their assistance to this country's chief basic industry (275,000 wheat growers on the Prairies) against the following statement by President Roosevelt on the American rural scene: "Over a million farms have been electrified since 1933....Over six million farmers have received 'benefit payments' of more than $3,500,000,000 in those same years."

• New Ships for Sunken Ships

THE Germans can take little comfort from the ship sinkings admitted by the British Admiralty yesterday. These sinkings totaled 198,030 tons of British, allied and neutral shipping in the week ending Oct. 21—an undeniably heavy toll, the second highest for any week since the war began. The figure approaches the weekly average of April, 1917, Germany's most successful month at sea in the last war, when 881,000 tons of shipping were sent to the bottom with their valuable cargoes. If the sinkings could be maintained at the rate of the current figure, they would be serious in the extreme for the British cause.

But the activity of the U-boats in this war has been sporadic and ineffective. The sinkings dropped from 189,288 tons in the week ending Sept. 22 to a low point of 31,094 a fortnight later. For the four weeks preceding yesterday's figure the average sinkings were 81,496 tons a week, or a little over one-third of the figure for the peak of the 1917 campaign. If Hitler's submarines cannot do better than this in a sustained effort they will not bring Britain to her knees from the lack of supplies.

It happens, moreover, that London's announcement of heavy shipping losses coincided with Italy's attack upon Greece, which made Greece an ally of the British. By this act of aggression the major part of the Greek merchant marine fell into British or Allied hands. This is the ninth largest merchant marine in the world; it consisted on Jan. 1 of 334 ships aggregating more than 1,500,000 tons. Most of this great fleet is now obeying orders to make for British, Dutch, American or American-controlled ports, where the vessels can be used to bring supplies to any part of the British Empire. In other words the British probably have acquired in one day almost ten times as much tonnage as the Germans managed to sink in their second-best week of the war. If this is a victory, let Dr. Goebbels make the most of it.—New York Times.

• Roman Fort Unearthed In England

IN making excavations for air-raid shelters at Carlisle workmen brought to light walls of the great fort at Stanwix, which was by virtue of its strategical position one of the most important fortifications of the Roman Wall. The southwest angle of the fort was found close to the Brampton Road in a footpath of the churchyard. From that point the south wall was traced through the grounds of Stanwix House and the east wall in another garden.

It was possible from these discoveries and others already made to ascertain that the fort occupied a large rectangle with rounded corners, the north of which was formed by Hadrian's Wall. It measured no less than 700 feet by 500 feet, some 300 feet broader than any other fort on the line of the wall. It is assumed from these large dimensions that it was occupied by a Military Ala, a cavalry regiment 1,000 strong. It has long been known that one of the most famous of these was near the west end of Hadrian's Wall.

So our burrowings for shelter in the present war link up with the very different military preparations of a remote age. Should any part of these air-raid shelters persist into the equally remote future, what will the antiquarians of those days make of them?—Manchester Guardian.

• Plight of 369 Aliens In New York

THREE hundred and sixty-nine aliens, who had been employed in the foreign concessions at the New York World's Fair are in a bad spot. When they came to America they did so on the understanding, in fact under a legal obligation, to return to the countries of their origin within thirty days after the exposition closed. That arrangement was made before the war changed the situation in Europe, now many of them cannot comply with this obligation without bodily peril to themselves, even though it were possible for them to get home through the fighting lines. A Czech, a Pole or a Frenchman may no longer have a home. If he has one, he may yet be rightly reluctant to submit himself to the Nazi tyranny.

There is one chance of escape; but it is bound up in red tape. On Oct. 7 Representative John J. Delaney of New York introduced a bill in Congress authorizing permission to such aliens to remain in this country and be counted as part of the regular immigration quota. The bill has not been acted upon by the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, to which it was referred. Once the red tape is unraveled these men will know their fate, which assuredly will be that they can stay in a country that really owes them such hospitality.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE BURMA ROAD

IT MIGHT, at first thought, seem too bad to write specifically about the Burma Road, because to do so must inevitably rob the subject of much of the romantic suggestion interwoven with its name. But as it has been done for the November number of the National Geographic Magazine, the writing, with accompanying pictures, adds at least as much as it takes away.

In a sense it adds even more, since what it takes away is the result of your own imaginings, stimulated by an unforgettable phrase, and what it adds is a lively clarification of the strategic importance of the road, together with the story of its construction.

The authors made two trips over the road, one before it was finished and one in the rain season, when they found a great maintenance crew was needed to keep it free of sliding mud and boulders. They report that one of the more difficult links of the highway, 307 miles long, was built in nine months by 200,000 Chinese. Getting food to that army must itself have been no small job.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Latest Rubber Conductor Of Electricity

CHICAGO, Nov. 6 (AP).—A new kind of rubber that conducts electricity instead of insulating against it was shown to the American College of Surgeons today as a likely means of preventing explosions of anesthetics during surgery.

The rubber is real, acts and wears like normal rubber, but contains a compound which enables electricity to flow through it readily.

Explosions of anesthetic gases during surgery are uncommon, but feared because it has been difficult to prevent them completely and because they are likely to occur in a patient's lungs, with fatal results. Their cause is static electricity, the kind that sparks off a person's fingers, and is the reason auto highway toll stations have a wire sticking up from the pavement to draw the static off from the halted car.

In case of the car, the rubber tires, by insulating the vehicle, are the main cause of static building up on the auto body and the passengers.

The electric-conducting rubber works exactly the opposite. The surgeons were shown hardened, conducting castors for operating tables and other surgical room rolling furniture.

It was explained that the rubber is designed for use not only for "feet" for the furniture where static tends to build up, but for surgeons and nurses shoes, for the tubes which carry anesthetic gases to the patient's mask and any place where it is desirable for safety's sake to draw off electricity.

Titanic's Hero Dies In England

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Nov. 6—(CP).—Sir Arthur Henry Rostron, 71, retired Commodore of the Cunard Line and captain of the Carpathia when she saved more than 700 survivors of the sunken Titanic in 1912, died yesterday of pneumonia at Chippenham hospital.

Capt. Rostron had been credited with saving more lives than any other living ship commander, and was acclaimed throughout the world after his rescue of the Titanic survivors from the icy North Atlantic.

He received a gold medal from the United States Congress.

He retired in 1931 after 36 years with the Cunard Line and almost half a century at sea. His most famous commands were as captain of the liner Berengaria, which he left at his retirement.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER THREE

THE RESTAURANT seemed unbelievably warm and cozy to Lona after her lonely vigil on the park bench. By the time she had finished her second cup of coffee—blessed coffee!—she found herself pouring out to this utter stranger who had befriended her things she hadn't mentioned to a soul since she came to the city almost seven years ago.

Something about him seemed to invite confidence. Perhaps it was the stimulus of the meal he had just bought her—her first real meal in two days! Or perhaps it was the fact that his brown eyes kept reminding her of Tiny, the spaniel, and of her old life.

Funny to keep comparing this good-looking young man to a dog, but she couldn't help it. There was in his eyes the same sympathy, the same yearning she had often seen in Tiny's. And, after all, Tiny had loved her, and she had loved him. Talking to this stranger was, somehow, like talking to Tiny. He seemed to understand without asking any questions. She even found herself telling him about—her father.

"It was daddy who named me Lona." She laughed a little ruefully. "I've often thought in the last years that he must have known, even then, how it would fit."

"It's a pretty name," he said, gravely. "And it does fit you, somehow. You seem such a—lonely little girl."

"It's not only now," she went on. "It was that way back home after my mother died, and father—you see, my father's—not dead. He didn't leave me that way. He—they sent him away."

Somehow the words seemed to be wrung from her. The sympathy in the brown eyes seemed to be drawing them out. "He—my father killed a man."

The eyes narrowed at that, and she saw the hand that was taking a cigaret from his pocket pause, and grip itself into a hard, white fist. A sense of disappointment filled her. Was he going to be like all the rest? It came to her, then, just why she had felt impelled to tell him all about it. She had been hoping . . .

"They sent him to the penitentiary—for life," she brought out slowly.

"The poor devil." He looked away from her and she saw that his hands trembled. A drawn look came into his lean face and for a second he seemed years older than she had thought.

"It was my fault," she went on, when he did not speak again. "The man—insulted me, and I told my father. I never thought he'd kill him. He was so gentle, father was. I've always blamed myself—"

"Don't, girl!" The brown eyes were oddly pleading. "I don't like to hear you talking about such things. A—kid like you! I had a friend once who—died in the pen," he explained. "I—know a few things."

Lona's heart warmed to him anew. Usually when people found out about her they looked at her in a sort of curious horror. But in spite of his first hesitation, he seemed to have only sympathy. Across the white-topped restaurant table she studied his lean face. It was browned and sun burned as if he worked in the wind and sun. He was good looking in a rugged sort of way. His features, taken separately, were not handsome; a big nose, a curving, sensitive mouth, and a jaw that would have been square but for its almost painful leanness. But taken as a whole, with the wistful brown eyes to set it off, it was an attractive face.

"Well, what's the verdict?" he asked with a whimsical little half smile when she had studied him for a long moment.

"I was just thinking that I had told you all about myself, and I don't even know your name."

"Claridge. Jim Claridge's my name." He bowed, and snipped the ashes from his cigaret into the heavy white ash tray. "I'm twenty-nine years old. Be thirty my next birthday. I've only been in this man's town for three days, and I'll probably leave it again within three months. I'm a structural iron worker. My firm has the job on the new terminal building down by the square.

"I was born on a ranch in California, and was raised out west. I've worked, so far, in twenty-six different cities in these United States. Will probably see twenty-six more before I'm through. I haven't any relatives, and nobody to support but myself. And so I make a hobby of picking up girls from park benches and seeing that they're taken care of until they can find work." He hunted in his pocket as he spoke, and pulling out a bill, put it into Lona's hand as it lay on the table.

For a moment she stared at it. Then she looked up at him. "Oh, no!" she cried out. "You mustn't! I can't take this. Why, I never saw you until tonight. I can't take—money, from you."

"What are you going to do?" He shrugged. "You can't go back to the park. There's a decent looking hotel a couple of blocks down the street. I'll see that you get a room for the night. Tomorrow you can start hunting a new boarding house, unless you'd rather I went to the hotel, and you to your old room at Mrs. Peterman's."

"I couldn't go back there!" Lona shuddered. "I never want to see that woman again!"

"I thought you'd feel that way. It's the hotel, then." He picked up her suitcase matter-of-factly, and before she quite knew what was happening, Lona found herself out in the street, his hand on her arm, the bill he had given her still clutched in her hand.

A protest rose to his lips again as he led her into the hotel lobby and up to the desk. "I shouldn't let you," she said weakly. "It's not right. I shouldn't let you do it!"

But when he pushed the pen into her hand, she found herself signing the register, conscious of the curious eyes of the clerk going from one to the other. A little lump came to her throat and she swallowed. It was so nice to be cared for! Nobody had done anything for her since her father—went away. It was so good just to shut her eyes and let things happen!

"I'll pay you back," she told him, huskily. "As soon as I get a job. I never thought anybody could be so good."

"Listen, girl." He looked down at her, and in the brown eyes there was a tenderness that almost shamed her. "I lied when I said I didn't have any folks," he said, oddly. "I have. I've got a sister. She's just about your age. And I think she must look something like you do. I haven't seen her for years, but you make me think of her. I'd hate to have her wandering in the park without any money. Do you see?"

"I—see. And I'll pay you back. I'll get a job soon, tomorrow maybe. I have to get a job soon!" She seemed to be trying to convince herself as well as him.

"Of course you'll get a job," he assured her. "A girl like you can always find a job."

"I'd scrub floors, anything—anything!" she burst out. "There just doesn't seem to be anything."

"I'll keep my eyes open," he told her. "If I hear of anything I'll call you. And what do you say you meet me tomorrow night and report progress? I'd sort of like company for dinner." He grinned suddenly, and held out his hand.

Solemnly Lona took it. And in spite of her efforts to control them, the quick tears came again at his touch.

"What's the matter, girl?" he asked. "Is it that you don't trust me? Don't you think I'm on the level? If you're afraid of me, I'll clear out, and you won't ever have to see me again. Is that what you want?"

"Oh, no, No!" Lona's voice rose sharply. "It's not that. I'll meet you tomorrow night or any other time you want to see me. It's just that you're so—so good. I didn't think there was anyone like you left in the world, anywhere!"

Five U-Boats Sent To Bottom

LONDON, Nov. 6 — (CP). — Destruction of at least five enemy submarines within the past few days was reported to-day.

Prime Minister Churchill announced in the House of Commons that two German U-boats had been sunk in the Western Approaches. One of them was the submarine which torpedoed the Empress of Britain after aircraft had set the liner afire.

A Reuters dispatch from Tangier, international zone of Morocco, quoted a reliable source to the effect that three Italian submarines had been sunk in the Strait of Gibraltar.

(The Italians admitted Sunday that two of their submarines had not "returned to their base." It was not clear whether this pair is included in the trio reported sunk from Tangier.)

WESTERN CANADA CONTRIBUTES HEAVILY TO EASTERN HOCKEY

Gord. Monkman Again Heads Whitaker's Club

The annual meeting of the Whitaker Cricket Club was held at the company's office on Hunter street with Mr. Gordon Monkman in the chair and the following members present: J. Wild, A. Radford, W. A. Brown, C. A. Farnham, J. Bolton, K. Hanbidge, J. Wheater, G. Colbran, W. Scott, G. Haig, F. C. Roberts, J. Hawthorne, F. Smith, P. Dyer, J. Drummond, E. Bentham, A. O. Phillips, F. Dyer and D. Bailey.

Reports of the various club activities were received and approved. It had been a difficult season—the captain, J. Wild, had been almost continually out of the team owing to being away in the west on business for the firm—and Lieut. Archie Hamilton's services in the Highlanders Active Service battalion had deprived them of their vice-captain, and other players had been unable to get off owing to war work and this state of affairs is likely to be existent next season. However by a system of co-operation with the Peterborough Club, whereby an alternate schedule of matches should be arranged, and there should be mutual assistance where needed, it was felt that the club could carry on successfully next season. The meeting endorsed the principle of the procedure.

Other business was of a routine nature and a successful meeting closed with votes of thanks to the city for the use of Nicholls Oval, to the club official and to the press. The season's results and averages have already appeared in The Examiner. The following is the full executive for the coming year:

Hon. presidents, Messrs. G. Whitaker, J.P., A. P. Whiteley and R. R. Whitaker; president, Gordon Monkman; vice presidents, C. V. Elliott, C. A. Farnham and J. T. Hornsby; captain, J. Hawthorne; vice-captain, F. Smith; secretary-treasurer, A. H. Radford; entertainment, F. C. Roberts; grounds and equipment, F. Smith and K. Hanbidge; transportation, G. Haig and P. Dyer; auditors, W. A. Brown and J. Bolton; umpire, F. C. Roberts.

Of these Messrs. G. Monkman and A. H. Radford have held their offices since the club was founded in 1933. J. Wild has been captain for the same period, but was forced to resign this year owing to business calls. Archie Hamilton, too, had long service as vice-captain and it seems strange to see a Whitaker committee without these familiar names.

A letter from the Department of Education was received re grants.

The report of the finance committee recommended payment of the following accounts: Dawson Subscription Service, Magazine, $3.50; George Charlton, rent, land, $16.00; Edward Hanrahan, fertilizer, $7.50; Total $26.00.

Three Argo Men With R.C.A.F. Due To Move On

(By the Canadian Press.)

Toronto Argonauts may be the most unpredictable team in Eastern Canada, but despite the fact they hit the heights one week and the depths another week, Coach Lew Hayman is standing by a prediction made early this season, that the team will win the Canadian championship.

Hayman says he hasn't changed his mind though Argonauts lost 5-0 last Saturday to Tigers in a Big Four game after defeating Ottawa Rough Riders by a close margin the week before. The victory over the Riders ranks as the most startling upset of the Eastern football season, because the Riders had taken the measure of the Argonauts 41-6 in their first meeting one Saturday earlier.

One thing liable to have an effect on chances of Hayman's prediction coming true is that the Argos are in danger of losing three top-notch men to the Royal Canadian Air Force. Halfback Doug Annan and Lineman George Sprague and Chuck McLean have completed their training at the No. 1 Initial Training School in Toronto and may be shifted out of the city shortly.

Argos went through one of their stiffest drills of the season last night in preparation for their windup game of the schedule against Montreal. A victory over the Montrealers who have won only one game in five, would assure Argonauts of a playoff spot against Riders.

At the Ottawa drill last night, members of the team selected Halfback Andy Tommy and Outside Tony McCarthy as nominees for the 1940 award of the Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy. The trophy is awarded annually to the player judged most sportsmanlike and most valuable to his team in the Big Four.

Riders' drill was marked by the turnout of Tony Golab, who suffered a severe back injury a couple of weeks ago and was not expected to play again this season. Golab jogged around the field a few times and Trainer George Kinross said he would be fit in the playoffs.

Fraser Trophy Taken By Margaret Tunney

CENTRETON, Nov. 6—(ENS). — Margaret Tunney of Grafton Separate School won first prize and the Fraser Trophy at the speaking contest held in Centreton United CHurch on Monday night.

The winner's speech was on "The Lady of the Lamp, Florence Nightingale," which was well delivered. Margaret is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Tunney.

Marianne Rutherford of S.S. No. 6 and 7 came second, and chose as her subject, "France and Mary Ann," two dolls given the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose by the French children. Marianne is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Rutherford.

Margaret Rutherford of S.S. No. 9 captured the third place for her speech, "The Barom House at Grafton." She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie Rutherford.

There were 13 speakers—10 girls and 3 boys. Other subjects were: "Pioneer Days," "Long, Long Ago," "Radio News," "The Canadian Red Cross," "The Red Squirrel," "My Visit to the Exhibition," "Winston Churchill," "Our Canadian Forests."

Choruses were sung by Centreton S.S. No. 18, Millvalley S.S. No. 12, and S.S. No. 9 and 20, under the direction of the music teacher, Miss Ina Rosevear.

The president, R. B. Dawson, was present along with the township clerk, MacKenzie Rutherford.

Mr. Harmon Hopes To Be a Husing

Harmon is shown with Ted Husing, well-known sports announcer, at Ann Arbor on the occasion of a Husing broadcast from the Michigan stadium.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough hockey club, players and fans next Monday night, November 11, in the Chamber of Commerce and it is to be hoped there will be a real turnout of hockey enthusiasts at this gathering. Plans for the season will be thorough discussed and out of the meeting will come, it is confidently expected, an impetus that will carry Peterborough teams far along the hockey trails this winter. Complete success crowned last season's campaign of the intermediate A squad who not only captured the Ontario title but went on to grab off the Eastern Canada championship, the first time a Peterborough hockey club had ever won a title outside the confines of the Ontario Hockey Association. With the inspiration of that fine effort to spur every one on this winter, this could be made quite a season.

* * * * * *

Prospects for the intermediate squad are good with Harding, Ellis, Burton, Gardner, Tompkins, Kingdon, Starr, Heal, Jack Jopling and Blewett of last winter's championship outfit still available. Juniors are not in as good shape for the age limit has caught up to a number of last season's players but enough of them are left to form a nucleus for this year's club and there is this about junior players. It is impossible to foretell sometimes how much a kid will advance in a year. He not only gets bigger and heavier but sometimes he gets smarter as well and then he is promising material. At all events every effort should be made to give as many youngsters as possible a chance to get into organized hockey. We do not want a situation such as exists here in amateur baseball with the source of supply about completely dried up.

* * * * * *

The spread of interest in juvenile hockey is a development that is worth cheering for and supporting. In a number of towns where little has been done up to this season, plans are under way for the organization of a juvenile club. Port Hope, for example, reports that a group there is backing a juvenile team with the hope of forming a lakeshore juvenile league, including Bowmanville, Cobourg, Port Hope and other nearby places. That is getting down to the proper kind of system. It gets hold of young players before they reach the junior age and ensures them coaching at a time when instruction should do the most good. It also gives the kids a chance to play organized hockey on proper rinks long before they used to get that kind of training. Juvenile hockey, properly handled and developed here, would be a decided asset from a sport viewpoint.

* * * * * *

Soon the annual farce of having sports writers all over the country name an all-star football club will be in full swing again. If all the scribes could see all the players in action the thing would not be so bad but many of them vote without having had a chance of seeing some of the stars perform. Under such a system there is nothing scientific about the selection. A few spectacular plays that earn a player headlines gives him a much better chance of getting all-star rating than the much-more-valuable performer who goes along game after game playing steady, smart and sure football without breaking into the big type in the Monday papers. However, picking such teams is harmless amusement, so long as it is not taken too seriously and this column will probably have a shy at it later on, without of course worrying very much whether our selections make the first team or not.

* * * * * *

Just as there will always be an England there will also always be cricket. Peterborough's two clubs have had a difficult season owing to enlistment and the pressure of war work but they carried on nevertheless and they are determined to carry on again next season as well. The Whitaker Cricket Club held its annual meeting Monday night and the unanimous decision was to proceed with the game in 1941. There may be difficulties in the way but executive and players, in the true British spirit are prepared to face the obstacles and keep cricket going if not as usual, at least in circulation. Gordon Monkman who has led the club as president since it was organized in 1933 will again be at the helm and A. H. Radford whose services as secretary has been equally as long, has been once more elected to the post.

* * * * * *

The Van Horne Memorial Cup series played in Kingston at the beginning of each hockey season affords a valuable testing grounds for clubs in that part of the province. This year for example the Perth-Smiths Falls Combines propose to enter a team in the Kingston competition to get a little pre-season training. Down in Belleville the management of the Belleville juniors has been discussing a proposition to enter the kids in the Van Horne series not with any hope of winning the championship but merely to try out material. The only concession the Belleville youngsters would ask would be to be allowed to carry as many players on their roster as they wish. The idea is Coach Holway wants to look over a lot of young material coming up from juvenile clubs and he knows he can get a better slant on the youngsters if he sees them in action in organized games.

* * * * * *

For the second time in five years Hank Greenberg has earned the award of being the most valuable player in the American loop and few fans would rise up to say that the Detroit powerhouse hasn't richly earned the title by his consistent work during the past season. Switched to left field after playing for years at first base Greenberg accepted the move as for the good of the Detroit Club and set himself to the task of learning how to play the outfield. He succeeded so well that his fielding ranked him among the best of the gardeners while at the same time he continued to bash that old apple to the tune of 41 home runs and 150 runs driven in and was a constant menace to opposing pitchers every time he strode out to the plate. No one will begrudge Greenberg the honor that has been accorded him.

* * * * * *

The Detroit fielder had seventy votes margin over his nearest opponent in deciding the award. Bobby Feller of Cleveland was the second choice and earned it by his great pitching which kept Cleveland in the hunt until the last few games. Others who figured high in the voting were Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper, Buck Newsom, Detroit veteran pitcher, Lou Boudreau, Cleveland infielder and Jimmy Foxx of the Boston Red Sox and it does not require much imagination to see why these names should appear in a list of that kind. All of them have helped their clubs mightily during the past season.

* * * * * *

The complaint in this column a few days ago that the N.H.L. clubs started the season half-trained and worked themselves into shape at the expense of the cash customers would seem to be justified by the showing so far of the Boston Bruins who certainly would seem to be far away from their usual form at present. They could not do more than a 1-1 tie against Dick Irvin's rookie Canadiens Sunday night and last night they looked even worse when the Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior League held them to a 2-2 tie in an exhibition game. No one would seriously contend that either the Canadiens or the Ottawa crowd are a match for Art Ross' powerful club when it is going right. The only other answer is that the Bruins are not yet in condition and the machine has not begun to roll.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—The exodus of hockey players from western Canada to the east had assumed major proportions this year and no fewer than four of Les Canadiens' rookies hail from somewhere between the Prairies and the Pacific Coast.

Even in the coaching and business end of Montreal National League club there is a distinct western touch. There is Dick Irvin, the pigeon king from Regina as coach, and Frank Patrick, one of the Vancouver Patricks in the role of business manager, talent scout and trouble shooter.

Great things are expected by the Canucks from the western contributions. They're banking heavily on young Ken Reardon of Edmonton, who is still young enough to play junior hockey if he so chooses—but doesn't.

From Moose Jaw comes Elmer Lach, who, as Coach Irvin puts it, "is always where he should be. We expect great things from him." Lach is centreman and will have to step lively to keep up with such able vets as Paul Haynes and Murph Chamberlain.

Moving westward, we come to Vancouver which is ably represented on the Canadien roster by Jack Adams of Vancouver Lions. A ripsnorting young left winger, he is being counted on to supply a lot of that scoring punch Irvin and Patrick expect from their youthful charges.

From Trail, the smelter town, up in the interior of British Columbia, hails Joe Benoit, who played for the Trail Smokeaters, who toured Europe two years ago. He will patrol the right flank for the Canucks.

A couple of other coast products, Lorin Mercer and Morrie Rimstad, who came east with Jack Adams, worked out with Canadiens in the pre-season tune-up period and showed enough stuff to be farmed out to New Haven Eagles, the Canadien farm team in the American League. They may yet wind up with the Canucks before the end of the current season.

GREENBERG IS MOST VALUABLE PLAYER IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

Had Great Year In Outfield For The Tigers

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(AP).—Henry Greenberg, Detroit outfielder and home-run specialist, is the American Baseball League's "most valuable player" for the second time in six years.

After seven years at first base for the Tigers, Greenberg moved to the outfield "for the good of the team" and experienced one of his brightest seasons, leading the league in home runs and runs batted in. He hit 41 homers and drove in 150 runs. He received the award first in 1935.

A 24-man committee, representing the Baseball Writers' Association of America, gave the 29-year-old Greenberg 292 points in the annual poll for the award. Bob Feller, Cleveland's young pitcher, trailed the Tiger star with 222 points.

Joe DiMaggio, New York star who led the circuit in batting for the second straight season, fell to third place in the voting after winning the award in 1939. DiMaggio received 151 points.

Buck Newsom of Detroit was fourth and Lou Boudreau of Cleveland was fifth with 120 and 119 points, respectively. Jimmy Foxx, Boston first baseman, drew 110 points.

Schoolboy Rowe of Detroit saved seventh place with 82 points, followed by his team-mate, Rudy York, 61; Rip Radcliff, St. Louis, 55; Luke Appling, Chicago, 54; Roy Weatherly, Cleveland, 34; Dick Bartell, Detroit, 26; Joe Kuhel, Chicago, 18; Sid Hudson, Washington, and Ted Williams, Boston, 16 each; Barney McCosky, Detroit, 11; Ernie Bonham, New York, 8; and Walt Judnich, St. Louis, 6.

Melbourne Cup Is Captured By 100-1 Shot

MELBOURNE, Nov. 6.—Old Rowley, aged chestnut gelding owned by Jack Scully, well-known Sydney trainer, and ridden by Jockey A. Knox, another turf veteran, was a 100 to 1 shot winner of the Melbourne Cup yesterday. The gelding won by three-quarters of a length from Maikai who ran second in 1939, with Tidal Wave a neck away, third.

Old Rowley, like Maikai has long been unsound. The horse will shortly be pensioned. It was a real cup finish as a furlong and a half from the post half a dozen horses had a chance. Old Rowley swept down on the leaders and dumbfounded a crowd of 100,000 by winning.

The favorite, Beauvite, whose owner, R. Stewart, lately declined an American syndicate's offer of £10,000 (approximately $45,000), started at 6 to 4. Beauvite lost position at the five-furlong pole and finished a close fourth.

The time of 3 minutes 26 seconds was fast, but did not compare with the best cup times. Overnight rain made the going heavy. Old Rowley's success gave the bookmakers one of the richest Melbourne Cup harvests recorded here in years. One Sydney racing man took £1,500 on the winner at the start.

Rough Pass Wins Riggs Handicap

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 6 — (AP). — J. Y. (Yancey) Christmas' Rough Pass, purchased out of the Maryland Sales as a yearling for a paltry $276, electrified an election day throng of more than 12,000 here on Tuesday afternoon when he won the 15th Riggs Handicap by three lengths, and returned $76.80 for a two-dollar ticket. Unable to score in sixteen previous trips to the post this year, and scratched out of yesterday's easier fourth race to go in the rich Riggs, the little brown three-year-old led nine smart rivals for the entire mile and three-sixteenths under aprentice Johnny Harrell.

The Shandon Stable's Burning Star, last in the early stages, ran a remarkable race to earn the place by a half length over T. M. G. Keene's filly War Beauty. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, the top-weight under 126 pounds, was daylight behind in fourth place. Get Off, a slight choice over Foxbrough and Hash, was a never-threatening seventh. Foxbrough stopped to fifth place.

Rough Pass, which carried only 105 pounds, took down a purse of $10,725. He was timed in 1.59 3-5.

Bob Davidson Is Ideal Team Player

By DICK SHERIDAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 6 — (CP). — He's seldom in the headlines, so there's no time like the present to give a boost to Robert (Bob) Davidson whose durable limbs are finally beginning to creak. With the National Hockey League season barely begun, the rugged left winger of the Toronto Leafs is already on the shelf. However, it is believed he will be there only temporarily.

Rugged Robert, who has skated miles up and down the left wing patrol during his seven years with the Leafs, came to an abrupt halt when his knee gave out during last Monday's practice. He was ordered to rest up for the remainder of the week in he hope he'll be ready for Saturday's game with Detroit Red Wings.

Silent partner of the Leafs' famous D-A-D line, Davidson is the cover-up guy for his more famous teammates—Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon. The goals he has saved by his backchecking equal if not eclipse those scored by his pals.

Always in condition and ever willing, Davidson is the ideal team player that every manager cherishes. Manager Conn Smythe, watching his tireless skating in a recent drill, remarked: "I never have to worry about Bobbie. He's always in there when the going is the toughest."

Born In Toronto

Davidson, Toronto-born, has played all his hockey in the city of his birth. He graduated from Marlboro seniors to pro ranks in 1933. Twenty-eight years of age, he scales around 175 pounds.

Never a prolific scorer, he was at his best last season when he counted eight goals and aided in 17 others. In the 1937-38 campaign he was credited with three goals and 17 assists. That was the year Drillon and Apps place one-two among the league marksmen with the astounding total of 52 and 50, respectively.

What Davidson lacks in color he makes up in honestly of purpose and year after year he is assigned the thankless task of killing off penalties. Smythe realizing his worth has never been known to consider placing him on the auction block during his long service with the Leafs. With the retirement of Red Horner last spring, Davidson became the veteran of the club with the most years of service.

The left winger's injury, while minor in nature, seems to indicate the D-A-D line has other forces to contend with as it seeks to regain recognition as the best three-some in hockey. Drillon and Apps were hurt in succession last season. The line was eventually reformed but its sting was missing.

On the basis of Bob's loyal work, there's another Davidson on the way up who has been tagged by the Leafs. Alex Davidson, a defence freshman with Marlboro seniors, is just waiting for the call to join his brother on the Leafs' lineup.

McCarthy and Tommy Named by Ottawa

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP).—Ottawa Rough Riders last night selected their speedy halfback, Andy Tommy and outside, Tony McCarthy, as nominees for the 1940 award of the Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy.

The trophy is awarded annually to the player judged most sportmanlike and most valuable to his Interprovincial Rugby Football Union team.

Good news for the football faithful was the appearance of Tony Golab, who suffered a severe back injury three weeks ago and was expected to be out for the season. Golab circled the track three times and Trainer George Kinross pronounced him fit to play in the first game of the playoffs a week from Saturday.

Golab and Bob Hazel will be the only absentees when Riders line up against the improved Hamilton Tigers this week. Hazel received a call from the Royal Canadian Air Force and will go to Toronto Friday or Saturday.

Several Ottawa players are nursing minor hurts, but all will be able to play this Saturday. Andy Tommy suffered a nose fracture against Montreal, Sammy Sward came out of the game with a mild charley horse, and Curly Moynahan has an infected leg.

Apples Sold Fast

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 6—(ENS)—Members of St. John's Boys' Brigade sold three barrels of Mackintosh Reds on their annual apple day held here Saturday. The group which is under the leadership of Rev. G. N. Maxwell, was most enthusiastic about their campaign proceeds, part of which will be sent to the Brigade Patriotic Fund and the remainder to be used for local supplies. A final checking up showed the eighteen boys who spent the day selling had taken in a total of $68.00, of which only eight dollars expenses was deducted, leaving a clear profit of $56.00, or slightly better than double what they collected in 1939.

Maritimes Have Strong Team

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 6 (CP).—The Maritimes are making their strongest challenge for the Allan Cup this season since the palmy days of 1935, when Halifax Wolverines brought the senior Canadian amateur championship to the Atlantic coast for the third straight year.

The Maritime scouts and business managers have roamed far to line up the talent for the three-team Cape Breton League. Not since the famous Moncton Hawks ruled the seniors for two seasons prior to the Halifax triumph has the east gathered such a collection.

It might be better at this moment to say that the team managers hope they have collected the talent. There are a few clouds on the horizon, such as the inevitable arguments with other clubs about who signed whom, and the possibility that the lure of a professional contract may prove stronger than the call to action in the east.

The final set-up of the Cape Breton league will not be known until the National Hockey League clubs have settled on their 1940-41 rosters. For instance, Sydney Millionaires have the ace duo of Johnny McCreedy and Dick Kowcinak ready to play for them if Toronto Maple Leafs don't pluck them off the amateur branches. The two flashy forwards starred for Kirkland Lake's Allan Cup champions last season.

Some Good Players

Mindful of that and of the fact championships have a habit of following the McCreedy - Kowcinak combination, the Millionaires coaxed them into their fold this year.

Sydney has lost Tony Graboski, who led the league in scoring last year, to Montreal Canadiens. Glace Bay miners signed up Bill Judza, Winnipeg star, only to discover he had decided to go instead with Philadelphia Ramblers. The Miners were thrown for another loss when the Westmount Canadiens were given rights to Les Ramsay, a player sought by Glace Bay.

Unless Sydney loses McCreedy and Kowcinak, however, these losses will be accepted as the fortunes of war and the teams will be more or less satisfied to start the 66-game schedule with those already at hand. If Sydney loses the duo, it will hurt — decidedly.

Of last year's team, Sydney kept goalie Bill Dickie, Remi Van Daele, Ray Powell, Jack Fritz, Jack Atchison and Bud McEachern along with Coach Bill Gill. Besides Snowdon, McCreedy and Kowcinak, they have signed or claim Steve Latoski, last year with Ottawa, Bill McGregor, Winnipeg; Ray Mullins, Valleyfield; and Bill Hannon, last season with North Sydney. They probably have others as well but no team as yet has shown its hand fully.

Veterans And Others

Glace Bay Miners scrapped all but Hal McBride, Boots Bair, Matt Kelly and Irving McGibbon and picked up Jimmy Foster — on two Allan Cup winners with Moncton Hawks—as goalie, Irving Mackie, Quebec; Jim Dewey, Sudbury; George Newbolt, Sudbury; Moe White, Verdun; Alex Archer, Winnipeg; and Vic Hanneberry, South Porcupine, Ont. in addition to playing coach Jo-Jo Graboski, said to be even better than his brother Tony.

TO MEET IN GALT

WELLAND.—(CP)—Annual meeting of the Ontario Rural Hockey Association will be held in Galt Nov. 26, Horace D. Ovenden, secretary, announced today.

He said all proposed amendments to the constitution must be in his hands two weeks before the meeting. Mr. Ovenden said there are indications of a banner season and that the number of applications for affiliation to date exceed those of any previous season.

Quarterback Of Blue Bombers Is Awarded McKinney Trophy

CALGARY, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Greg (Hardrock) Kabat, quarterback of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, has been awarded the McKinney Trophy as the most valuable player to his team in the Western Interprovincial Football Union this season.

Announcement of the award was made last night by Johnny Thompson, president of the league, following compilation of votes cast by sports writers, players and coaches of teams in the three conference cities—Calgary, Winnipeg and Regina.

Running second to Kabat in the poll were Bob Cosgrove, Calgary centre, and Art Stevenson, triple-threat Bomber backfield star.

Four other players figured in the vote. Jimmy Gilkes and Joe Turner, fleet Calgary backfielders, were rated on par with Gordon Celhaye, Calgary's giant lineman, and Toar Springstein, husky line player who handles kicking assignments for the Regina Rough Riders.

Winning of the trophy climaxes a great career for Kabat, who has been an outstanding figure in Western Canada football since coming to the Winnipeg club in 1933 from Wisconsin University. A fine field general and one of the greatest place-kickers in the league, Kabat also has proved himself a great secondary defense player.

He was chosen quarterback this fall on The Canadian Press Western Conference all-star team after picking up 17 points throughout the regular schedule to gain a third-place tie in the individual scoring column.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6 (AP)—At 9 a.m. (EDT) with returns far from complete, Roosevelt was leading in 37 states having a total electoral vote of 437; as follows:—

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming.

(Swiss cities underwent long air raid alarms during the night, some lasting as long as 90 minutes. Such alarms are generally indications that the Royal Air Force is bombing military objectives in Northern Italy.)

The attacks on Britain apparently were carried out by lone planes—mostly light bombers—and at no time developed into major proportions, the ministries of air and home security said. Casualties were reported few, but they included some fatalities.

Blackouts at 6 P.M.

London's blackouts now beging at 6 p.m. British Summer Time (1 p.m. EDT) and last until 7:30 a.m. Next week they will be lengthened to almost 14 hours and by the week of Dec. 8 the city will be in darkness for more than 15 hours each night, with blackouts starting at 5:20 p.m. and lasting until 8:30 a.m. Within a couple of weeks thereafter they will begin to shorten again as the second winter of the war begins to wane.

The air ministry said that in yesterday's raids the enemy lost seven aircraft while six British fighters were shot down. The pilots of three R.A.F. craft were saved.

Indications that the war at sea might assume a more lively phase was given yesterday in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Churchill who remarked that during the last few weeks during which the British and Allied ship losses have been heavier than usual the patrols had been at their lowest ebb due to demands on the Royal Navy in other spheres.

The Prime Minister added significantly that the 50 over-age destroyers acquired from the United States in return for naval bases in British western hemisphere possessions were coming into service.

He drew attention also to difficulties encouitered by the Royal Navy in refusal of Eire to allow British naval vessels to refuel or be serviced at Eire ports and provoked a lively discussion in which some members suggested Eire was acting high-handedly, since she was still a member of the British Commonwealth, depended on Britain for help in case of attack and enjoyed the benefits of preferential trade with the Empire.

much larger than that of 1936 and apparently had carried 11 states whereas in 1936 Alf M. Landon, his predecessor as Republican standard bearer, obtained majorities in only two.

Willkie and his supporters hammered vigorously throughout upon the theme that a departure from the no-third-term tradition would mean a step toward perpetuation of one-man rule.

But Americans apparently accepted President Roosevelt's promise that the third term would be his last and agreed to his plea that he be given a "vote of confidence" and a mandate to guide the nation through the pitfalls of war in Europe and Asia.

Democrats Win More Seats

In returning the New Deal to Washington, the voters possibly gave it more power than heretofore. Late reports indicated the Democrats had won additional seats in the House of Representatives and the Senate.

With more than half of the 435 House contests decided the Democrats had a net gain of six. Eight Democrats and four Republicans were conceded election to the Senate last night—where a Democratic majority was certain owing to holdovers and uncontested seats—but close Senatorial races developed in half a dozen states.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Mr. Willkie's Vice-Presidential running mate, conceded defeat and in a message of congratulation to Mr. Roosevelt and his running mate, Henry A. Wallace, wished them well and added: "We are a united nation . . . we shall try to afford Mr. Roosevelt and his associates a worthy and vigilant opposition. Today's trend indicates a victory for our principles four years hence."

The President happily told hundreds of neighbors who called upon him at midnight at his home at Hyde Park, N.Y., that the vote "looks all right." He had followed the results closely on charts set up on his big dining-room table.

Wallace was in Washington. He expressed gratification at the trend of voting but appeared a bit disappointed that his home state of Iowa moved into the Willkie column and gave signs of sticking there.

Republican States Scattered

The Republican candidate did not establish a lead in any particular section of the nation. The 11 states in his column were scattered widely from Maine to Colorado. They were Colorado, Iowa, his native state of Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, North Dakota, South Dakota and Vermont.

It was noted that not one of these, with the possible exception of Michigan, was a state where John L. Lewis' Congress of Industrial Organizations would have a predominant voice.

Consequently Mr. Lewis was considered to have failed in his effort to lead the C.I.O. unions away from the president, and his resignation from the leadership of the union group, promised in an election speech in which he supported Mr. Willkie, was expected soon.

The president went into the lead immediately vote-counting began last night and forged steadily ahead. Hour after hour he strengthened his position and when the major industrial states such as New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois swung definitely to him the issue was no longer in doubt.

If Willkie was to have won he had to take these states. He devoted much of his campaign to them. In most of them he met warm receptions, but he could not overcome the President's popularity.

Newspapers which had supported Willkie's candidacy began conceding his defeat early. These included the Kansas City Star, the New York Times and Herald Tribune, the Detroit Free Press, the Baltimore Sun and the Portland Oregonian.

When, not long after midnight, the Democratic count moved up tentatively to 433 electoral votes, a crowd gathered in Mr. Willkie's hotel suite and he addressed them briefly.

He told them not to be "afraid or disheartened, because I am not," and added: "The principles for which we fought prevail as surely as the principles of truth always prevail."

Reverses Strong Willkie Trend.

The surge to the President reversed a strong pro-Republican trend established in the Congressional elections of 1938, when the Presidency was not a stake, and in which Illinois, Massachusetts, Ohio, Pennsylvania and several other states elected Republican senators or governors, or both.

This time the President's magic as a vote-getter extended its spell to the ticket and he apparently carried along on the current with him a number of Democratic Governors and Senators as well as members of the House.

Newspaper editorials today featured the fact that the people themselves had rejected the implication there is danger to "the American way" in the President's third-term election, and that the verdict should be accepted in good sportsmanship and in a spirit of unity with all effort concentrated upon making the nation strong.

An interesting commentary upon the working of democracy was seen in the figures for New York City. Here, complete but unofficial returns showed 96.71 per cent of the registered vote—3,243,662 of 3,388,741—was cast, the highest ever known here.

The totals were Roosevelt 1,978,720; Willkie, 1,251,466. Votes of 95 per cent or more have been seen in the world a few times of late years, usually running like this: "98.2 per cent 'JA', 1.8 per cent 'Nein'."

In the vast outpouring of votes for the President and Mr. Willkie the scattering of ballots for the other Presidential candidates was not reported. Norman Thomas, the veteran Socialist candidate, called himself one who "gets the results by mail."

Get Results by Mail.

Others in this election who will get their results "by mail" included Earl Browder, Communist, Roger Babson, Prohibition, John Aiken, Socialist-Labor, and John Zahnd, National Greenback.

New England again, as in 1936, gave the Republicans a majority in only two states—Maine and Vermont. After early returns last night in which Massachusetts and New Hampshire flirted briefly with the Republican column, both went to the President where they joined Connecticut and Rhode Island.

From New England all down the Atlantic coast the sweep to the President was interrupted only in New Jersey.

At first the Democrats hoped that Mr. Willkie's lead there would be overcome by votes in the big cities—such as Jersey City where Mayor Frank Hague's machine backed the ticket. But this hope was fading to-day. James H. R. Cromwell, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate and former U.S. Minister to Canada, conceded his personal defeat in New Jersey by Senator Barbour, Republican.

The solid South showed no sign of a crack in its traditional allegiance to the Democrats. Again, as in every election since 1928, these 11 states from Maryland south and west to Texas turned in substantial Democratic majorities.

toria, Ioannina and other towns.

Women and children were reported among the casualties in Piraeus, the port of Athens, where refugee settlement homes were bombed. Casualties in the other cities were described as few; the communique said no military damage was caused.

Reports from the front said the Greeks were tightening their grip around fortified Koritza, cutting off the Italian supply route for the invasion of Western Macedonia, and shelling the city continuously.

(Dispatches from Yugoslavia said the Italians—30,000 troops and supporting tanks—still held the city. These reports interpreted the Greek shelling as preliminary to a possible attack to seize the town and the trapped troops.

Lines Holding Firm.

The Greeks declared their lines are holding firm in Western Macedonia, where the Italians are striking at Phlorina, and in Epirus, along the north bank of the Kalamas river, barring the Italian push toward Ioannina.

The Greeks credited a British fighting plane with shooting down one Italian plane yesterday and said they destroyed seven planes grounded at Koritza and two which attacked Piraus.

Gendarmes at Banitza, near Greece's northern border, telegraphed Athens that three Italian bombers were seen shortly after noon yesterday, circling over that area and then heading into Yugoslavia in the direction of Monastir (Bitolj.)

(Unidentified planes bombed Bitolj, Yugoslav town near the upper flank of the Italian-Greek battlefront three times yesterday, killing at least two persons and wounding five. Both Greeks and Italians disclaimed responsibility for the attack.)

Large Congregations Attend Church Event

HASTINGS, Nov. 6—(ENS).—On Sunday morning and evening, Trinity United Church, Hastings, celebrated the 77th anniversary of its founding, with large congregations attending each service. Many from Westwood were present, as the United Church had withdrawn their services for the occasion.

The Rev. H. Welsford Cliff, M.A., B.D., of Kingston, pastor of Cook's United Church, and president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was the special speaker for the day, and was assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Glover, B.A.

A liberal thankoffering was received at both services.

A choir of 18 voices with Miss Carrie Doxsee as organist, led in the service of song. At the morning service the gowned choir sang the anthem, "Oh Worship the King," as they proceeded from the rear of the church to the choir. The two anthems during the service were "Trust Ye in the Lord" and "Thou Crownest the King." Miss Norma Snyder of Smithfield was guest soloist at the evening service.

Prior to delivering an eloquent address, the Rev. Welsford Cliff congratulated the congregation on the church having attained its 77th birthday and said it was an honor to share in the spiritual fellowship of the hour. He congratulated them on the splendid past and encouraged them on a noble effort for the future.

Taking his text from II Chronicles 20-16, "Thus saith the Lord. Unto you. Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude for the battle is not yours but God's," he chose as the theme of his address "Life is a Battle." Life is a conflict between good on the one side and evil on the other. The battle is not your's but God's. Our lives are in the midst of battle but Ghrist says, "I'm your Bearer, Deliverer and Saviour." The sacrifices and struggles of the past made this 77th birthday a reality, so now in these times of strife and trouble may you struggle and strive until the battle is won. A tragedy can be transformed into a triumph if you cast yourself upon the Eternal One for the battle, for everyone is not ours but God's.

His text in the evening was "Loving Kindness."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest, it just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

TAMBLYN

Features Overseas Gift Suggestions

Of course you are sending a gift or gifts overseas but if you wish them delivered on time you should see to it that they are mailed in time and so the postal authorities suggest earlier than usual mailing. Without doubt gifts from Canada will be most acceptable and as a matter of fact with production disturbed as it must be in the Mother Country a parcel from Canada would be doubly appreciated as it would very definitely be a message from Home and within the Empire. The next question is: "What Shall It Be?" You may not know the answer but your Tamblyn Drug Store in all probability will be able to assist in that respect as in each Tamblyn store there is available a very comprehensive display of suitable Gift Suggestions and you would be well advised to look them over as more than likely you will find exactly what you wished and at a price that will please and of course, while in the store you will find other home requisites you may require which may be purchased under such appealing prices as appear in this week's list of

MAIN STREET TOPICS

MONTH'S RELIEF COST

Peterborough's relief account for October was $2,197.17, City Clerk Outram reported to the council Monday night.

BRIDGE AGREEMENT

Citizens in the north end of Ashburnham should find further assurance of the prospect of the construction of a footbridge across the river at London street in the passing of a bylaw by the council Monday night confirming the contractual agreement with R. A. Blythe of Hamilton.

WANT TRAFFIC SIGNS

Traffic signs at the corners of George and Water streets at Barnardo avenue for the protection of school children were proposed to the council in a letter from Mrs. E. S. Kingdon, secretary of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association. City Engineer Parsons was asked to have warning signs put up.

DEER IN WOLF'S CUOTHING

Fred Clark, a marksman of undoubted ability, had the pleasure of shooting at a wolf on Monday. Fred was hunting near Burleigh Falls, and what he thought was a deer, turned out to be a wolf according to the hunter. He had time for one shot only, and unfortunately he missed.

CASE DISMISSED

A domestic case was aired in police court this morning in which a charge against a married man of failing to provide for four children was dismissed after it was revealed that the matter chiefly concerned a dispute between the parents as to the buying of groceries. Magistrate Gee suggested that the two come to an understanding in regard to that phase of married life.

ALLERGIC TO WOOL

One of the trainees at the Exhibition Camp has been confined to a local hospital receiving treatment for an odd skin affliction. This man is allergic to wool but didn't know it until he donned the army issue of underwear. He soon became covered with a rash that gave him considerable discomfort. Even woollen blankets on his bed aggravated the condition. His camp life is over.

USING WORN-OUT SOCKS

A novel method of using worn-out socks in the manufacture of warm mitts and toques for the needy in England has been hit upon by the Women's Auxiliary to the Civic War Service Council. The finished product, made with two pairs of socks, bears no relation to the toeless, heelless socks once discarded by their owners, and women are hurriedly ransacking rag-bags for old woollen socks or stockings to fill the receptacle placed in Zeller's store for such contributions.

CHURCH CENTURY MARK.

One hundred years after the First Baptist church, Kingston, had been founded by his great-grandfather, Rev. George P. Gilmour, M.A., B.D., of McMaster University, conducted impressive anniversary services there Sunday morning and evening. The church was organized July 9, at a meeting presided over by Rev. John Gilmour, then pastor of the church at Peterborough, which had been founded two years earlier through his efforts.

HE WOULDN'T SIGN

An Indian trainee at Exhibition Camp gave the Quartermaster a little trouble some time ago. When soldiers are issued with equipment, they are obliged to sign, and the signature is a receipt for the equipment. When the Indian was asked to write on the dotted line, he stubbornly refused. "I won't sign until I talk it over with my mother. She told me once never to sign anything and I'm not starting now." He didn't sign until he telephoned his mother and got her approval.

RED FACES

At least one man on the sixth line of Otonabee has a red face this morning. He and his brother are guilty of one of the most grievous errors in the realm of hunting. The pair are reported to have walked into a herd of ten deer, both had guns, and the deer were subjected to a regular barrage. The Examiner's informant reports there were no casualties.

PATRIOTIC FAMILY

Fred D. Whalen, of Keene, has five brothers and two brothers-in-law in the service. Fred is a Corporal in the Prince of Wales Rangers, and is active service minded himself. Two of the brothers are on the Canadian Active Service Force, and the remaining three are in the navy, one of them is on the Ajax.

Another hunter is being given the haw-haw, he is Ralph Wasson of Warsaw. According to reports received last night, Ralph had a shot at a deer from a distance of only 12 feet. He was using a shotgun, but scored a clear miss. In the way of redeeming himself, however, Ralph got the next one, and today his head is high again.

Local Doctor Bags Deer and Bear

As the reports come in, it is evident that this season will rank among the best in the district's history. The deer are plentiful, and more other animals are being seen.

Word has come down from Red Stone Lake, in Haliburton, that on the first day of the hunt, a party headed by Ivan Lillico bagged a big buck and a bear. The report indicates that the marksman was Dr. H. A. Mitchell of this city, but there was seemingly some doubt as to who was the fortunate huntsman.

Others in the party include Harry Willis, Dave Tucker, Dick Stewart, and Jim Wharry is joining the party today. They are stopping at the Red Lake Lodge, and reports indicate that this district will be among the leaders at the end of the hunt.

Rescues Two Friends Trapped In Car

BLAIRMORE, Alta., Nov. 6 — (CP)— Austin Fisher, 35, yesterday was credited with rescuing two friends trapped in an automobile from the icy waters of Crow's Nest Lake. Fisher, Bill Matson, and Duncan Hutton were returning last night from Crow's Nest when the car, driven by Fisher, skidded on a curve and landed on its top in the lake. Fisher turned the window down, crawled out, and swam ashore. Obtaining a rock, he plunged back into the water, and, smashing a window of the sedan, pulled both his friends to safety on shore.

Found Errors In Bounds Of C.G.E. Land

The deeding of certain slivers of street lines to the Canadian General Electric Company will be advertised by the city council one of these days, and the significance of these statutory notices might as well be explained to the public beforehand.

When the company decided to buy the remaining properties on the north side of Albert street, the first step they took was to have their entire lot resurveyed inclusively with the row of lots and houses they had just acquired.

John W. Pierce's work disclosed a condition of inexactness in the original survey and deed that would have continued indefinitely if the recent purchase of adjoining properties had not been made.

"It's another case of what we don't know not hurting us," Mayor Hamilton remarked. "The lines which the company has been following all these years were given them when they decided to come here and the property was deeded to them. Now they find along Albert street that there is a discrepancy according to Mr. Pierce's recent survey."

In one place along Albert street the error was about a foot and at the west end, near Monaghan Road, the abberration is said to have been seven feet. Along Park street there was also a difference of more than a foot, the encroachments being over the street line. In fact one of the buildings fronting on Park street extends slightly over the line of the street.

Upon learning these facts as a result of their expansion program, the company suggested that as a matter of correctness and uniformity the proper and actual boundaries of their properties be corrected and registered in accordance with the information obtained from Mr. Pierce.

The council decided Monday night to acceded at once to the company's proposal, which means that the C.G.E. will be given possession of these thin slices of land which they believed they had owned from the outset, and that means when they got the deed of the property many years ago.

But, the council will have to announce this grant in the same formal way as if it were a matter of many acres. The words used the other night were to the effect that the city was "squaring up" the C.G.E. bounds.

Leg Is Fractured When Struck By Car

Mrs. H. J. Bell, 421 Bethune street is in Nicholls Hospital suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg below the knee and other injuries, including the loss of a number of teeth, as the result of a traffic accident near the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets Tuesday night.

Mrs. Bell was crossing Aylmer street near the intersection of Hunter when she was struck and knocked down by a car driven by Raymond Marks, 17, of 467 Parnell street. Marks told the police that the woman walked in front of his car. It is expected he will face a charge of careless driving.

Mrs. Bell was given first aid by Dr. Herbert Young and removed to Nicholls Hospital.

OPEN SEASON

A housewife in the Munro avenue section went short on bread Tuesday for the evening meal.

The woman purchased a loaf from the baker, then left it on the kitchen table, with the kitchen door open, while she went outside for a few minutes. When she returned the bread had disappeared. She ran to the front of the house believing that a transient might have stolen it. The street was clear of humans, but a hundred yards away, and travelling fast was a long-legged lean black and white hound, and grasped firmly in his mouth was the loaf of bread.—McG.

YOUNGEST HUNTER?

A boy, believed to be the youngest hunter in this district has had his biggest hunting thrill — his first deer. He is Harold Legrow, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Legrow, 175 Lock street, and he is only 12 years old.

Harold and his father have been hunting with a party back of Millbridge, and the first day out the boy had an opportunity to prove his ability. Perhaps the most remarkable part of the story is that the deer, was shot through the neck, and was killed by a bullet from a .22 calibre rifle.

Council Urges Completion Of Apsley Road

Completion of the Apsley-Paudash Lake link of Provincial Highway No. 28 from Port Hope through Peterborough to Bancroft is requested in a resolution passed by the City Council on Monday night on Alderman Roy's motion, seconded by Alderman Dutton.

The fourteen-mile gap extending across the Peterborough-Hastings County boundary was described by Alderman Roy as being in a "vicious" condition. Commercial and tourist traffic easterly from Apsley has been increasing, but the unfinished link was proving an obstacle to the greater use of the road which would flow from its construction.

Alderman Roy said he appreciated the Government's policy of avoiding unnecessary major expenditures during the war, but on the other hand the Peterborough-Bancroft Highway was coming into greater use as a short cut from the west to Petawawa.

If Woman Driving Be Doubly Careful

"When he saw that there was a woman driver ahead he should have been doubly careful," commented Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning in finding a young driver guilty on a charge of careless driving, arising out of an accident at Sherbrooke and George streets, in which his car met in collision with another automobile driven by a woman.

There was a considerable variance in the evidence. The woman and her daughter swore that their car was travelling north on George street and near Sherbrooke she signalled that she was about to make a right turn into Sherbrooke street. They said that the other car coming north behind them cut over the service station property and in front of their car as it started to turn and that after clipping their machine kept on going and did not stop until he was near King street. He was fined $5 and 75 cents costs.

Salary Dispute To Be Settled By Judge Smoke

HAVELOCK, Nov. 6—(ENS). — Notice was received by the Havelock Municipal Council at their meeting on Monday evening, that Dr. D. J. Holdcroft, M.O.H., has applied to Judge Smoke of the Peterborough County Court, to determine his salary, as provided for in the Provincial Health Act, wherever a dispute exists between the M.O.H. and municipality. The village has been advised that the complaint will be heard in Peterborough on Monday, November 25. Appointed by Department in September, 1939, Dr. Holdcroft requested $100 for his services during the remaining four months of the year, and refused to accept the municipality's offer of $60. The council itself has been divided on the issue, with Reeve E. W. Seeney and Councillors J. Ketchen and W. Martin forming a majority, standing firm in their decision that it was a fair and considerate offer. On the other hand, Councillors E. J. Leeson and F. Pollock favored granting the doctor his request, in order to prevent a repetition of a similar case which occurred here in the fall of 1938. At that time Dr. Joseph Holdcroft, father of the present applied to the judge to fix his salary and resulterd in considerable costs to the municipality.

Councillors Ketchen and Martin moved, on receipt of the notice, that D. F. Miller, local lawyer, be engaged as solicitor to defend the municipality at the hearing. This was in amendment to a previous motion by Councillors Leeson and Pollock that the Reeve and Councillors Martin be a committee to interview Dr. Holdcroft in an effort to make a settlement out of court. The amendment carried, when Reeve Seeney cast the deciding vote, maintaining that the council's offer had been fair, and that he could see no chance of coming to terms.

A considerable list of correspondence was read and ordered filed on motion of Councillors Leeson and Pollock. Among this were several letters from local men, now enlisted with the C.A.S.F. at home and overseas, who received recognitions from the village. Letters of thanks were received from Gnr. C. A. Wilson, Pte. Harry Washburn, Pte. Murray J. Fraser, and Pte. M. F. Clarke.

In a reply from Ottawa regarding the council's application for permission to return to standard time, it was refused. It was definitely pointed out, that in order to enforce the legislation requiring municipalities who had been or were on daylight time to remain on this until further notice, no discrimination could be shown.

According to a communication from Alex. Elliott, M.L.A., of Peterborough, it is most likely that the council will receive the small trees which they requested from the Department of Highways for planting next spring. They were instructed, however, to bring this matter to his attention next March, in order that it would not be overlooked.

As an experiment this winter, the council decided, on motion of Councillors Martin and Pollock, to purchase 350 feet of snow-fence and posts, which will be placed in different locations in the village.

Discussing the rough condition of the connecting link between the Cordova Road and No. 7 Highway at the east end of the village, and also the Cordova Road itself, the clerk was instructed to notify the county engineer.

Twenty-one yards of sand have been placed in nine different piles throughout the village, in preparation for a slippery winter, should such be the case. Councillor Leeson suggested at this point, that the term of contract for the snow-plows, would be much better if they ran from November to November, rather than from January to January. The latter sometimes causes a change midway through the winter season. Council agreed that this arrangement would be more suitable, and will make the change with the January appointment.

An offer by Alex. Mathison to do the necessary work in laying a drain on the western extension of Donald Street, if the council would supply the 25 tile, was accepted on motion of Councillors Pollock and Martin.

On motion of Councillors Pollock and Ketchen, the council will bring to the attention of the local Hydro Commission again of a pole, between Park and William Streets on Mathison, which will not permit the snow plow to pass, and request them to have this moved.

A request from the Havelock Women's Institute for permission to use the Town Hall on Wednesday, November 13, when the annual county "summary day" is to be conducted here, was granted.

Merchants and citizens will be requested to observe Boxing Day, Thursday, December 26, as a holiday, it was decided on unanimous approval of the Council.

A by-law providing for two-year terms for Municipal Council passed its two readings, and will now be advertised along with the annual nominations notice, to inform the citizens that this question will be voted upon at the regular municipal elections. This is in accordance with the Provincial Government Extension Act.

The following accounts, with the exception of Dr. Holdcroft's for attending the medical convention, were passed and ordered paid. The doctor's was withheld until a proper certificate showing his attendance is presented:

W. J. Akins, salary and phone, $62.50; Dr. D. J. Holdcroft, attending medical convention, $21.15; G. A. Young, door and frame, basement Town Hall, $11; H. Bannon, welding and repair catch basin cover, $1; County of Peterborough, power grader, grading streets, $7.50; Ross Stevenson, making tile and cleaning forms, $20.60; Roy Davis, trucking sand and moving tile, $20; Beatrice Dewey re Foley Estate, $10; Edyth Johnson re Foley Estate, $10; Havelock Hydro Commission, street lights 1940, $1,513; Village Treasurer, property purchased at adjourned tax sale by Reeve, $17.5; H. B. Puffer, pay sheet No. 18, phone, postage, $25.30; trans to School Board, High School, $1,158; Fred McAdam, cartage from streets, 50c; Hubble Hardware, account to date, $149.48; Edward Fennell, insurance renewal, Town Hall, $48.

Council was temporarily adjourned during the evening while Reeve Seeney and Councillors Leeson, Martin, Pollock, and Ketchen sat as a Court of Revision. Although appeals were few, there was an exceptionally large list of removals and transfers, indicative of many changes of residence, ownership and removal from the village.

An appeal from W. McFarlne requesting total exemption for the Gospel Mission Hall on the grounds that the hall would henceforth be used entirely for church purposes and not as a dwelling, was granted on motion of Councillors Ketchen and Martin, provided that the above conditions existed. Total exemption as claimed by other church properties could not be granted in the case of the Mission Hall in previous years, because it also contained living quarters.

On motion of Councillors Leeson and Pollock, the assessment on the residence of Mrs. Mabel Squire was transferred to the new owner, Mr. Howard Buck. Similarly on motion of Councillors Ketchen and Pollock, the Dr. J. Russell property will be assessed to the new owner, J. J. Davis, and the assessment on the A. Aboud block, on motion of Councillors Pollock and Ketchen, transferred to the Shirt Manufacturing Company of Montreal.

An appeal for discontinuance of the business assessment on Ernest Aboud was granted on motion of Councillors Pollock and Martin.

Assessment on the newly erected dwelling of N. Wellman was placed at $600 on motion of Councillors Martin and Ketchen.

The business assessment of Cecil Wilson, now with the C.A.S.F., was struck off on motion of Councillors Leeson and Pollock.

Assessment on McCutcheon's service station was raised by $200, on motion of Councillors Martin and Seeney.

A business assessment of $100 will be placed on Mrs. A. Aboud, on the motion of Councillors Ketchen and Martin.

The following names were struck off the assessment roll on motion of Councillors Pollock and Ketchen: Mr. and Mrs. L. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. Timmins, Mr. and Mrs. R. Spalding.

The following names were transferred on the roll because of change in residence or tenant: O. Seabrook, J. Cosgrove, J. Scott, F. Kennedy, S. Southward, G. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Chard, L. Gibbs, J. Ellis, F. McAdam, H. Chard, W. Livingston, D. C. Drinkwalter, A. Nicholson, G. Stinson, R. McMullen, on motion of Councillors Ketchen and Pollock.

Court of Revision was adjourned to Friday, November 15, on motion of Councillors Pollock and Ketchen. The next regular meeting of Council will be on Monday, December 2.

Missing Boy Found With Relatives

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 6. — (ENS). — By the aid of police, George Holmes, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holmes, was located with relatives in Belleville this morning after a night of alarm and anxiety in his home from the time he was missed on Tuesday afternoon. His father is Sergeant Charles Holmes, who is in Peterborough at the Canadian Military Training Centre.

One hundred school children joined in the local search for the boy yesterday evening and into the night. He left home for school at 9 a.m., and the first concern was felt by his mother when he did not return for dinner. He was still absent after four o'clock and when he did not come home for supper his mother telephoned to her husband in Peterborough, who motored to Campbellford at once and consulted Chief Constable George Hardy. It was his suggestion that the boy might have gone on a visit to relatives, and a call was put through to Belleville. Inquiry there found the boy at the home of a relative. He had hitch-hiked out of Campbellford on Tuesday morning.

Allow Church To Issue Call

TORONTO, Nov. 6. — Toronto Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, meeting yesterday in Knox Church, decided to allow Bonar Church to proceed to call a minister, despite the report that the congregation owes Rev. G. C. Lamont, former minister, $383. The balance of salary due Mr. Lamont will be paid in monthly instalments.

"Let them have no new minister until they have paid up what they owe the last one,' 'suggested Rev. J. R. Sanderson, minister of the Beaches Church.

Mr. Lamont stated that when he left Bonar Church more than $1,100 was owing him. "I don't want to be too stern about this, but that congregation can raise the money," he said.

"If you won't give us a minister this winter we might as well close the church," declared a representative of Bonar Church.

Presbytery approved a call to Rev. James McNeill of St. Andrew's Church, Newfoundland, to become minister of Parkdale Presbyterian Church. Approval was also given a call from Patterson Church to Rev. A. C. Herbison, Thamesville.

Fun Is Had At Y.W.C.A. Party

Quite the most thrilling Hallowe'en ghost walk in the history of the Y.W.C.A. took place at the annual "Y" party, when witches, ghosts, goblins, scare crows, farmers, Mother Goose characters and fancy ladies and gentlemen crept through the dark underground passages of the "Y" and heard groans and shrieks rattling of chains, felt cold damp hands and finally emerged back to the bright lights of the gym with a sigh of relief.

The fun in the gym included Hallowe'en contests, stunts and races and popular country dances. The Thirty-Eight Club gave an amusing skit. "The Fortune Telling" by Jig Saw Puzzle was hilarious, many pieces being lost in the underground passages. Supper was served in the recreation room.

Judges were Mr. LaBranch, Mrs. F. M. Somerville, Mrs. J. H. Vernor, Miss Mary Elliott.

The apple eating contest was won by Jean Cox, the apple balance trick by Mrs. C. Wood, the "Patch on Pants" contest by Beatrice Sawyer, and apple pie race by Isabel Young.

Refreshments were served in the recreation room by the social committee. Coffee was poured by Mrs. T. Barrie and Mrs. S. L. Smoke.

Girls Check Your Oil At Filling Station

Because so many young men are wearing khaki, Ivan Lillico has engaged two girls who make all check-ups and fill-ups, doing everything but repair work. "The girls are just as efficient as men, and this doesn't take men away from essential jobs which are aiding Canada's war effort," says their employer. In the picture, Viva Shearer (LEFT), is filling a customer's radiator, while Evelyn Coons checks the oil.

Edith Willkie Proud of Husband And Proud of The Fight He Made

By MARY ELIZABETH PLUMMER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP)—The slim, youthful-looking wife of Wendell L. Willkie was at his side, still smiling, even as her husband was losing his fight for the Presidency.

She quickly replied, "I'm not worrying."

On their plans for the future:—"We haven't made plans for anything except to take a vacation. That was to happen win, lose or draw."

In an interview late last night, she indicated that much as she wanted her husband to win, her personal preference for herself was a quiet life.

"I've never had a public life until this campaign," she said. "I do like my own privacy. I like to sit behind the post, or behind a big fat lady—as I did yesterday at the movies."

Looking fresh after thousands of miles of travel with the Republican candidate, she confessed, however, she was tired.

"I haven't slept for a long time, it seems to me," she said. "I certainly intend to get some sleep tonight.

Mrs. Willkie stayed in their hotel suite when her husband, with the vote mounting against him, went to the hotel ballroom about midnight to thank campaign workers and say, "don't be afraid and never quit."

Edith Willkie turned to her friends and said: "I'm proud of him. I'm proud of the fight he made."

Says "Christian Motives Are Necessary to Win

The subject of "Christian Democracy" was deftly handled by Mr. William Fox, barrister, when he spoke Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Catholic Women's League in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. He was presented by the president, Miss Lillian Hurley. "If we are to defeat the hordes who threaten our way of life, and avoid the errors of the past," he declared, "our government must be guided by Christian principles, and our leaders must be Christian men and women." He pointed out that because women control fifty per cent of the vote, they can do a great deal to assist in the establishment of a thoroughly Christian democracy.

Thanks was expressed to the speaker by Miss Agnes Grant and Miss Theresa MacNamara. Reports were presented by Miss Mary Clancey, secretary; Miss Theresa Hurley, treasurer; Miss Nora Shevlin presented the first vice-president's report on membership and Miss MacNamara the correspondence.

A musical program included a violin solo by Miss Catherine Corkery, accompanied by Miss Margaret McDonald, and a vocal solo by Master Holly Dwyer, who was a member last year of Rev. Dr. Ronan's choristers in Toronto. Miss Agnes Grant was his accompanist. The meeting opened with prayer and closed with the National Anthem.

Mrs. G. K. Fraser Again Heads Red Cross Group

A large number of articles made by the Red Cross Sewing and Refugee and Quilt Committee of the Young's Point Branch of Canadian Red Cross, and a series of successful social activities resulting in satisfactory funds for carrying on its war work were reported at the first annual meeting of the group, held at St. Aidan's Hall, Young's Point. Mrs. G. J. Elmsley of Lakefield presided for the election of officers.

During a pleasant social hour following the meeting tea was poured by Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser, president, Mrs. William Gilman, and Mrs. G. J. Elmsley. Streamers forming a red cross and red candles in silver candelabra on the tea table reflected the patriotic theme, and a graceful arrangement of autumn flowers were also used. Assisting to serve were Mrs. E. C. Moore, Mrs. E. Johnson, Mrs. R. Nicholson, Mrs. W. Scollard, Mrs. C. Pelton, Mrs. D. Darling, Miss Helen Coones.

Officers were re-elected by acclamation as follows: President, Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser; vice-president, Mrs. William Scollard; secretary, Mrs. Elmer Johnson; treasurer, Mrs. Jack Brown; Red Cross convener, Mrs. A. Wilson; refugee convener, Mrs. C. Mackie; quilt convener, Mrs. C. Merrill; membership convener, Mrs. V. Young; finance convener, Mrs. P. Stenner.

I.O.D.E. Plans Christmas Dance

Plans were discussed for the annual holiday dance on Christmas night of the Major Bennett Chapter, I.O.D.E. at the November meeting, held at the home of Miss Helen Miller with the regent, Miss Betty Lytle, presiding.

A wreath is to be placed on the cenotaph on Remembrance Day, and the Chapter is making a contribution to the Y.W.C.A. campaign. Several members volunteered to tag on Poppy Day, and volunteers were also asked for help in packing soldiers' Christmas boxes.

The following twelve new members were voted into the Chapter: Miss Phyllis Lawrence, Miss Dolly Sproat, Miss Jean Cox, Miss Helen Latimer, Miss Phyllis Webster, Mrs. A. More, Mrs. Jack Kirkwood, Miss Ruth Kingan, Miss Muriel Byers, Miss Isobel Irvin, Miss Nora Gemmell, Catherine White.

To Pack Gift Boxes This Week

The November meeting of the Jeanette Scott Chapter I.O.D.E. was held on Monday evening at the home of Miss Marcella McNulty, Hunter street West, with Miss Grace Comstock, regent, presiding. Six new members were welcomed into the Chapter folowing the opening prayer and the oath of allegiance.

An encouraging report on the proceeds of the Chapter's fall tea was given by the treasurer, correspondence was read by the regent, and donations were voted to the Y.W.C.A.; the Provincial Educational fund; the Coronation Bursary, and the Lord Mayor's Fund (for the relief of air-raid victims). The Chapter's Christmas gift to its adopted school at Matawa will be an addition to the school library. Money was also voted for the Chapter's share of the Christmas boxes which the Peterborough Chapters of the I.O.D.E. are sending to all Peterborough men serving overseas. These boxes are to be packed and mailed this week. Announcement was made that the drive for wire coat hangers will be continued throughout the winter.

The Stars Say . . .

For Thursday, November 7

While matters may be accelerated to a very high degree on this day, according to the lunar and mutual aspects, yet the general trend of events may be devastating and disintegrating rather than constructive. The energies and spirit of initiative and enterprise may be well stimulated, but the mental slant or grasp of disruptive situations may be erratic, panicky or evolutionary.

Those whose birthday it is may run into a year in which it will demand a definite use of the constructive forces, with sound planning and aggressive execution to avert dire results of impetuous, irresponsible, erratic or eccentric whims or impulses.

A child born on this day may have excellent creative ability, with much enterprise and initiative, but this may be negatived by an erratic, rash, impetuous or flighty temperament, unless given early training and direction.

We Noticed . . .

. . . Next time you complain about having to write a long overdue letter, consider Mrs. Alex. Townsend, of Brighton, England, who as "Auntie," writes 50 letters weekly to lonely soldiers, sailors and airmen in all parts of the Empire. They aren't one-page letters. They average 10 sheets of good man-sized stationery.

. . . "This all started," explained Auntie, "when my son joined up and I started writing him. I realized how lonely he was and I started writing also to other young men in the services who used to live near us."

. . . Finally the practice developed until Auntie's correspondents have sprung up in such far away spots as Canada and Singapore. "I write about anything but war," says Auntie, "and they write me all about their personal life, without giving away any secrets."

Friendliness Urged On W.I. At Central Area Meeting

TORONTO, Nov. 6 — Friendship toward people of those other lands whom the fortunes of war or peace have landed on Canadian soil is not only Christian and humanitarian, but desirable from the point of view of potential benefits accruing to this Dominion, Senator Cairine Wilson of Ottawa told members of the Women's Institutes, Central Ontario area, at Tuesday evening's sessions of their thirty-ninth annual meeting in the Royal York Hotel.

"We can do a valuable service by endeavoring to bring these people into our own immediate circles, by letting them see that we trust them and expect they are anxious to become good Canadians," she said. "When we do not extend the hand of friendship or show interest in them we may be losing valuable allies."

New crafts have been established in Canada as the result of the entry of Europeans. Ultimately employment would result to large numbers of people and increase farm and country production, she said. Newcomers contribute to the cultural and industrial life, and many coming from countries now under the domination of Hitler have knowledge that could be of great assistance to authorities and Canadians generally.

Senator Wilson expressed the conviction that much fifth-columnist agitation and suspicion toward those with foreign blood in their veins was raised by the Nazi propagandists who permeate foreign settlements and realize the potency of this agitation as a weapon. Women, she maintained, could do much to create an atmosphere of confidence so valuable at present.

Speaking of the little British war guests, she expressed gratification at the eagerness with which they had been received in Canadian homes. She hoped spring would see another movement of them, she said. Referring to conditions in Britain, she lauded the bravery of the thousands of girls and women in business and industry who "although they had to sleep in their clothes and snatch a few hours' rest as best they could, turned up at their work every morning and faced each new day with courage and a smile."

Praising the Women's Institutes, and particularly their war work, she said she was particularly impressed with the achievement of the Ontario institutes in sending more than 51,000 pounds of jam overseas. This meant a change of diet for the soldiers, as well as needed vitamins.

No sooner was war declared than institute women looked around to see where they could help, said Mrs. James Gordon of Beaverton. Money raised up until the end of the fiscal year in April was $6,536. It was used for buying supplies, donations to Red Cross, etc., and sending boxes overseas. As the money was gleaned by teas, sales, suppers, etc., community and social life was advantageously developed. In addition, "the click of the knitting needle and hum of sewing machine resulted in thousands of articles for Red Cross. More than 7,400 pairs of socks were knit; 1,065 sweaters, 1,103 pairs of pyjamas, 1,206 gowns and thousands of smaller articles. Many branches sponsored the St. John's Ambulance courses in first aid; others sent boxes overseas, treats to camps, etc.

That the W.I. does not believe in "all work and no play" was evident when, at the conclusion of an address on the value of exercise as an aid to health by Miss Margaret Dunning of the Y.W.C.A. and demonstrations by herself and two companions on health exercises, members pushed their chairs to the back of the room and joined in recreational games.

I cannot stand the strain any longer of just being outside of his life, of having him indifferent to me.

AN UNHAPPY WIFE

ANSWER—I think the thing for you to do is to quit dramatizing yourself and picturing yourself as a tragic victim of man's inhumanity to woman, whereas you are, in reality, only a silly woman who lacks the sense and the courage to meet a very ordinary situation in life and make the best of it. If you will compare your lot with millions of other women; women who are married to brutes who beat them; women who are married to lazy loafers who don't support them; women who have drunken husbands; women who have unfaithful husbands; women who have grouchy and disagreeable husbands, you will see that you haven't much about which to complain, even if yours doesn't make passionate love to you and tell you that you are the most wonderful and beautiful creature on earth and that he couldn't live without you.

These other women who are tied to souses and rakes and ne'er-do-wells would think that a woman who had a husband who was kind and good to her and supplied her with a good home and a car and a charge account at the best stores should be down on her knees thanking God for her good luck instead of bewailing her terrible fate.

Self-Pity Is a Sin

The trouble with you, sister, is that you are just wallowing in self-pity, and you are having such a grand time being sorry for yourself that you are doing everything you can to increase your sufferings.

You are aggravating your disease until you are turning a slight indisposition into a mirtal illness. You are prodding a pimple until you make it a boil. You are dwelling upon your fancied pains until you make them real.

You are not doing one single solitary thing to try to cure yourself, and nobody can help you as long as you cultivate this morbid spirit. You have to will to be happy in order to be happy, just as you have to have the will to live in order to live.

You want a miracle to happen that will change your unsentimental, undemonstrative husband into a great lover. You want him to make you feel important by telling you that you are the earth and the moon and the stars to him, and that he couldn't survive without you.

Dear Miss Dix—My husband and I have been married 20 years. Have two daughters, both grown and married. My husband has been kind to me. He has been a good provider and he says he loves me, but I am the most miserable woman in the world because I know that I bore him. He never enjoys talking to me. He never wants to be with me. And when I go with him anywhere it spoils his good time. I try hard to be a good pal and I don't know what I do that gets on his nerves. I adore him and if he would only once take me in his arms and tell me that he needed me and wanted me more than he wanted anything else on earth it would relieve this gnawing pain in my heart that tortures me. He is 39. I am 40. We both have many years to live. What shall we do? He says he doesn't want a divorce or to break up our home, but I feel that

Durham County Team Gives Ontario Lead

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—Aided by the outstanding work of its teams from Durham County, Ontario scored two victories to lead all Provinces in the national judging contests for boys' and girls' farm clubs, concluded here yesterday. Honors, however, were well divided among the Provinces.

Ontario won the seed grain and seed potato events. The swine event was captured by Alberta, the poultry by Manitoba, beef cattle by Saskatchewan, and dairy cattle by Quebec.

Sixty-two boys and girls on 31 teams, representing all nine Provinces and all Provincial champions, competed in the two-day classic conducted by the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work. Provinces could only enter teams in four of the six projects.

Headlining the array of youthful stars in Canada's basic industry were the teams coached by E. A. Summers of Bowmanville, agricultural representative for Durham County. These boys, besides wining the grain and potato competitions, were a close second in the swine event, and had the high individual in all three. Another Ontario team from the Delta Dairy Calf Club placed third in the dairy cattle competition.

In seed grain, Ontario won with a total of 1,072 points, through the work of Allan White and Lorne White, cousins, and members of the East Durham Grain Club, Port Hope. Manitoba was second with 962½, Alberta had 948, and Saskatchewan, 816½.

Score Highest Points

Vernon White and Murray Lord, of East Durham Potato Club, garnered 1,099 points, highest team score made in any event during the contests, to take the potato judging for Ontario. Vernon and Allan White are brothers. Lorn White is their cousin. British Columbia was second with 1,038 and Nova Scotia had 910. Possible total team score in each of the six events was 1,200.

Triumph of a girls' team from Alberta in the swine judging contest was a feature that had additional interest because brothers of the girls won this event for Alberta in 1937. The new champions are Nora Fulcher and Isabel Ferguson, who totalled 1,010 points, to take a narrow six-point verdict over the Ontario team of Howard Malcom and Laurence Malcom, cousins, representing the West Durham Swine Club. Then came Quebec with 882; Manitoba, 866; Saskatchewan, 847; Nova Scotia, 833; British Columbia, 790.

Girls' teams also placed third in potatoes for Nova Scotia, and fourth in both grain and poultry for Saskatchewan.

The poultry event went to Manitoba's team of Raymond Beech and Eldon Mitchell, with 1,022 points. New Brunswick had 942, British Columbia, 926, Saskatchewan, 869; Prince Edward Island, 863; Nova Scotia, 689.

Saskatchewan's team of Gordon Taylor and Wallace Simpson won the beef cattle judging, with 913 points. Alberta scored 897 and Manitoba 883.

Honors in dairy cattle competition went, as often before, to Quebec. Paul Dubois and Rolland Becotte scored 876 points, to top New Brunswick's 867. Ontario's team of Joseph Raison and Ross Stone, from Harlem and Forfar, respectively, was third with 826. Next were: Nova Scotia, 807; Alberta, 762; British Columbia, 737; and P.E.I. 661.

Dr. Christie Speaks

Speaking to the contestant last night, Dr. G. I. Christie, president of O.A.C., Guelph, said: "Every girl and boy competing has won a great victory, even if not a trophy, because you are better for having taken part in the contest and have learned much. If there is any one thing you learned in the last two days it is that you must learn more about the great business institution, such as railroads, packing plants and farm machinery factories, and you must have faith in them."

He stressed that every boy and girl farmer in Canada should get acquainted with the agricultural college in his or her Province, and take some sort of course if at all possible.

All contestants in the farm clubs contest will spend today sight-seeing in Hamilton and Niagara Falls, and will be in Ottawa Thursday and Friday.

GIVE YOUR ROAST AN EXTRA FLAVOUR

this new way

A FAMOUS Montreal cook sent us this tip on roasting. She advises mixing a tablespoonful of H. P. Sauce into about a cupful of water and suggests pouring this mixture into the bottom of the roast pan and using it to baste the meat occasionally while it is roasting. This cook tells us that this plan greatly improves the flavour of both roast and gravy.

For fried steaks, broiled meats, chops, hamburg steaks and other foods, including fish and fowl, add a little H. P. when serving. Thick, fruity H. P. Sauce brings out hidden flavour in foods. Try it with your next meal. A small amount is all that is needed to add a distinctly enjoyable and appetizing flavour.

Bride Admitted Killing Child Court Informed

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 6.—(Special).—"I didn't do it," was the only statement Robert McFarland made to the police after he was formally charged with the murder of Gordon Archer on July 27, according to Constable F. Lozo, who testified before the Supreme Court jury here Tuesday afternoon.

Robert McFarland is standing trial for the murder of Gordon Archer, the 18-month-old son of his bride, who he married on July 12. The wire-bound body of the child was found in the Trent river on the afternoon of July 26.

Mrs. McFarland, who was also charged with the murder, was adjudged "insane and incapable of standing trial" yesterday morning.

A description of the murder, said to have been obtained from Mrs. McFarland, was presented Tuesday afternoon by Chief William Bain of Trenton.

"Mrs. McFarland told me she had gone across the Grand Trunk Railway Bridge with the child. On the afternoon of July 26 I went to the scene with the accused and his wife. She pointed out a wire fence at the north side of the railway tracks, where she obtained the wire," the Chief said.

"She showed me where she had wrapped the wire around the child and where she had obtained the stone on the railway embankment, which she attached to the child, with wire.

"She (Mrs. McFarland) then showed me where she had tossed the child into the river, through an opening in the bushes. She also stated her husband, the accused, was not with her when she did it."

In a statement given the police shortly after he was brought in for questioning, Robert McFarland declared he had no knowledge of the murder. The statement described the movements of himself and his wife, as far as he knew them, from the time he left the police station on Thursday afternoon, July 25, when Chief Bain had informed the young couple they would have to take the child from Mrs. Mountenay, until the time they arrived home at midnight.

The baby had been boarded out with Mrs. Mountenay by Mrs. McFarland the mother, two days prior to the day she married the accused.

"After we left the police station, we went to a place to see if she could get them to take the baby," said Robert McFarland in the statement alleged given to Chief Bain, which was admitted Tuesday afternoon. "We then went to the place where she had been boarding the baby and we took it with us. She was trying to hunt for a place to board the baby.

"We could not take it home. No place for it, and she could not find a place. Then she said she had a place up near the track and she asked me if I would wait for a few minutes for her. I waited about two hours before she came back and said she had a place for it. We then went to the highway where we got lifts home."

Chief Bain said Robert McFarland informed him he had remained on the west side of the bridge, while his wife had gone across the bridge to find a place for the child.

"He told me on two occasions he waited on the west side of the bridge," said the Chief Constable.

The evidence was corroborated by Constable Lozo who accompanied the accused, his wife, Chief Bain and a court reported to the scene of the crime.

The statement was admitted as evidence by Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay after Walter Martin, prosecuting attorney, had produced evidence no promise or threat had been held out to the accused.

Statements made by Mrs. McFarland, wife of the accused, in which she contradicted evidence of the accused, were ruled out by his Lordship.

Manitoba House To Meet Nov. 18

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6. — (CP).—Manitoba's 20th Legislature will meet in regular session Nov. 18 under guidance of the newly-formed non-partisan cabinet.

In announcing the date of the fifth, and probably the last, session of the 20th Legislature last night, Premier John Bracken gave no indication of the nature of the legislative program which members will be asked to consider. It is believed the program will be light, however, with the majority of bills containing minor amendments to existing legislation.

Following the coming session Mr. Bracken is expected to announce an election date when voters will be asked to choose between followers of the non-partisan administration and candidates who may be selected to oppose the coalition idea.

With all main legislature groups now united through membership in the Union cabinet, legislators are expected to give swift assent to any bills which may come before them at the coming session.

Half-holiday Extended

Campbellford merchants will hold the Wednesday half-holiday during eleven months instead of six it was decided at the monthly council session when a petition signed by merchants was presented and approved. Under the new by-law which will be passed store-keepers will continue to mark the half holiday this month keeping open on Wednesday afternoons only during the month of December. It was on motion of the Reeve, C. H. Calver, that decision to re-write the old by-law was passed.

Following in the spirit of the civic banquet tendered members of the C.A.S.F. Unit stationed here council decided once again to assist in serving those who are serving Canada. This time it is by way of cooperating with the I.O.D.E. who plan to send a large number of Christmas parcels to the boys overseas. The suggestion emanated from the Regent of the local Chapter, Mrs. G. A. Ironside, who sensed the fact that postage on Christmas parcels would run into a very sizable sum which would consequently reflect on the amount that each soldier could be sent. As a result an appeal was made to council who replied by authorizing the town treasurer to pay postage up to $25.00 for the Bemersyde Chapter.

Mayor Long reported a request made by Capt. T. C. Quinn, second in command of 'B' Company, Midland Regiment, for a contribution towards an 'emergency fund' for the Regiment. The Mayor disclosed that a similar request had been made to councils of Hastings, Havelock and Norwood, and he recommended that a sum of twenty-five dollars be set aside for this purpose.

Relief officer J. J. Lewis Hay was the only town official to table a report during the evening. He told members there were three families on relief. Councillor MacMillan told of a complaint from Mr. Fred Blake who recently purchased a piece of property from the corporation. According to Mr. MacMillan the purchaser was charged twenty-five dollars plus the cost of deed and transfer which would bring the total up to $48.00. Declaring the cost of registration and legal fees were out of proportion to the value of the property Councillor MacMillan moved the matter be taken up by Chairman of the Finance Committee who might make some equitable adjustment in the price of the property.

Still uncertain as to just where they stood on the matter of a two year term council decided the matter would be gone into at a special meeting at which time all information on the subject would be presented.

Safe Is Stolen

Huntsville, Ont., Nov. 6 (CP)

Democrats Win Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(AP).—Led by President Roosevelt, who rolled up a lead that passed 250,000 to-day, Democrats captured Pennsylvania's 36 electoral votes, re-elected Senator Joseph Guffey, and scored gains in Congress.

The Democrats, by virtue of pluralities in Philadelphia and Pittsburg and in the hard and soft coal regions, won the keystone State despite the fact that Willkie apparently carried at least 40 of Pennsylvania's 67 counties.

With a few hundred precincts of 8,118 in the State remaining to be tbulated, President Roosevelt had 2,056,168 votes and Willkie 1,802,967.

Greek No Sissy Despite Thrills

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(CP).—The Greeks dress their soldiers differently on different occasions. For ceremony, certain Greek army units are decked out in showy frilled skirts like dancers. The Greeks like to dance, too.

When there's real military business to be taken care of, Greece can outfit members of its small standing army in serviceable uniforms and equip them with modern rifles. (Greece probably would run out of equipment if she called up all of her reserve forces, but her standing army is well equipped.

Youths Warned To Report To Registrars

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP).—Physically fit single men of 21 and 22 years who did not receive calls for compulsory military training at the first or second training periods, should notify their division registrars, a War Service Department official said today.

Faulty registration cards or changes of address may have accounted for some eligible men not receiving calls, he said.

Under new regulations changes of addresses must be communicated to the Dominion Statistician at Ottawa and to the Dominion Registrars of the War Services Department.

All eligible 21-year-olds listed, 22-year-olds and some in the 23-year-old class have been called, a press release from the War Services Department announces.

Recruits seeking postponement of training on medical grounds have eight days in which to make application to their divisional registrar

Gandhi Leader Given 4 Years

GORAKHPUR, India, Nov. 6. — (CP-Reuters) — Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, one of two men chosen by Mohandas K. Gandhi to make anti-war speeches as part of a Nationalist plan of "limited civil disobedience," was sentenced today to "four years of rigorous imprisonment."

First to defy the law with anti-war speeches was Vinoba Bhave, sentenced Oct. 21 to three months' imprisonment. Nehru refused to testify at his trial on charges brought under the defence of India Act.

Hitler Is Mum

Berlin, Nov. 6 (AP)

AUTHORIZED circles declined to comment today on news of President Roosevelt's re-election, declaring German reaction would depend entirely on the President's post-election "attitude and actions."

"It is idle to discus what Wendell Willkie would have done had he become president and equally idle to speculate on what Roosevelt will do," said one authorized source. "There is nothing to do

"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has helped me greatly. I felt so weak and nervous—was in such condition I could hardly do my housework. My nerves seemed to be stretched to the breaking point. The first bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription helped me so much that I continued using it. I eat better, have gained weight and am not so nervous. I have told many women about your fine tonic."

Mrs. A. L.—, Toronto.

"Irregular—Miserable—Until I Found This Grand Medicine"

"I was nervous and weak—had such cramps and headaches at the periods. I was irregular—my nerves were driving me just about frantic. Finally a friend recommended Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I used only three bottles—your grand medicine seemed to be just what my system needed because I had very little trouble after—my strength returned, I became regular, and had no discomfort at the periods. I became a strong, robust woman."

Mrs. D. B.—, Toronto, Ont.

"I Felt 100% Better After Using This Prescription"

"I was all run down and nervous, ate very little and was feeling very tired and languid. My system wasn't regular, and I was bothered by dull headaches. I used only one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it stimulated my appetite, helped relieve me of that constipated condition and seemed to quieten my nerves. I felt 100% better after using it."

Perhaps all women crave that kind of a husband, but not one in a thousand gets one in real life. Most husbands are dumb and take their wives for granted, and the wives have sense enough to let it go at that and realize that a beefsteak can be just as much a love token as an orchid, and they make themselves happy and contented.

Try a New Method

It is only selfish, monopolistic, sentimental geese that ruin perfectly good marriages by crying their eyes out for movie heroes. And perhaps even they don't pull romantic stuff at home, for only the other day a cinema star got a divorce from her husband because she said he didn't tell her all of the little unimportant things he did during the day while he was away from her.

Maybe if you would dry your tears and quit wailing and weeping over your husband's indifference to you, he would enjoy your company more. Maybe if you would quit asking him how much he loves you, he would care more for you. Maybe if you would get some other interest besides him he would feel more interest in you. Anyway, the experiment is worth trying.

But don't give up that good home and comfortable living just because your husband doesn't have hysterics over you. If you do that, then you will have troubles sure enough.

Children Should Be Considered

Dear Dorothy Dix—Don't you think that a widow, 40 years old, with children from 10 to 20 years of age, who has been left a comfortable fortune by her husband is disloyal to him if she remarries? Doesn't it seem ungrateful to the husband, who worked and struggled to carry a large insurance for her, for her to give her love and the luxuries the money brought in to another man? R. J.

ANSWER—You have to consider this subject entirely from the point of view of the living and what is best for them. For the dead can have no knowledge nor interest in what goes on here below after they have passed on.

A wife's appreciation of her husband's sacrifices for her, her gratitude for his generosity to her, her loyalty to him are of the utmost moment while he is alive because it can make him happy and repay him for all his labor, but after he is dead, what she does can mean nothing to him.

So it seems to me that there is no point in a woman making a cult of her grief for her dead husband and wasting the years in which she might be happy in loneliness because she has some unfounded idea that it is disloyal for her to marry again.

What I think a widow should consider far more than her duty to her dead husband is her duty to her children, and the thing that should make her think a long time before she marries again is what sort of stepfather she is putting over them. For the cruel stepfather occurs in real life oftener than we realize.

But, even as against her children, the widow has a right to remarry because children grow up so soon and leave the home nest, and their mother is left lonely and desolate if she has no companion.

Of course, whether a widow marries or not, is a question she must settle for herself. It is nothing with which the dead should interfere.

If You Are in Club Life Study Public Speaking

Needed Even If No Speech Maker

What a ghastly moment! Unexpectedly asked to talk about your club committee work, you rise — groping for words, knees shaking.

Perhaps you don't realize what a study of public speaking would do for you at such times. You may have associated public speaking with a battery of microphones, a stadium-packed throng.

But you speak in public when you make a motion at your club, offer a suggestion in your church group, present a report at your parent-teachers' association.

Learn a few rules and you can be confident, charming on those occasions instead of ill-at-ease.

The practised speaker, you'll notice, rises slowly, walks deliberately to the platform. Do likewise. You'll find your panic disappearing. When a word eludes you, just pause, don't stammer er-er. Pauses are effective.

What to say? Speak as you would to a friend alone. And, of course, knowing parliamentary rules, how to address the chair, helps you to avoid boners.

You'll find helpful sample talks for different occasions in our 32-page booklet. Gives advice on voice training, preparing and delivering speeches. Has parliamentary rules; points — for radio; for toastmasters.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for "SELF-TAUGHT SPEAKING" to Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME or booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOOTING FOR TOPS

STRAINING to gain a top score on a hand in duplicate play does not necessarily mean trying something which places the odds tremendously against your success. That more often results in a bottom score than a top. A better attitude is to seek some move, of course different from what you think most players will use at other tables, but which is equally or nearly as sound as the one they probably will employ.

	♠ 7 2 ♥ A 10 7 ♦ 10 6 3 ♣ A Q 9 6 3

	♠ A J 10 8 6 3 ♥ K 6 ♦ A 8 4 ♣ K 5

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West

3 NT	Pass	4 ♠

Approximately the same bidding occurred on this deal at all tables of a tournament in St. Louis, but different leads were made by West. Where the heart Q was chosen, it ran to the K. Then the heart 10 was finessed and the A furnished a diamond discard. The spade J was finessed to the Q and the diamond 5 returned to the Q and A. The A and 10 dropped the missing trumps and three high clubs furnished a second diamond discard, so that South made two overtricks.

One West player decided that at nearly every table the lead would be likely to be a heart. He reckoned that South probably did not have both the A and Q of diamonds. If his own partner had either, that lead could not directly cost a trick, and would be different from the other players' leads. So he led the diamond 5 to the Q and A.

South then tried to get rid of a diamond before losing the lead. He played three high clubs, discarding a diamond on the third one, but West ruffed with the spade 4, cashed the diamond J and returned his diamond K to South's ruff. Later West got a trick with his spade Q, when South tried a finesse, so the contract was held to 4-Spades exactly, with no overtricks. At every other table South made one or two overtricks.

They Stayed Home

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP) — Counterfeiters avoided the world's fairs this year, for the most part. The secret service said that out of approximately $68,400,000 spent at the New York Fair, $137 of counterfeit bills and $587.65 of counterfeit coins were found. At the San Francisco Fair, where visitors spent approximately $8,900,000, counterfeit found totalled $20 in bills and $40.20 in coins.

Seven Appeals Heard At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 6—Seven requests for the downward revision of assessment were tabled before the local court of revision when it met for its annual session in the council chambers of the Public Library. Sitting on the court, which was under the chairmanship of Reeve C. H. Calver, were Deputy Reeve H. M. Donald, Councillors James L. Dorie, J. R. Battisby and P. M. Locke.

First to be dealt with was the annual revision given the Campbellford Cloth Company, who claimed through their vice-president, C. D. Hayes and Secretray W. G. Berner, that the old type of buildings were assessed too high and that the assessment of last year, $14,000.00 for the land and $46,000.00 for the buildings, should be sustained. The court concurred, leaving the assessment at last year's figure.

Mr. George Grills, Rear Street, appealed the assessment on his residence, claiming that the property was depreciated in value to the extent of $500.00 owing to the proximity of Charles Petherick's wrecking yard. He asked for this reduction and the matter was laid over to be considered at an adjourned meeting of the court.

Charles Holmes appealed the $1,950.00 assessment on his residence, claiming that the condition of the property warranted no more than $1,400.00, and this also was left for consideration at the adjourned meeting.

Third property to be left for later consideration was that of Theodore Hardy, who complained that his residence on Pellissier Street was still in the process of construction and therefor should not be assessed. Mrs. Sarah Kerr did not ask for any definite reduction in her assessment. She merely advised the court that certain sheds on the property had been torn down and left the matter strictly up to them. J. F. McGregor advised that the Front Street stairway on his property over the police office had been sold and hence warranted a lowering of the assessment, and the Trent Dehydrated Products, Ltd., requested that their fixed assessment be sustained.

A Plucky Landing

DARTMOUTH, N.S., Nov. 6 (CP). —Despite smashed landing gear, including a broken wheel, Flt.-Lt. R. A. Butts of the Royal Canadian Air Force landed his bomber at the air base here without injuring his crew or causing further damage to the plane, Air Force officers revealed last night. The undercarriage was damaged while he was attempting to land at the air force base at Yarmouth, N.S. Flt.-Lt. Butts decided to try to set the bomber down on his home port at Dartmouth. He flew back and brought his plane to a safe landing after jettisoning his cargo of bombs at sea.

Ottawa Groomed For Finale Of Parliament

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 6. — (CP). — Parliament Hill came to life to-day after three months of quiet as the members of the House of Commons gathered for prorogation of Parliament and to prepare for opening of the new session on Thursday.

Electric polishers whirred and the vacuum cleaners droned as marble floors and carpets were cleaned for this afternoon's prorogation formalities. A squad of cleaners went about putting the last touch of polish and shine on the brasswork.

Speaker J. A. Glen and the Clerk of the House of Commons, Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, were the two busiest men on Parliament Hill with arrangements for the prorogation which is so closely associated with the opening of a new Parliament.

Dr. Beauchesne is also acting as Sergeant-at-Arms in the absence on service overseas of Lt.-Col. Milton Gregg, V.C.

Col. Gregg's office has been turned over to Revenue Minister Colin Gibson in the re-shuffle of quarters incidental to the addition of new departments of Government.

Navy Minister Macdonald has been given first floor suite just off the main rotunda, in rooms formerly occupied by private members.

The House met with all seats filled. Four vacancies were filled in by-elections held on August 19 and the members were introduced. They included Navy Minister Macdonald.

Because they were elected at a time the House was technically in session these members have been titled to pay at the rate of $20 a day since August 19, although they will not have entered the Chamber until yesterday.

In the Senate there are three vacancies, all created by death, two in Quebec and one in Saskatchewan. Usually Senate vacancies are filled on the eve of opening of a regular session, but it is rumored these will not be filled until after Christmas recess.

Want Rallies Held At Central Spot

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 6—(ENS). — Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Young, Omemee, gave the hospitality of the Manse for the first meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Society, Lakefield.

The meeting opened with a hymn, Psalm 24 and prayer by Rev. J. M. Young. As a means of getting the young people more interested it was decided to have the meeting in the homes, every two weeks, also that a letter be written to the Presbytery secretary, declining the invitation to the rally in Brighton, and asking that in future these rallies be held in a more central place.

The election of officers followed with Mr. Young presiding, resulting in the following officers: President, Mrs. Harold Trude; Vice-president, Bill Clark; Secretary, Miss Phyllis Webdale; Treasurer, Aubrey Blakely. Conveners.—Devotional, Miss Jean Clark; Missionary, Miss Ethel Blakely; Literary, Miss Pauline Blewett; Social, Roger Davis; Pianist, Miss Jean Clark; assistant, Mrs. J. M. Young.

To-day These Greeks Aren't Fooling

When the photographer made this photo of a Greek outpost in the northern hills some time ago, the boys were only playing at war—peeking for signs of a theoretical enemy. Today they're right in the middle of the real thing and giving a good account of themselves against the superior forces of Italy. Latest reports say that a counter-attack by Greek troops hurled Italian invaders back for three miles inside the Albanian border.

Centreville Presbyterian Church Observes 107th Anniversary

CENTREVILLE, Nov. 6 (ENS). — Large congregations, inspirational sermons and fine music, marked the 107th Anniversary of Centreville Presbyterian church on Sunday, when the Rev. Horace Kaye of Colborne was the guest preacher.

Beautiful chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers as well as decorations on the gallery made the church most attractive.

At the morning service Mr. Kaye had for his sermon theme "The Pre-eminence of Jesus Christ." In an interesting and impressive way he showed how the greatness, glory, power and influence of Christ were infinitely superior to those of all other great men of the world. King George VI. when crowned knelt at the communion altar, removed his crown of jewels in humble recognition that Christ was King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tate entertained Mrs. Sands and Mrs. Spencely; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Greer entertained Messrs. Powers, McBride and Flett, and after the evening service Mrs. O. B. Johnson entertained the quartette and organist.

Rev. Mr. Kaye and son, Maxwell, were at the Manse..

Norwood Ladies Plan Gifts For Soldiers

NORWOOD, Nov. 6 — (ENS). — Rather than the usual exchange of gifts at their December meeting, the members of the Norwood Branch Women's Institute have decided in favor of each contributing a small donation to provide Christmas gifts for soldiers from their community. This action was taken at their November session, which was held last Friday at the home of Mrs. W. Hubble, with a good attendance.

With Mrs. G. Bitten, the president, in the chair, the meeting opened with the usual Institute Ode and Lord's Prayer, followed by the roll call. Routine business and reports were then dispensed with.

It was planned to have a quilting at the home of Mrs. Stewart on Friday, November 15. A box social is also to be sponsored by the Institute at the home of Mrs. Simpson, on a date to be decided later.

Announcement was made of the "summary day" to be conducted in Havelock on Wednesday, November 13, and arrangements for the transportation of the members over there was arranged.

Papers on health and child welfare, one discussing the symptoms and care of scarlet fever, and another on tuberculosis, were presented during the afternoon. There was community singing also, and the program concluded with the National Anthem.

Lunch was afterwards served by a committee composed of Mrs. Aldred, Mrs. W. Chamberlain, Mrs. A. Gill, Mrs. G. Baker.

French People Have No Heat

By ROY P. PORTER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

PARIS, (via Berlin, delayed), Nov. 6—(AP).—Cold weather struck unheated France this week.

With coal supplies almost exhausted and most office buildings and public establishments without heat, Parisians shivered and donned more clothing. Electric radiators, virtually the only heating facilities available, were at a premium.

French authorities announced plans have been completed for rationing coal — scarce because of transport difficulties resulting from the war—but tickets will not be available for several weeks.

Possession of coal tickets is no guarantee that coal will be delivered. However, because deliveries are contingent upon a dealer's supplies and his ability to transport the coal.

The government has urged families to conserve fuel by closing off most of the houses and gathering in one or two rooms to make fullest possible use of coal for heating and cooking.

Roosevelt Is Given Big Reception

Return Of President To Washington Big Day At Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—President Roosevelt, first man in history to be selected for a third term in the White House, told a welcoming throng of thousands today that he and the first lady liked farm life, but that of all the cities in the United States they would rather live in Washington, D.C.

He made the statement with a laugh in a talk to a crowd which thronged the plaza outside Union Station upon his arrival from Hyde Park, N.Y. The President thanked "my old friends of Washington" for their reception and added: "It isn't as if we (himself and Mrs. Roosevelt) were new people. Your turning out to see us means that we are getting on pretty well.

"And we are very happy, both of us, to be back here for a little bit longer."

Henry A. Wallace, vice-president-elect, and Mrs. Roosevelt rode with the president in his open car through throngs that lined the way to the White House.

Returning from Hyde Park, N.Y., where he watched the great Tuesday election sweep accord him an honor never before bestowed on any President of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt had a throng of officials and just plain citizens waiting to greet him enthusiastically hours before the arrival of his special train.

Expect Crowd of 300,000.

Flags whipped in the crisp Autumnal air. Bunting decked the great gray building. School children lined the curbs. Bands were marshalled. Police, expecting the biggest day since the visit of Britain's King and Queen, prepared to handle a crowd of 300,000 at the station and on Pennsylvania Avenue, historic thoroughfare along which many Presidents have passed in victory but none, before this, in a third term triumph.

Still Counting Votes.

The decisiveness of that triumph was reflected in the hourly more complete tabulation of the nation's popular vote. With 119,168 out of the country's 127,245 voting units counted for, the ballot totals stood:

Mr. Roosevelt—25,958,562.
Wendell L. Willkie—21,591,032.

The President had 39 states to his credit with a total of 468 electoral votes, while Willkie mustered nine states and 63 electoral votes. The big possibility of a change in this lineup appeared to rest with Michigan, where late Republican gains cut the Democratic margin to a slender 3,700 with more than 60 districts yet to report.

Signals Office Burns

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 7 (CP)

FIRE of undetermined origin early today destroyed an office building of the 4th Divisional Signals, Canadian Active Service Force, at the nearby Barriefield military camp. The blaze spread rapidly and office records and files were destroyed. The Kingston fire department was unable to check spread of the flames through the frame structure. Camp soldiers also formed a bucket brigade.

Sir Dudley Not The Man He Was M.P. Tells House

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP Cable).—Commander R. T. Bower declared in the House of Commons today that Sir Dudley Pound, the man at the head of the Navy, "is not the man he was," and that "there is definite disquiet about the Board of Admiralty as a whole."

The Conservative member of parliament and veteran naval officer has long been noted for his outspoken comments. He participated today in a short debate on the sinking of the aircraft carrier Glorious during operations off Norway with the loss of 1,200 men.

Cmdr. Bower accused the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, of adopting Gestapo methods toward him and other officers and reminded the First Lord, who is actually his service chief, that the war is not being fought to set up Mr. Alexander "as a little pinchbeck Himmler with a tinpot staff." Mr. Alexander denied the charges.

Raids On Germany

Berlin And Many Other Centres Bombed

LONDON, Nov. 7.—(CP).— Long range British warplanes bombed the Berlin suburbs and a railway junction northwest of the German capital during the night, the Air Ministry reported to-day.

Attacks also were made, a communique declared, "on synthetic oil plants at Leuna and Hamburg, factories near Dusseldorf, the inland port of Duisburg and railway yards and junctions at Halle, Pretsch, on the Elbe, and near Cologne."

Other squadrons were said to have bombed long-range German gun emplacements at Cap Gris Nez on the French coast.

The Berlin suburb attacked was identified as Spandau, where the Air Ministry saiad the raiders had attacked industrial plants. The Royal Air Force operations were described as "extensive."

In daylight attacks yesterday, British bombers were said to have pounded oil refineries at Salzbergen, starting great fires.

Another daylight attack, the communique said, was directed against the Haansteede airdrome in the Netherlands, where a hangar was hit and aircraft on the ground was machine-gunned.

Bombs were reported dropped on "a concentration of shipping" at Cuxhaven, Germany, and on a convoy of ships off Den Helder, Holland.

The raids were said to have cost the British two planes.

Alberta Renews Bank Request

EDMONTON, Nov. 7 (CP)—Renewal of Alberta's application for a provincial bank charter was decided upon by Social Credit members of the legislature, it was revealed last night in a statement issued following conclusion of a two-day Social Credit caucus.

Enabling legislation providing for establishment of a provincial bank was passed at the last session of the Alberta legislature.

The provincial act authorized the provincial treasurer to pay $500,000 out of the general revenue fund for purposes of incorporation and authorizes the executive council or cabinet members to act as directors and officers of the bank.

Consideration of the application came before the House of Commons committee on banking and commerce at the last session but was never brought to a vote of the Commons.

Mr. King suffered a fractured skull and other injuries.

Two others were less seriously injured in the crash.

Canuck Airmen Not Aboard

OTTAWA, Nov. 7. — (CP).—No Canadian airmen are aboard the ships reported attacked in mid-Atlantic this week by a German raider, according to Air Minister Power's information.

The Minister told a press conference to-day he did not think Canadian graduates of the British air training plan schools were on the ships and that he had no information that any Canadian airmen were on board.

Prospects of the Air Force obtaining some of the radio mechanics it needs are looking up a bit, Maj. Power said, but the response to the appeal for men skilled in servicing and repairing radio apparatus is still far short of what the service wants.

In Officer Class.

"The last report we had showed there were some potentials but they were largely in the officer class," he said. After conferring with his deputy, James S. Duncan, he added that things were looking up a little as far as radio mechanics for other ranks were concerned.

Asked why Acting Wing Cmdr. Ernest McNab of Regina was transferred from the Royal Canadian Air Force to the Royal Air Force, Maj. Power said he presumed it was to give McNab a wider command. The latter commanded Canada's No. 1 fighter squadron which is engaged in the air battles over the south of England with the rank of squadron leader.

Nazi Refuse American Ship Request

Give No Assurance Of Safe Conduct For Relief Vessel

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (AP) — The United States State Department announced today that Germany had refused to give any assurance of safe conduct for an American ship to enter an Irish port to bring home American citizens, although Italy had given such an assurance promptly.

Refusing to give such assurances, the German government was said to have declared that the areas around Britain are "areas of military operations" and that Berlin is "not in a position to furnish any sort of assurance of the nature requested."

The state department said the Italian government's prompt and favorable response was furnished to Germany but that despite this the Berlin foreign office declined to act likewise.

The United States had planned to send an American ship, probably the liner Manhattan, to a western Eire port to bring home about 1,200 American citizens from Great Britain.

Death Solves Problem

The couple and attorneys joined in a rough-and-tumble battle in the corridors of the Supreme Court buildings six weeks ago during a recess in the custody suit. The girl was not hurt.

U.S. Embassy Employee Gets 10 Years

LONDON, Nov. 7 — (CP). — Anna Wolkoff, charged with Tyler Kent, discharged employee of the United States Embassy, with violating the Official Secrets Act in a spy plot, was convicted and sentenced to-day to 10 years' imprisonment.

Kent, previously convicted, was sentenced to seven years.

Miss Wolkoff, 37, is the daughter of a Czarist Russian admiral. Kent was convicted last week, but his sentence was postponed until after the trial of Miss Wolkoff. He was a former code clerk at the Embassy.

Both Kent and Miss Wolkoff were tried in secret sessions.

Mr. Justice Tucker told Kent he had been convicted of five offences of obtaining and communicating documents which might be of use to Germany for a purpose prejudicial to the safety and interests of the state.

Marking Time Awaits U.S. Election

Common Front Is Being Sought To Link All Nations

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA, Nov. 7.—(AP).—South America set to work to-day on a widespread program of Inter-American co-operation which many sources believed would result in a strong common front linking the America's defensively and economically.

With the possible exception of Brazil, the South American nations have been "marking time" on vital Pan-American problems of economics and defence pending the Presidential election in the United States, but they regarded President Roosevelt's re-election as a "go-ahead" signal.

Hesitation to make any comments earlier was particularly noticeable in Argentina, a key nation in whatever cooperation scheme may be worked out to offset economic hardships resulting from war and the threat of a totalitarian spread to the new world.

Foreign Exchange Needed.

This country is known to be facing a severe shortage of foreign exchange due to the war and is anxious to obtain major credits from the United States and find increased export markets.

No Special Mention Made In Speech Of Proposed Legislation

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 7 — (CP). — Measures necessary "for the prosecution of the war to the utmost of our strength" were forecast in the Speech from the Throne with which the Earl of Athlone opened a new session of Parliament today.

There was no specific mention in the speech of any legislative action the Government proposes to introduce during the session.

Members were assured they would be "fully advised of international developments, of Canada's co-operation with the United Kingdom and of relations with the United States."

His First Opening.

Through flurries of damp snow the Governor-General and the Princess Alice drove to Parliament Hill with a motorcycle police escort and, for the first time since he took office last Summer, His Excellency presided at a formal opening of Parliament.

In keeping with the gravity of the times today's opening was shorn of customary brilliance and pageantry which characterized opening ceremonies in peace time.

More than half the 400-word throne speech dealt with the situation in Europe and Asia. It paid high tribute to the people of Great Britain whose "indomitable spirit" had halted "the spectacular advance of the enemy."

It had been expected the speech would give some indication of the government's intention to deal with the report of the Sirois Royal Commission on Dominion-provincial relations. Since it was not mentioned it is expected the House of Commons will be asked to express an opinion on the calling of a Dominion-provincial conference.

Customarily the throne speech gives a brief resume of major subjects on which legislation will be presented. Only mention of the program was contained in the following sentence:

Greek Forces Fail To Hold Invader

Greeks Consolidate Newly Gained Positions In North

ATHENS, Nov. 7 — (AP). — Italy's big push against Greece, supreme test in this little nation's fight for life, apparently has started.

The Greek high command acknowledged that its Evzones, or mountain fighters, had been forced into a "slight" retreat along the Ionian Sea, on the Epirus or Kalamas front, in North-western Greece.

Heavy artillery and aerial bombardment yesterday preceded the Italian Kalamas thrust. The extent of the Greek withdrawal was not disclosed.

Parallels Border.

Conversely, capture of Koritza, now dominated by Greek mountain artillery, 100 miles north-east of the Kalamas front, conceivably might slow down or even halt the Italian coastal drive through a rearguard threat.

Reports reaching Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from the Koritza sector indicated the possibility of a decisive battle in the next few days. Both sides were said to be bringing up reinforcements.

The high command acknowledged that Greek forces had "retreated slightly" yesterday at the extreme lower end of the Epirus sector bordering the Ionian Sea after heavy aerial and artillery activity along the entire front.

Reports from the northern front indicated that Koritza, the base 10 miles inside Albania from which the Italians launched a thrust toward Salonika 10 days ago, was completely at the mercy of Greek forces in command of the surrounding mountains.

Reports that Greek forces actually had entered Koritza were discounted by military experts, who doubted whether the Greeks would attempt to push down into the plains and seize the city.

Place at Mercy of Italians

Such a move would serve no good purpose, these experts asserted, and would put the Greeks at the mercy of Italian mechanized forces. By clinging to the mountains, the Greeks are in a much more favorable position to beat off an Italian attack without suffering costly losses themselves.

Unofficial reports said the Greeks had captured at least 1,000 Italians in their push toward Koritza and had destroyed at least a dozen tanks —mostly light machines designed for mountain warfare and similar to those used by the Italians in the Spanish Civil War.

Both British and Greek planes were said to be backing up the ground operations by pounding Italian troop concentrations and supply lines heavily.

Nazis Ordered To Leave Greece

BELGRADE, Nov. 7 — (AP). — Trustworthy advices from Greece today said that all Germans in Greece had been advised by German diplomatic officials to leave the country at once.

This move was interpreted in diplomatic quarters as indicating possibly that Germany foresees no early fulfilment of the expressed hope for a quick settlement of the conflict.

Sixty-one members of the German commercial service in Greece arrived here. They had left Athens with the Italian legation staff.

Train service between Greece and Germany, which are separated by the length of Yugoslavia, has been at a standstill since the Italian-Greek outbreak.

British Drive Italians Out

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 7.—(AP)—British troops have recaptured Gallabat, on the Sudanese-Ethiopian frontier, from the Italians, British general headquarters in the Middle East announced today.

Gallabat is on the Sudan side of the line, about 75 miles west of Lake Gondar, Ethiopia. Italian troops moved into the town soon after Italy entered the war.

A British column early yesterday surprised and captured the town with the help of the Royal Air Force, imprisoning part of the garrison. Then, a communique stated, the Italians counter-attacked but this was successfully repulsed. Two heavy Italian bombings followed.

Farther north, in the Kassala sector in the Sudanese-Eritrean frontier, a British mobile unit is pressing an Italian force, the communique added.

Famous Church Hit

Air Raid Damage Light But Widespread

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—Sirens howled at noon today, giving London its first air raid alert of the day after the longest night alarm of the war.

The raiders dodged defenders in the clouds to scatter bombs on the London area and vapor trails high in the blue-patched sky coupled with the sound of diving and climbing planes told of a battle over the capital.

The alarm sounded a few moments after the noise of a dog-fight was heard. A lone Dornier (German) bomber dropped a stick of bombs on a southeast coast town a few hours earlier without causing any damage.

The all clear ended the first daylight alarm in London not long after the raiders were engaged by British fighters. Raiders later were reported over the Liverpool area.

A checkup after the long night raid showed that while damage was comparatively light it was more widespread than usual of late.

Damage Light.

An early morning checkup showed that while damage was comparatively light it was spread over more sections of England than for some time.

One bomb struck a famous London church, where a number of persons, including women and children, had sought refuge. There were some casualties but the number was not immediately known.

The raiders came singly and in groups of two and three, lighting their way under a hazy moon with flares and showers of fire-bombs.

The heavy bombers droned slowly and methodically over at a high altitude while fighter-bombers, flying much lower, streaked across the sky in an effort to beat the heavy barrage raised around the capital.

The government said "a number of people were killed and injured" in the attacks on London, during which "a block of flats was hit and damage done to houses, shops and other buildings."

Attacked Germany.

The Royal Air Force, meanwhile, was reported to have attacked "a number of objectives in Germany" during the night.

Shortly before daybreak, German long range guns on the French coast began pounding the Dover area across the windswept Channel. The explosions, continuing for more than two hours, rocked buildings.

Londoners, who have become familiar with the sound of German airplane motors, said there was a new sound overhead during the night, apparently indicating that Italian bombers participated in the attacks, which ranged across the Midlands, southern, southeastern and northeastern England and west Scotland.

In the last-named region, a bomb struck a hotel, burying the occupants and a passerby and killing five persons. In London, showers of incendiary bombs started numerous fires, keeping fire-fighters on the jump.

There were some lulls during the night and many Londoners left their shelters to go home to their own beds, continuing a fatalistic trend which has been increasingly

Night Life Is Underground

Gaiety Is Still To Be Found In London

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—London night life has gone underground and there is no indication the German Air Force will be able to stop Londoners from enjoying themselves at their favorite cabarets or restaurants. There still is gaiety in this old city, even though it is on a more restricted scale than before the air attacks against London began.

Some clubs provide shelters for patrons who wish to remain overnight rather than brave the terrors of a trek home during the nightly attacks.

Secrecy Cloaks Fate Of Liner

British Cruisers Thought To Be After Raider

NEW YORK, Nov. 7. — (CP). — Wartime secrecy cloaked to-day the fate of a British convoy reported to have been attacked in mid-Atlantic by a German raider.

Naval sources in London were silent and no claims came from Berlin, usually vociferous in claiming to have landed blows in the war at sea.

First word of the reported attack came Monday afternoon when the 16,698-ton liner Rangitiki and the freighter Cornish City wirelessed they were "being gunned" by an enemy ship of the Graf Spee type. Later, the wireless station at Portis Head, England, reported a convoy "still being leisurely attacked by a

Reds Advised To Arm, Be Prepared

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 7—(AP)—Defence Commissar Semeon Timoshenko urged the Red Army to display "maximum vigilance in an exceptionally alarming international situation" as Moscow turned over its Red Square today to the army for a review marking the 23rd anniversary of the Bolshevist Revolution.

Marshal Timochenko took advantag of the anniversary to show publicly for the first time how Soviet Russia has built up her armed forces under his six-month regime at a time when other large European nations have been at war.

Policy Declared

The Moscow Soviet at a meeting last night issued a statement declaring Russia's policy to be continued neutrality and armed vigilance.

"True to her policy of peace and neutrality," the statement said, "the U.S.S.R. will not participate in war. We must remember the international situation is full of surprises. Therefore, as Stalin has said, we must keep the entire nation in a state of military preparedness."

President Michael Kalinin, in a lengthy address at the meeting, warned that "the present international situation does not allow us to remain impartial onlookers."

"The situation," he said, "imposes responsible duties on every Soviet citizen. Our first and uppermost duty is further to consolidate the economic and defensive might of the Socialist fatherland."

Timoshenko, who succeeded Marshal Klementi Voroshiloff six months ago as defence commissar, called attention in an order of the day to the need for preparedness in "the face of danger of military attack so that no 'accident' and no tricks of our foreign enemies could catch us unawares."

Stronger Red Army

The order also urged further consolidation of Russia's economic and defensive might and demanded a

Announcer Denounced

ATHENS, Nov. 7 (AP) — The Greek announcer for the Berlin radio, identified by authorities here as Evangelos Kyriakis, was denounced in a formal resolution by members of his family for urging Greece not to fight Italy's invading army. Five members of the Kyriaks family now are in the front lines fighting Italy.

raider" at approximately the same position.

Silence from the Admiralty possibly meant British cruisers were attempting to run down the raider, much as the Royal Navy accounted for the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee off Uruguay last December. Germany has two pocket battleships remaining, the Luetzow (formerly the Deutschland) and the Admiral Scheer.

The Rome radio contributed to the mystery by claiming in a broadcast, heard here by the National Broadcasting Company: "The Cunard Liner Carpathia has been sunk." The Carpathia, which participated in the rescue of survivors of the Titanic disaster, was sunk during the First Great War and no ship of the same name is known to exist.

"The measures which will be submitted to you are such as seem necessary to my advisers for the welfare of the country, and for the prosecution of the war to the utmost of our strength."

Honorable members of the Senate:

Since last you met for deliberation, all countries have come to have a clearer conception of the magnitude of the present conflict and its menace to civilization.

Additional nations have been threatened with war, or have become involved in war. But little of freedom is now left in Europe. Force and fear have been supplemented by subtle intrigue.

International tension has been heightened by the formation of an alliance between the Axis powers and Japan.

While these events have added enormously to the uncertainties of the world situation, other events of even greater significance have served to confirm our confidence in the ultimate outcome of the struggle. First and foremost has been the magnificent resistance of the United Kingdom.

For four months, Britain has constituted the front line of battle against the forces of aggression. The spectacular advance of the enemy has been halted by the indomitable spirit of her people.

The destruction of freedom throughout Europe, has awakened, in the Western Hemisphere, a fuller consciousness of the Nazi menace. In the face of the common peril there has risen a closer association and an increasing measure of co-operation between the United States of America and the nations of the British Commonwealth.

You have been summoned at this time that opportunity may be afforded for the fullest consideration and discussion of Canada's war effort and of national problems which war has served to intensify or create. You will be fully advised of international developments; of Canada's co-operation with the United Kingdom, and of relations with the United States.

The measures which will be submitted to you are such as seem necessary to my advisers for the welfare of the country, and for the prosecution of the war to the utmos. of our strength.

You will be asked to make financial provision for expenditure caused by the state of war which now exists. The estimates for the current fiscal year will be duly submitted to you for your consideration and approval.

Honorable members of the Senate:

In the discharge of your very responsible duties may Divine Providence guide and bless your deliberations.

lated to four confidential documents which Kent allegedly took from the Embassy. He also was convicted of stealing one of these documents. The judge said he took into account in Kent's favor, the fact that the papers did not actually relate to naval or military movements.

Miss Wolkoff, a naturalized British subject, sent a code letter to "a traitor who broadcasts in Germany for the purpose of weakening the war efforts of this country," the judge said.

The judge commented that Miss Wolkoff probably was motivated by an "anti-Jewish obsession."

In two weeks a newspaper in Belfast, Northern Ireland, raised sufficient funds to buy seven bombing planes for the Government.

Wounded Doe Stabs Insurance Man In Battle

Victim Refuses Hospital Treatment

Lorne Bateman, well known softball player, fisherman, Kinsman, insurance man and what have you, has added new laurels to his crown. He is a deer wrestler, but he did not return unscathed from the battle, the deer stabbed him with Bateman's own hunting knife.

It all happened this way: Percy Killingbeck, Adam Sands, from the C.G.E., Bill Tompkins of Scarfes, and Lorne were on a deer hunting expedition in the wilds of southern Haliburton. Lorne was waiting on a runway when a big doe zipped by and Lorne toppled the deer with the first shot. As the animal dropped the hunter rushed over to cut its throat and bleed it. Just as he made the cut, the deer came to life, and sprang to its feet with Lorne hanging on its neck. A battle royal ensued, and in the melee the hunting knife gashed Bateman's hand, but the doughty insurance man won the wrestle.

His companions applied first aid, then rushed Lorne to the Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Wilberforce. Here they found two lovely nurses, and to add to Mr. Bateman's discomfiture, both nurses insisted that the patient stay in the hospital. Mr. Bateman said nothing doing, he only had a scratch and went back with the hunters.

Lorne argued that the reason the nurses wanted him to stay was because of the cut, but his colleagues were just as positive that it was the Bateman personality that had made the two lonely nurses go a little gaga, and so it went far into the night. Today Lorne is back on the job, and the hand is healing fast, but alas he has a new nickname: "Doeskin Bateman."

Expect Kennedy Will Return To London Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—Presaging action to reinforce United States foreign policies, President Roosevelt and State Secretary Cordell Hull today began re-checking the nation's diplomatic representation in European capitals.

As a result of the war and the consequently altered relationships with belligerent nations, there has been a considerable "turnover" among American ambassadors and ministers in Europe, necessitating a reshuffling soon and probably several changes in important posts.

Joseph Kennedy, ambassador to Britain, whose return to the United States produced reports he intended to resign, conferred with Hull yesterday but declined to discuss the future except to tell newspapermen he had "no plans."

Expected To Return

The President and Hull stated several times, prior to the election, that they had had no information that Kennedy would not return to London. Informed officials said today there had been no change in this situation and it was expected Kennedy would return to his post after a vacation from London's around-the-clock bombings.

Kennedy, however, has been mentioned as a possible chairman of the National Defence Committee, a position not yet filled by President Roosevelt.

The United States is now represented at the capitals of the four major Western European nations by charges d'affaires instead of the usual ambassadors.

Leland B. Morris, another foreign service career man, is charge d'affaires in Berlin, where the United States has not been represented by an ambassador since the recall two years ago of Hugh Wilson, now on special duty in the State Department. There has been no indication an ambassador to Germany would be named in the near immediate future.

Probably Not Return.

Edward L. Reed, counselor, is charge d'affaires in Rome during the absence of William Phillips, the ambassador, now on leave in Massachusetts. Phillips' health is reported so poor that he probably will not return to Rome. No one, however, has been mentioned as a possible successor.

Diplomatic observers here also do not expect William C. Bullitt, ambassador to France, to return to Vichy. H. Freeman Matthews, secretary of the Embassy, is acting as charge d'affaires.

Since the United States still recognizes Poland, it was expected that Anthony Drexel Biddle, now here on leave, will rejoin the Polish government now established in London as American ambassador.

Ickes Tenders Resignation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Harold Ickes, United States Interior Secretary, submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt today offering to step out of his interior department post when and if President Roosevelt chooses to accept it.

Ickes told a press conference he rejoiced in Mr. Roosevelt's re-election and in offering to resign acted only to give the President a free hand should he desire to make a cabinet change.

Ickes acted similarly after the President's re-election in 1936, as is customary, but not all his colleagues in the cabinet followed suit.

"I for one," Ickes said, "believe the president should be left free at the beginning of a new administration to reshuffle, recreate or do anything he pleases with his official family, especially in view of the mighty task ahead of him."

53 Years a "Vet"

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 7—(CP)—Dr. William Nicholls, said to be the oldest practicing graduate veterinarian in Canada, celebrated his 86th birthday yesterday by making a trip through the surrounding district to treat horses. He has been practising here the last 53 years.

Dr. Nicholls said that livestock today are healthier and of better grade than the stock of 50 years ago.

WHERE SHOULD A LAXATIVE WORK FIRST?

Most constipation occurs low in the intestinal tract, in the big bowel. Yet many people still take calomel, salts and oils—which all start action at some entirely different place in the bowels—then wonder why they feel "upset!" It's better to use CHOCOLATE FLAVOR CASCARETS. Made with cascara, which is said to give "nearest to natural action" of any cathartic. CHOCOLATE FLAVOR CASCARETS work right in the big bowel—cleansing and giving relief in 10 to 12 hours. Each foil-wrapped tablet a dose. Twelve tablets, only 25c. Taste like fine milk chocolate. Young People's Club Formed At Bonarlaw

BONARLAW, Nov. 7 — (ENS)— A splendid meeting and demonstration was held at the home of Mrs. J. M. Barlow by the Springbrook Women's Institute on Wednesday afternoon, October 30.

Mrs. Grenville Meiklejohn and Mrs. W. J. Barlow, who attended the local leader training school recently at Marmora gave a demonstration of three vegetable salads which was most instructive. Mrs. Meiklejohn, from a chart arranged by herself, explained the nutritive value of vegetables and their importance in the family menus. Individual salad was prepared and served by these leaders along with bread nd butter, cookies and tea. While the salads were being prepared community singing was enjoyed by the members and a contest was put on by Mrs. W. Heath.

A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess, Mrs. J. M. Barlow, for so kindly opening her home for this special meeting and also the leaders, Mrs. Meiklejohn and Mrs. W. J. Barlow for their splendid demonstration.

Officers Elected.

At an organization meeting held in the Sunday School Rooms of St. Mark's Church on Monday evening a Young People's Club was formed with the following officers: Carl Heath, president; Ronald Brown, vice-president; Miss Iva Brown, secretary-treasurer. Meetings will be held on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. At the last meeting in November a supper will be held and a program presented. The following committee was appointed to look after arrangements: Misses Jean Barlow and Marion Richardson, and Ronald Brown and J. F. Baker.

Corpl. Charles Barnard, now with the Veterans' Guard in Ottawa is visiting his family here for several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Ferguson and family have moved from the house recently occupied on the 12th Line of Rawdon to Shanick, eight miles north of Marmora.

A number of hunters from this vicinity have departed for the hunting grounds of North Hastings, and reports have already been received of various successes.

Sikorski Lauds Chamberlain's Great Courage

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP [illegible]).—An exchange of letters between Gen. Vladyslaw Sikorski, Prime Minister of the Polish Government in exile, and Neville Chamberlain, at the time of the latter's resignation as Prime Minister, was made public to-day.

Gen. Sikorski, in the name of the Polish Government, paid tribute to the former Prime Minister for high qualities of courage. He wrote:

"Your name is bound with the declaration of war on Germany when, seeking a pretext to create a world conflict, she wantonly attacked Poland.

"The more deeply you desired peace the more difficult it was for you to take the decision. But you took it, and by this action alone your name will always be remembered in the course of history.

"We Poles, while we remember all that was at stake from the very beginning of the struggle, will be for ever grateful to you for the loyal fulfilment of the treaty of alliance between our two countries."

Mr. Chamberlain replied in part:

"If we had stood aside and seen Poland overrun without having lifted a finger to aid her we should have failed in our duty to humanity. As it was we were, unhappily, unable to save Poland from the invader, but I am convinced her new martyrdom will not have been in vain.

"We have made her cause our cause, and I rejoice to think that under your wise and courageous leadership the Polish forces in all three arms are fighting beside us and daily winning fresh laurels in the struggle.

"I trust we may both live to see the victory which I am convinced will be won by our countries and that a free and independent Poland may then take her place once more amongst the nations of Europe."

Britain Has Renewed Confidence Of Her Friends

LONDON, Nov. 7 — (CP). — For about four months now the British Empire virtually single-handed, has been standing up to the combined power of the two great military dictatorships of Europe.

More, indeed, than standing up. It has continued to wage against them an economic offensive. It has launched and sustained the great air offensive against Nazi Germany's power of waging war. It has reinforced its strength in the "Second Front," the Middle East.

Yet when France collapsed, there were many, not only among our enemies, but among our friends in neutral countries who thought Britain could not be expected to stand alone against the two combined dictatorships.

But there were in fact reasons enough for anxiety—reasons which became acute when there was a prospect that the French navy would fall into German hands.

The New World felt itself threatened. It appeared to many there that the British Navy could not retain control of the Atlantic, and Britain herself, with her Air Force outnumbered and her Army without equipmetnt, seemed to lie open to invasion.

Confidence Restored.

To-day the confidence of our friends is restored. It has been demonstrated—and this is perhaps the outstanding feature of this phase of the war—that the British base is safe. The British Isles will not fall.

What has brought about this astonishing change in the situation? In the widest sense it is to the co-operation of the three fighting services that must be attributed the Empire's power to continue the struggle. The Navy has continued to control sea communications and to it is owed not only Britain's food supply, but armaments in the manufactured form and as raw materials.

It has maintained, at the same time, the stranglehold of the blockade and, with the Air Force, has made attempts at invasion prohibitively dangerous except to fanatics rushing to their doom.

The R.A.F. has contributed largely to making naval operations and movements of shipping possible in waters where they are exposed to air attack.

It has repulsed air attacks which might have destroyed British industry and has greatly reduced the losses that otherwise would have been suffered from air bombardment.

The Army has been re-armed and reorganized. The Home Guard has sprung into existence and has been equipped. Ground defences against air attack have also been multiplied.

Powerful Defensive.

Britain has, in fact, built up an immensely powerful defensive line—one which depends for its strength as much on human material as on steel and concrete.

Britain must not, however, fall victim to the Maginot complex and become obsessed solely with the problem of defending a base. The actions being carried out by the Royal Air Force and the Navy are healthy signs that the offensive spirit is retained.

But the importance of the Empire's outposts must not be forgotten in determination to defend the base.

Egypt and the Middle East have become almost as important a theatre of operations as Britain itself. Imperial security there is of vital importance, and there also may arise the opportunity not only of frustrating the enemy's intentions but of striking back.

Looking back on these four months, the Empire has made an amazing recovery both in itself and in the world's estimation. Is it surprising that confidence has been restored, and that neutral opinion has been impressed?

The moral and material assistance which the Empire's efforts have won from its friends is perhaps the most reassuring tribute that could be paid to them.

Relief Crop Yields 1,400 Bags Of Potatoes

Become one of the least of the city council's worries, unemployment relief expenditure in October amounted to $2,226.44 as compared with $6,730.32 for the same month last year and with the peak October total of $13,317.17 in 1935.

Alderman Dutton's committee in a twenty minute session last night had nothing to do except receive reports and pass accounts, and hear the grateful information that the summer gardening scheme had been highly productive of vegetables. The yield of potatoes was estimated at 1,400 bags, and at the present average price of $1 a bag that bulky part of the crop was worth $1,400, with only $284 in expenses to be charged against the community enterprise.

The chairman recalled to the committee that the worst year of unemployment was 1933 with 789 families receiving assistance, or nearly 5,000 persons, between 15 and 20 per cent of Peterborough's population.

"We hope that condition never comes again," Alderman Bradburn remarked.

The Vegetable Crop

A. G. Metheral, relief officer, told the committee that he had based his estimate of the output of the community gardens on the average returns to a group of workers whose lot production had been carefully listed. There were 137 lots on the city's communal farm near the isolation hospital and 48 lots planted by people at their own homes.

The details of the harvest were as follows: 1,400 bags of potatoes, 370 pecks of onions, 925 bunches of onions, 370 pecks of beans, 467 pecks of carrots, 92 pecks of radishes, 1,387 cabbages, 277 bushels of tomatoes and 185 pecks of cucumbers.

The committee decided to prepare for continuance of gardening operations next year instead of letting the land lie idle and fall into weed. The north end farm of 8 1-3 acres has already been plowed. Alderman Stocker was asked to have parks committee employees cut away piles of twitch grass, and Mr. Metheral was instructed to have the ground harrowed and raked as a further means of trying to clear the property of this grass.

Alderman Dutton said the council was well repaid by the fruit of the season's work, and although there had been some occasions of doubt the majority of the community gardeners had done a good job.

Substantial Surplus

The committee enters the eleventh month of the year with $16,946.12 left of its appropriation of $38,000. General employment continues at a high level, and on the basis of October's relief bill of $2,226 it is felt that the committee will turn back to the treasury a surplus of $12,000 or $13,000.

Ten months' relief expenditure in Peterborough has cost $70,902.59; and of that sum the Ontario government refunds $46,771.86 and the Ontario Medical Association contributes $3,076.85, the combined rebate being $49,848.71, leaving the charge to the city at $21,053.88. Subtracting this sum from the council's appropriation of $38,000, the remainder for the last two months of the year is $16,946.12, an exceedingly comfortable margin.

October Report

Mr. Metheral reported 259 persons on relief last month as against 1,187 in October 1939. Comparative figures were as follows:

	1939	1940
Family heads	285	53
Dependents	838	143
Single men	28	18
Single women	56	45
	1187	259

The per capita cost was up from $5.67 in October last year to $8.59 a person last month.

The Voting In U.S.

There is one feature of United States presidential elections which is not easy for Canadians to understand. That is, the president is actually elected by the results of voting in the various states of the union. If Mr. Roosevelt were to get even a single vote majority in a state, then he would be credited with having won that state and would be entitled to all the electoral college votes credited to it.

The figures which we are using here may be subject to revision, but they will give the general idea. New York State has 47 electoral college votes, there being a total of 531 for the entire republic. The vote in New York was:

But receiving that many votes did not actually do Mr. Willkie any good service at all, because Mr. Roosevelt had the majority, and therefore he is credited with the entire 47 electoral college votes, and it is the possession of those 47 votes which actually counts in naming the president.

Those 2,217,525 popular votes credited to Mr. Willkie in New York State cannot be made use of to help his cause in any other state. The candidate either wins or looses the entire state vote.

The newspapers of United States are making the best of it. The majority of them were opposed to Roosevelt and his third term, and they were outspokenly in favor of Willkie, the Republican candidate. Charles Stewart, whose articles from Washington appear frequently on this page, said that 75 per cent. of the correspondents at Washington were in favor of Willkie.

Press comment shows that American editors are content that the election is over; they say the people themselves made the choice and they are willing to accept it. They turn abruptly to the world war and say that nothing can divide American opinion on that issue.

The Seattle Times, an independent paper, stated the case well when it said:

"He (Roosevelt) thus becomes your leader and my leader regardless of how we voted. All Americans intend to stand behind their chosen leader. It will be a sad day for the foreigner who dares to presume otherwise."

A good deal of the Willkie campaign was pointed toward keeping United States out of the war; that was actually the chief issue of the Republicans, although we have found no person who suggests that United States shall enter the war.

That President Roosevelt should have been able to break down the prejudice against a third term is evidence enough that the majority of the people in United States approve of him. In this country we feel that in some way we know him and for that reason are aware of the person with whom we are dealing in international affairs.

Do They All Speak English?

Gunther Kray, a German naval officer, escaped from a northern internment camp by getting inside of a wooden crate which was afterward nailed up and carried to a freight train. After that the officer kicked off the slats and went to the railway station where he bought a ticket to Toronto. He was going to buy another to Montreal when he was arrested. The slip-up came when he tried to get some change for English currency. Kray did not take his arrest seriously; said he had seen a little of the outside world and had 16 hours of freedom which he appreciated.

In nearly every case where a German internee has escaped and been recaptured there is something said to the effect that he spoke English. Most of them are reported as speaking good English, and occasionally one is said to speak the tongue with a German accent.

But apparently they all speak English of some kind or other, and it is just as difficult for a German to learn English as it is for us to learn to speak German correctly. It is easier to write the German language than it is for one to learn to speak it accurately.

One is left wondering at times how it is that virtually all of these Germans speak English since the backbone of the Nazi program is that German language, habits, customs, domination and all else must be given first place. They are farther advanced as linguists than we are in Canada where the great majority of our people will speak English or they will speak French and nothing else. The number of our people who speak two or more languages is very small.

Better Forget About It

Premier Hepburn answered a question rather sensibly when he said there was no prospect of a provincial election in 1941. The last election was late in the year 1937, on October 6 to be exact, and if thought best the term can run for five years.

We often wonder who it is that runs about asking questions regarding an election being brought on. If it is a reporter then his city editor should know there is plenty of news to fill the paper without bringing that old question out for an airing.

The people of Ontario do not want an election in 1941, and we know of no good or sufficient reason why one should be held. We cannot but approve of the outlook of Mr. Hepburn when he announced no new provincial taxation because the Federal Government should have the right-of-way to the pockets of the people for war expenditure. So why not drop this talk of a provincial election in 1941? There is not going to be one so talking about it just a trifle silly.

Britain Was Much Interested

There is not room for any doubt regarding British feeling about the re-election of President Roosevelt. The cables coming from London explain, and quite properly we think, that the people in Britain had no feeling against Wendell Willkie but they had been dealing with Franklin D. Roosevelt during the greatest crisis in their history and had found him reliable and helpful.

London newspapers are more definite in their views than anything we have seen in Canada. For several weeks news of the elections in United States has actually been overshadowing news of the war. It had become a topic of common interest.

It is not difficult to see that British appreciation of the assistance which has been coming from United States is more outspoken than ours. It is because Britain is right at the war front; it is on the battlefield and knows exactly how great has been the need for supplies and equipment.

Beaverbrook's Evening Standard declared that "President Roosevelt's re-election will cause the blackest day Berlin has known since the beginning of the war. The great industrial power of the Western hemisphere dedicates itself to our cause because the American people have learned from their leader his own faith in freedom, his spirit of daring, and his knowledge of the vast ramifications of this conflict."

There is a point of view there which the people of Canada might note, and that is the outspoken appreciation in Britain of what President Roosevelt and his people have done so far in this war, and there is also what we regard as the justified expectation that much more will be done. Perhaps never has Britain watched an election with such interest as that which took place in United States on October 5. And certainly we cannot recall any occasion on which the rejoicing has been as sincere.

London's New Cases

The people of London and of Britain in general like to have disputes settled in court. They appear to be convinced that is what courts are for, and in recent times there have been new cases brought in.

Of one variety there have been many, and they all have to do with the amount of rent a tenant should or should not pay. There has been damage done to the house by a bomb and the tenant has had to move out while the mess was being cleared up. Again there has been a delayed action bomb reported in the vicinity and the air wardens have notified the tenants to leave at once. Tenants do not think they should pay for premises while they have been unable to use them, and in that contention they are finding success. One judgment reasoned that: "When tenants are ordered to leave or have to leave for say a week or more there is a frustration of the contract which relieves a tenant of the liability to pay rent while he is so absent from his house."

That phrase about a "frustration of the contract" is so nicely formed that one might never suspect it had its origin in a bomb-deluged community.

It Looks Like a Crush

Hon. Mr. Justice W. M. Martin discussed the matter of rentals with those who came to his open session in Kingston. Places for people to stay have not grown as rapidly in that city as the number of those who desire to do the staying. The old law of supply and demand has caused the situation to tilt in favor of the landlords.

We are not tempted to review all the cases, but one seemed to stand up something like a sore thumb. One lady sought to have rent increased from $35 to $45 per month. Apparently the house is used for the purpose of keeping roomers, and when we read of 17 being on the premises we were sure of it. Some of the occupants were sleeping in the basement, and others when they topple over at the close of day into the arms of Morpheus do so in the dining room.

So the argument was that there should be something allowed for wear and tear on the premises, and our belief and experience is that 17 paying guests would do considerable wearing and perhaps an undetermined amount of tearing. Experience of other years in boarding houses leads to speculative suspicion regarding the volume and speed of traffic toward the bathroom door. When there are 17 requiring the varied and kindly services of that compartment congestion is apt to be frequent upon the way and the wear upon the highway or the detours leading to it must of necessity assume a major proportion.

Mr. Justice Martin would need the wisdom which was at one time the chief stock-in-trade of Solomon to so adjust the scales of monetary justice to the point where they would register fairness for the landlord, the tenant and the 17 occupants.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In case you never hear of him again—the vice-president of United States is Henry A. Wallace.

London has been hit before. Back in 1666 there were 13,200 houses destroyed by fire in three days.

A St. Catharines boy of 17 was trying to open a safe in Niagara Falls when he was shot by a policeman. Was that necessary?

The former home of the former King Zog in Albania has been hit and damaged, but the former king wasn't in his former home.

Several speakers in Montreal have been advising that Ontario ought to learn to speak the French language. What's the use? The landlord doesn't understand it.

Call has gone out for more trumpeters for the Canadian army. They are necessary of course, but we recall the time when we were always certain they got up about an hour too early in the morning.

ADVICE

¶ I read a magazine today, about the one successful way, for man to hit his stride; one needed not to fume and guess, there was a straight way to success, a steady sort of ride.

¶ One had to discipline himself, if he attained success or wealth, no chance for him who's shirk; he had to measure out his day, and narrow down the hours of play, and concentrate on work.

¶ From daylight to the hours of dark, a man should follow out a chart, his movements should be timed; his energy should be applied, so he could keep an even stride, and never lag behind.

¶ When one worked fast and got ahead, and saw an extra hour in bed, he wasn't really through; he couldn't stop to take a nap, some other jobs should be on tap, new things for him to do.

¶ When came the new day in the dawn, there was no time to stretch and yawn, for those who would succeed; he should arise right on the dot, he could not hesitate or stop, he must have skill and speed.

¶ I read the thing like how I should, and thought the warning rather good, might try the thing some day; I found the chair that I like best, sat down a while to snooze and rest—and laid the thing away.

TORONTO is particularly proud of the way in which it carries on its war-effort, and with cause. We were not aware, however, that feeling in the Queen City was so intense before last week, when we paid it a flying visit. Walking along Bloor street we came upon a crowd of citizens standing in quiet and reverent attitude on both side of the road. An incorrigible gawper, we joined them and ourselves assumed an air of watchful waiting. The obect of their rapt contemplation appeared to be the large building which is the headquarters of the Red Cross War Services; four patrol police, a motorcycle policeman and a mounted policeman were busily keeping the crowd away from the door of the building and from obstructing traffic. By dint of some strategic shoving we made our way to the curb opposite the main doors and waited patiently for fifteen minutes. Nothing happened except that a few obviously favored persons made their way through the crowd and entered the building, and a party of girls in the uniform of the Red Cross Transport Department marched out and formed a guard of honor at the main door.

C & B

Tiring of this silent vigil, we turned to the lady who stood next to us and enquired what was expected to happen. "It's Madeleine Carrol," she replied; "she's going to have tea in there at four o'clock." As it was then twenty-five minutes past three, we hastily left the scene and hurriedly performed our business further down the street. When we returned the crowd had increased, and the expectant hush was now almost visible on the chill air. At ten minutes to four rumors began to fly about that Miss Carrol was coming, and every car that was not actually a jallopy which appeared on Bloor street was declared to be hers. At four precisely there arrived from the Jarvis street corner that magnificent limousine which Toronto maintains for the use of its Mayor; it halted in front of the Red Cross Building, there was a brief flash of photographers' lights, and Miss Carrol was already inside, and probably sipping tea. But did the crowd disperse? Not a bit of it; they were philosophers; they knew that Miss Carrol must leave the building some time, and they meant to see her do it. They stayed. We did not; we hastened away to tea ourselves.

C & B

When we passed that way again, about an hour and a half later, the crowd was still standing patiently in the dusk, waiting for Miss Carrol to come out. We waited too. After all, we had had tea ourselves, probably a lot more than Miss Carrol was having, and we knew that she must come out soon. She did. This time she was less bashful. She appeared on the arm of Toronto's Mayor, who seemed to feel his position keenly, waved, smiled, cried "Hello!" and stepped into the limousine. This left the crowd perfectly satisfied; they moved away in groups of two and three, and on each face was a look of perfect fulfilment, the look of a mystic whose devotion has at last been vouchsafed a vision. We moved away too, marvelling at the patience and good nature with which a crowd of three hundred Torontonians had assisted Madeleine Carrol in her war effort.

THE Astronomer Royal has recently announced his belief that there are beginnings of life on the planet Venus; things are happening there, he says, very like what happened here a million years ago. He thinks that life may occur on Venus as it eventually did here. A pessimist might question whether this was good luck for Venus, considering the way life has been going on here during the last few hundred years. The same authority, whose name is Mr. Spencer Jones, says that life on Mars is nearly extinct, and that we may look forward to a similar fate after several million years. Personally we find this information cheering; it might almost be described as a note of quiet hope. We are at least more alive than Venus, and it will be a long time before we are as dead as Mars, so our present situation, though unenviable, at least presents a future of infinite possibilities.

C & B

Considering that there is a war on and that we might reasonably hope to be cheered up by our entertainers, the present crop of popular songs is rather depressing. In one night of listening-in last week we heard "Come to Me my Melancholy Baby," "There Shall Be No Night" and a sad little piece called "When the Leaves Bid the Trees Good-Bye." These ditties produced in us a deep gloom, particularly aggravated by the fact that they were heard on a program advertising a stomich remedy. The announcer urged his audience to use it "Next time you over-indulge" with a gloating knowledge that we would over-indulge, and might even be doing it as we listened to him. It made us feel that we were poor creatures, slaves of gluttony and intemperance. Why doesn't somebody write a cheerful song? We remember one from last season about three littles fishes; it had a chorus which went, as nearly as we can recollect—"Boop boop diddem dadden waddem Choo!" It didn' mean much, but it was cheerful an immensely stimulating. It was the modern equivalent of the "Hey nonny nonny" with which our more musical ancestors used to drive dull care away. Perhaps we don't understand modern taste as well as we think we do, but it seems to us that this is just the moment for a good frivolous song with a catchy tune, that we can all sing every night after the final news bulletin has been broadcast.

Letters To The Editor

LEST WE FORGET

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Monday next is Remembrance Day for soldiers and civilians alike, also for the lads that laid down their lives for freedom and the ones that are making poppies to be sold on Remembrance Day that are crippled and blind.

I would ask you to remember these soldiers when someone aproaches you to buy a poppy for Remembrance Day. The money received for poppies is all used for welfare work.

I would ask you to bear in mind that there is a new army, and Nov. 11th is as much to these men now serving as any of the old vets that went and did what they could; 63,000 of them were killed; 15,000 wounded. There are returned men in this community who are not able to work hard now and for no other reason than the last war.

On Remembrance Day we wear a poppy. It is called the flower of remembrance because it grows in large numbers on the battlefields where our poor comrades now lie.

When buying a poppy please remember what the Legion has done for returned men and what it will be expected to do for the men who are now serving their country as we hope these men will see the day when Hitler will be driven from the face of the earth. In conclusion I would ask you, every one to do everything in your power to win this war.

A VETERAN.

TIME TO WAKE UP

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The editorial in The Examiner of October 23 regarding Mr. Woodsworth and the C.C.F. cannot be allowed to pass unchallenged, as the statements made therein are not in accordance with the facts.

Last fall, when the Dominion Parliament declared war against Germany Mr. Woodsworth stood up alone and refused to endorse the declaration. The other six C.C.F. members of the House supported the declaration. Since that event the C.C.F. has continued to carry on its usual activities, inside and outside parliament.

During Mr. Woodsworth's illness and consequent inability to take any part in C.C.F. work, the work has proceeded as usual under the competent chairmanship of Mr. Coldwell.

The C.C.F. did not originate with Mr. Woodsworth, but is the outgrowth of the ideas of European, British and other radical thinkers, long before Mr. Woodsworth's time, which have been adopted in more or less modified form in other countries as well as in Canada.

In short, there is not the flimsiest kind of foundation for The Examiner's assertion that the C.C.F. without Mr. Woodsworth would be like a watch minus its mainspring. But, either without or with Mr. Woodsworth, the C.C.F. could quite justly be compared to an up-to-date alarm clock, that some day soon may succeed in awakening the people of Canada to a proper realization of the hopelessness of expecting anything in the shape of substantial and lasting improvment in conditions from either of the old parties, which are both still in bondage to the antiquated ideas belonging to the sundial era.

• Premier's Fine Onion Salesmanship

MITCH HEPBURN'S Bannockburn Farm onion crop has been sold to agriculturists who came from far and near to watch the plowing matches but soon found themselves bargaining for ten-pound bags of tear jerkers grown by Ontario's onion king.

If it is true that in four days the farmers bought 15 500 bags it is proof that the provincial Premier has more than platform appeal. Imagine selling 78 tons of onions to farmers who could grow them on their own acres. That's salesmanship of a kind to make George S. Henry weep.

Unwittingly, Mitch may be setting a fashion which will revolutionize present day electioneering. The hackneyed "Have a cigar" may even now be on the way to the scrap heap to be replaced by the stream-lined, modern "Buy a bag of onions." It is impossible to estimate the results of anything so revolutionary. When buying his onions from the candidates every citizen would have the double satisfaction of knowing that not only was he providing wholesome food for his family but contributing to cleaner elections as well. Certainly, it would help defray election expenses and for this future generations of politicians would look upon our Premier as their patron saint.

The campaigning potentialities of onions are, of course, immense. Apart altogether from the effect of these herbs in their raw state upon the emotions of people, they also afford amazing opportunities for rousing slogans. We can well imagine a rallying cry in the mouth of Mitch such as "Onions and Ottawa" or "On to Ottawa with Onions" quickly clearing the capital of the last vestiges of anti-Hepburn sentiment.

The manner in which the farmers attending the plowing matches snapped up the onions at Bannockburn Farm is clear proof that they are waiting for Mitch to produce another election and a new election cry Onions appears to be as good a subject as any.—Toronto Telegram.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb....

And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. —Rev. vii: 9, 10, 13, 14.

Canada's Role Is Increasing

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Nov. 7—(CP)—Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's minister of aircraft production, believes Canada will take a role of increasing importance in the struggle against Germany and Italy.

In a letter to W. R. Givens, former president of the Kingston, Ont., Whig-Standard and an old friend of the minister, who is living here, Lord Beaverbrook wrote recently.

"The key position which Canada holds in the present struggle will not have escaped your notice. It seems likely, too, that the strategic importance of the Dominion will become more marked as the war goes on. Everything points that way. We are witnessing another long advance in the development of the country."

Praising the leadership of Prime Minister Churchill as "equal to the hour," and assuring that "we shall not be beaten by any crack in the national morale," Lord Beaverbrook wrote: "Canada will be proud of the stock from which her people spring."

He said the Battle of Britain rages "with violence," and added: "But the people are sustained by the fighting power of the air force and by the knowledge that the British communities over the seas watch the course of the struggle with sympathy and send us help of the most valuable kind."

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat. After telling him her father is in the penitentiary for murder, Lona learns the stranger's name is Jim Claridge. He obtains a hotel room for her and promises to call her next day.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER FOUR

SHABBY and commonplace as it was, the hotel room was almost unbelievable luxury to Lona after Mrs. Peterman's and the park bench. Brushing her curling brown hair before the dresser mirror, she wondered what her father would say if he could see her now, and what he would think if he knew she had taken money from a strange man. She would never tell him, she decided.

In her letters these last three months she had never breathed a word about being out of work, or the sickening tramp, tramp of the streets that had been grinding her shoes to pieces and her soul to shreds. She hadn't the heart to add to his already too heavy burden. Especially when it couldn't have done the slightest good.

She had seen her father only once since that black day six years ago, when the gates of the gray prison at the state capital had clicked on his bowed head. He had permitted her only one visit.

"I can't stand to have you see me here," he had told her sadly, and she would never forget the sight of his white face shining against the drab plainness of the tiny prison sitting room, a face already touched, after only a month's absence from her, with the slowness of expression she had learned to associate with prison bars. "You're not to come again," he had commanded her, in his quiet voice.

She had stared at him unbelievingly.

"But, daddy!" she had burst out. "I've got to come! Surely you can't mean you don't want to see me?"

"I can't stand it, Lona, I tell you!" The pain in his eyes had cut her to the heart. "You're too young and too unspoiled to be coming to this place. I want you to try and forget me. And you must leave Bridgewater, too. I'll never be satisfied until I know you are away from it all. I want you to go to the city. Start over where nobody knows you and about—me. You're young and strong and you'll find work. And maybe there'll be a young man some day soon, and he mustn't connect you up with—all this. Don't you see, Lona, girl?"

She had nodded, unable to speak. In her heart she knew he was right. She hadn't told him that, since the trial that had put him in prison, all Bridgewater had been watching her, talking, whispering behind their hands. She had never intended to let him know that. But he had guessed. Poor daddy!

After that visit to him, she had sold the furniture in the old house where she had lived ever since she could remember. And with every piece of it, there had seemed to go something out of her heart.

When it had been reduced to a few pitiful dollars, she had gone to the city as her father had wanted her to do. She remembered herself, a raw, wistful little girl with brown hair and sad blue eyes, walking into the beehive of a big city office with the letter her father's lawyer had given her clutched in her hand.

That letter had secured her a job. Work had been plentiful then. And she was really a competent stenographer. Daddy had seen to that. He had been a teacher in the business school back in Bridgewater, and he had just finished testing her on her last lesson in shorthand when—it happened!

Her hand relaxed on the hairbrush now, as she recalled the first time she had taken dictation in the Ardmore offices. Old Stephen Ardmore had read her letter of introduction, and looked her over with kindly understanding in his wrinkled face. Then he had given her a pad and began to rattle off a test letter in his gruff voice, a letter like the familiar ones her father had run through with her night after night. As she set had down the well-learned pothooks and dashes it had taken all her self-control to keep from flinging the pad from her and bursting into tears. Only the realization that she must write to her father, and that she couldn't tell him she had failed him and his teaching, made her stick to it.

In the five years she remained with Stephen Ardmore, she never took the cover from her typewriter of a morning or listened to the familiar, "Yours of the 4th instance received . . ." that she did not think of her father and the tragedy that had come into her life.

It had been a dreary, lonely time, that five years. She had been afraid to make friends, among her fellow office workers. Afraid of the things they must be thinking of her when they—found out. The memory of the whispers, and curt looks, and the back-fence gossip of Bridgewater was etched too deeply into her young mind to allow her to risk any further hurt. And the "young man" of whom her father had spoken so hopefully that awful day at the prison did not materialize.

Two or three of the boys at the office noticed her, to be sure. She was too vivid, with her flying brown halo of curls, and the solemn depth to her blue eyes, not to pique the curiosity of every young man with whom she came in contact. But the memory of that beast her father had killed stalked her in every pair of masculine eyes into which she looked.

HE had been friendly and smiling, too, at first. He had joked with her, and called her "Baby" in a husky, teasing voice, the way Jack Foster, the lanky clerk here at Ardmore's tried to do. And he had asked her many a time to go to the movies with him back in Bridgewater just as respectfully as did Tim Evans from the office sales department here in the city. And then she had turned—beastly! And it had cost him his life, and her father his freedom. No, there was no trust left in her for any man!

So that it came to her with a little shock as she sat, now, before the hotel mirror, that she hadn't felt that way about Jim Claridge. Was it, perhaps, because she had been so terribly up against it when he had come upon her, that there was no room for mistrust, or was it because he had been so sympathetic about her father?

She still remembered, with a sick feeling, the day, only six months after she had come to Ardmore's, when she had come upon Tim Evans passing around an old newspaper with an account of her father's trial on its front page. He had reddened when she saw it, and had tried to assure her that it did not matter.

But after that there had been a new boldness in his eyes when he looked at her, and a new familiarity in his voice when he almost demanded that she go out with him. It had been necessary to quit speaking to him to keep him in his place, and after that there had spread over the whole office the same whispers and smiles and averted faces that had been her lot in Bridgewater.

Suppose it had been Tim Evans who had come upon her in the park tonight? The thought sent a shiver down her back and made her draw her worn dressing gown tighter about her shoulders. He would not have given her a meal and rented her this room, and pressed money into her hand, without asking for his—reward! Neither would Jack Foster, the Ardmore clerk. He had been even worse than Tim! Old Stephen Ardmore himself was the only man she could have trusted as she was trusting this—Jim. Old Stephen, who was dead now, almost a year. She wouldn't have believed that any young man could be so disinterested.

For a long time she sat there staring at her own somber, blue-eyed reflection, a wave of perplexing doubts gripping her. Perhaps, after all, he'd expect her to—pay. Maybe tomorrow. This kindness might be only a new kind of approach. Why should any man spend his money on a strange girl? How could he know she was telling the truth? Perhaps he thought she would never find work, and was only sitting back, waiting. . . .

"No!" she told herself solemnly, at last. "He's got eyes like Tiny. He couldn't be anything but straight. I can trust him. I've got to trust him. I can't go back to the park!"

After she had turned off the light and stretched out on the lumpy bed, she kept saying it over and over to herself . . . I've got to trust him. . . . I can't go back to the park.

With that refrain running through her mind, she fell asleep finally, and dreamed that she was back home in the old days when she had Tiny, the spaniel, to love

Sinues Of War From Sturgeon

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—(CP). — Even the sturgeon in Canada's lakes and rivers has a place in the war effort and this year they will be responsible for purchase of at least a piece of a warplane. In other words, and according fisheries department experts, Canada has a good market for caviar in the United States.

If Ontario production is up as production is reported to be in Manitoba, the Dominion will get at least $7,000 in United States money to use for war buying. Caviar usually sells for $1 a pound and this year prices are rising.

Two factors enter into this tasty situation. First there are the prospects of a shortage for caviar eaters in the U.S. because the war has interfered with importations from Russia. Second, Manitoba expects to ship to the United States this year more than 2,400 pounds of the delectable little fish eggs, 900 pounds more than last year. Last year Manitoba shipped 1,512 pounds and Ontario sent 4,870 pounds to the United States. These two provinces are the big Canadian producers.

FIVE TEAMS STILL IN THE RUNNING FOR LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Big Four Race Becomes Ace Contest

(By the Canadian Press.)

Eight senior football teams in the East were due to hold their last scrimmages today in preparation for matches Saturday which bring the regular schedules to a close in the section.

Most of the teams will have a day off tomorrow, or else go through light running drills, for coaches do not like to work their charges too hard on the day before a game.

Five of the teams still have a chance to emerge as sectional champions. In the Ontario Rugby Football Union, Toronto Balmy Beach and Sarnia 2-26th Battery are still eligible, while in the Big Four Ottawa Roughriders, Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tigers are still in the running.

The Beaches and the Sarnians are assured of the two playoff spots in the O.R.F.U. The Beaches, only undefeated team in the East, have won all five of their games while the Soldiers have six points to their credit, four better than the third place Hamilton alerts.

But while things are pretty clear cut in the O.R.F.U. a battle is being waged in the Big Four. The way things stand now the Riders lead with eight points, Argonauts have six and Tigers have four with one game left to complete the schedule.

Tigers can gain a tie for second place by beating Riders this week, provided Montreal's last place club defeats Toronto at the same time. Argonauts have the same chance to tie for first place, in the event they win over Montreal and the Tigers defeat Ottawa.

However, the majority of football fans believe that both the Riders and Argonauts will win, ending up the season in first and second place respectively and starting their playoff the following week.

Miss Mary Sisson Bowls 352 For Record Single

Bigger scores continued to be the slogan of the women who bowl in league games at Duffus Alleys. During yesterday and Tuesday no less than four of them tossed the five-pins far and wide for hefty three-game totals while another pair of huge singles were rolled off. When Isobel Glover of the De Laval chalked up 324 for one game on Monday it was thought it was one game that would stay for the week until Mary Sisson and Marg Hawthorne of the Westclox said no. Miss Hawthorne shook it with a 323 and Miss Sisson came along yesterday to wheel off a 352 in her splendid 731 total.

S. Curry of the Mercantile men shot an 809 to lead the male section. 321 and 301 games carried him into top place for the two days. Jim O'Dette of the Westclox men landed in second place with 748 while 300 singles were registered by F. Dyer, A. Watson, R. Clarke, H. Corrigan and Livingston.

By FRED D. CRAIG

Importing hockey players is an accepted practice in these modern days. It was not always so easy back in the period when the O.H.A. was governed by a drastic code; but it was done nevertheless and Peterborough has had a fair share of the business. Here for example is a team of professional players who became famous in fast hockey and every one of them was at some time or another brought into Peterborough for the purpose of playing hockey. If the outfit could be thrown into the N.H.L. right now with every player at his prime they would form the nucleus of a club that would take a lot of beating. The lineup: Goal, Bill Tobin, now business manager of the Chicago Black Hawks; defence Red Briden, once with Boston and Bert McLeod, with Kansas City of the American Association. Forwards, Aurel Joliat, Canadian star left winger for years, Duke Keats, of Toronto and other professional clubs, Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings, Ace Bailey, formerly of the Toronto Leafs, Joe Tetreault, once of Canadiens, and Herb Drury, long a star with Pittsburgh.

* * * * * *

Several of those stars never played for Peterborough, although brought in for that purpose. Joliat was here one fall before he turned professional and just before the season opened he and Lornie Rose, the clever Peterborough youngster hit the trail for Iroquois Falls and were lost to local hockey. Drury accepted a proposition from a Peterborough talent scout of the period but got homesick before the season arrived and departed. Tobin, Keats and Briden did a little better. They managed to perform in one exhibition game for Peterborough at the beginning of one season and then the O.H.A. discovered that Keats, one of the greatest stickhandlers of all time, had signed a certificate with the Toronto professionals the season before and accordingly the certificates of the Peterborough imports were held up and the whole galaxy shook the dust of this city off their shoes. Tetreault who somehow or other got the idea that his name was Moines and played under that cognomen here was recognized by a referee who remembered that he had been with the Canadiens and he too, ran foul of the O.H.A. and disappeared for ever from Peterborough hockey. It was all good clean fun while it lasted.

* * * * * *

Of all these players Jack Adams, right winger of the 247th Battalion team here during the winter of 1916-17 has probably had the greatest success in hockey. Soon after his Peterborough performance the jovial Fort William lad was starring in Toronto and when he broke into professional hockey he had a most illustrious career as a player both in the N.H.L. and on the coast where he played for some years. A great scorer, a tireless performer and as game as they are made, Adams was a star in his own right and it was natural that his brillint career as a player should be followed by an equally brilliant showing as a professional manager. His success with Detroit which club he led to two successive wins of the Stanley Cup is well known to every hockey fan. He is sitting on top of the world now directing all the hockey activities of the Norris hockey enterprise but his hat still fits him and he has never forgotten the friends of his early days when he was just a likeable kid patrolling along the boards of Brock St. rink and making life miserable for opposing goalies with a bullet shot, six inches off the ice into the corner of the net.

That's All. There Isn't Any More.

Uniforms were handed in at the Collegiate Institute Wednesday afternoon and the equipment of the two P.C.I. squads has been placed in moth balls to be ready for another and the student body fervently hopes a happier season a year hence. The P.C.I. junior squad were scheduled to play their last game here Saturday afternoon against Lindsay but it has been decided to default that fixture as the game would mean nothing to either team. The first thought was to have given Lindsay a workout by using some of the P.C.I. seniors to bolster up the junior team but an automobile accident last week-end in which three Collegiate players were hurt caused that suggestion to be scrapped. The 1940 season is therefore a matter of history—a very early date for rugby in Peterborough to come to an end.

* * * * * *

After all, however, Collegiate fans have nothing much to grumble about. They have been favored year in and year out for a long period with colorful football squads representing the Confederation Square educational plant and seasons have been rare indeed when a certain amount of success has not smiled upon the garnet and gray outfits. This happens to be one of those years—decidedly rare in Collegiate history—when there was an unusual dearth of material. They come along once in a while and there is nothing much that can be done about it except to trot out the best you have and hope for the best. Collegiate did that this season and the record of only one win out of the seven games played by the two teams tells its own story. Next year will be another year.

* * * * * *

From Winnipeg comes a story that should interest local alley bowlers. It tells of two trundlers in that city who each bowled 28 games of five pins and 28 games of ten pins, alternating alleys, bowling one frame of ten pins and then one of five pins. The scores they made are striking. One bowler, Bob McEachern had a 275.20 average for his 28 games of five pins and 199.17 average for 28 ten pin games. Cy Whittington averaged 245.21 for his 28 games with the light ball but he really went to town at ten pins, having an average of 203.14 for 28 games. Bowling alternately with the small five pin ball and the big mineralite spheroid used in the ten pin game would be about the same as a pitcher throwing a regulation baseball to one batter and then a softball at the next and keeping it up four hours on end. Those Winnipeggers must have a lot on the ball.

This Was A Real Run

Windsor High School footballers are making a lot of noise about the recent exploit of a Windsor backfielder who took a punt 15 yards behind his own goal line, ran 115 yards to the enemy's 10 yard where he was tackled, and then passed the ball to a teammate who went over for a touchdown. That was a tremendous run but the annals of Peterborough Collegiate football can beat it. The record long run of all time so far as Peterborough is concerned was made by Gordie Young of P.C.I. who gathered in an opposing kick behind his goal line, ran back almost to the deadline to get away from the tacklers, cut across the field and then ran the full length of the gridiron for a touchdown. From where he caught the ball to the foe's goal line was approximately 120 yards but with his dash back and across before he set sail down the field Young must have carried that ball at least 150 yards.

* * * * * *

Two former Peterborough hockey players saw action in two different loops Wednesday night. Bill Calladine played his third game with the Philadelphia Ramblers but failed to get on the score sheet. The New York Ranger farm hands tied with Larry Aurie's Pittsburgh Pirates 4-4, blowing a three goal lead which they carried into the third period. Red Geddes, former Toronto boy who once upon a time performed in Peterborough colors was with the London Streamliners last night when they upset the Marlboros at Maple Leaf Gardens by beating the Dukes 3 to 2 in a rugged game. Red, too, failed to break into the scoring summary.

An explanation of the number of star players turned out from Kitchener and Waterloo, a list that includes the famous Boston Kraut line, Bingo Kampman and a flock of others, is found in the announcement from Kitchener that the Kitchener and Waterloo Boys' Hockey Association which fathers minor leagues will enter two teams in the O.H.A. junior B series. Already the youngsters are practicing at Brant-

Decline Noted In Deaths Due To Rugby

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 7—(AP)—A gridiron vital statistics expert reported to-day that deaths from United States football were on the decline for the fourth year in a row.

Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood, record keeper for the American Football Coaches' and National Collegiate Athletic Associations, said that only eight deaths could be blamed on the game for the first half of this season.

The figure has shown a downward trend since 1937, said Eastwood, associate professor of men's physical education at Purdue University.

Five of the 1940 fatalities were ascribed directly to football and three—two from heart trouble and one from an infection—indirectly.

Directly attributed deaths numbered two less than for the same part of 1939. The decline was in the High School classification, where two deaths occurred against four last year.

Only one fatality blamed directly on football was in college competition—that of Jack Tandy, 21, of San Francisco State College, who died on October 27 of cerebral haemorrhage.

The fifth fatality of this kind was that of 14-year-old Kenneth Vinton of Seattle, Wash., on September 16 from an appendix ruptured by a kick in a sandlot game.

SPOTLIGHT IS RESTING ON PAUL THOMPSON AS N. H. L. LEADER

Team Built Up Last Year Is Unchanged

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The burdens of National Hockey League leadership will rest a little heavier on Paul Thompson than the other bosses this season, for Paul was the manager of the year—last year—and the performance of his Chicago Black Hawks through the coming months will be the seal on that judgment.

The soft-spoken Thompson takes his new edition of Chicago Black Hawks into action tonight in their opening home game—the only game on the schedule. His is the last club to see action in the new season and tonight's game will provide the so-called experts with the basis for their first comparisons of the seven teams.

Meet Americans

For their opposition, the Hawks have drawn Red Dutton's revamped Americans, bursting with youth and not the slightest bit downcast from their opening 4-2 loss to Detroit Red Wings. For what it means at this stage, the Americans have the league's leading goalgetter—Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty from Toronto amateur ranks.

Thompson took the best veterans from the collection Bill Stewart left him in the middle of the 1938-39 season and blended them with a half-dozen rookies to jump from last to fourth place last March. Everyone gave Paul credit for a job well done, but no one was positive it was the Hawks' ability or the lack of it in the bottom three clubs that made the jump possible.

He has kept the team practically intact, adding just a little more youth to the forward lines. He believes he has "the most evenly-balanced outfit in Chicago history," and thinks the Hawks are a lead-pipe cinch to do as well if not better than fourth place again.

Tonight, he's got to start showing the folks that he's right.

One Game Saturday.

There is only one game Saturday night as well, Detroit visiting Toronto Maple Leafs, while on Sunday night the Black Hawks are in action against the Canadiens in Montreal and Detroit hop back home to entertain the cocky Rangers. After that the league settles down to a steady grind.

The injury bugaboo has cropped up already in the Maple Leaf camp, where Bob Davidson is on the sidelines with a dinky knee. Coach Happy Day has been experimenting with Nick Metz at left wing for Syl Apps and Gord Drillon, and, if Metz goes on that line, it's likely that Billy (The Kid) Taylor will be used as the Leafs' extra man against the Wings.

Otherwise, all seven clubs are at top strength for the heavy going which will come quickly. At the moment, the shouts of the Canadien supporters drown out the other cheering sections.

Jack Adams Has Streamlined Model Of Team

DETROIT, Nov. 7—(Special). — Three years have elapsed since the Detroit Red Wings were last a force capable of striking fear into the hearts of National Hockey League opponents. They have been three long, lean years—lean at the Detroit Olympia box-office and long to Jack Adams, major-domo of the wide-flung Detroit hockey club domain, and his aides who have been quietly performing the arduous task of tearing down an aging hockey machine that had out-lived its usefulness and building a speedier streamlined model.

"Accent On Youth"

Saturday evening Toronto followers of the puckchasing sport will have the opportunity to view the unveiling of this new Red Wing machine when the Detroiters clash with the Leafs.

Jack Adams, and the Detroit club's new playing-coach, Ebbie Goodfellow, are confident that the time has come for their "accent on youth" program to pay dividends.

When the Wings parade into action against Conny Smythe's warriors there will be at least four players on the squad who will be strangers to Toronto pro fans. They are Goalie Johnny Mowers, Centre Les Douglas, Right Wing Joe Carveth and Left Wing Archie Wilder. It is in the development of these three youngsters that Detroit strategists are pinning their hopes for a highly successful season.

The story behind Mowers' invasion of the N.H.L. reads like a Horatio Alger yarn. Two years ago talkative 22-year-old Johnny was an obscure amateur goalie in Niagara Falls. Last winter he came to Detroit and caught himself a job with Pontiacs of the Michigan-Ontario League. From the start he made good. In mid-season, Omaha of the American Association, a Red Wing farm team, found itself without a goalie.

The job was offered to Mowers. He took it and he made good. Before the season was out they were acclaiming him around the association as the league's best puckfender.

When the Detroit hockey forces were assembled for pre-season training this fall Mowers was only one of three goalies given a chance to bid for the regular net-tending job with the Red Wings, left open through the release of Cecil (Tiny) Thompson to take a post as manager of the Buffalo Bisons of the American League.

At the start Mowers played a second fiddle to Jimmy Franks, a seasoned campaigner with a background of three years in professional company. But Mowers was not to be denied. Game for game, he outplayed Franks throughout the pre-season exhibition games, and when the time came to make a choice the decision was an easy one to make. Mowers had earned himself a job in the Big Time.

As for Carveth, Wilder and Douglas, they form an all-rookie forward line which veteran observers predict will develop into a scoring unit to be feared before the current N.H.L. campaign is far advanced.

This is their third year together. Two years ago they made history in the Michigan - Ontario Hockey League as members of the title-winning Pontiac Blue Devils by rolling up an amazing total of points. Carveth was the league's leading goal scorer. Douglas topped the league in total points. Wilder finished third among the circuit's marksmen.

The start of the 1939-40 hockey season saw them still together, but this time in professional company with the Indianapolis Capitols, another Red Wing farm.

The youngsters got away to a great start, but the combination was separated when Carveth suffered a broken leg that kept him out of action for the remainder of the season.

And now, for a third time, they are flashing up and down the ice lanes together—faster and smarter than ever. With Carveth apparently suffering no ill effects from his broken leg, the three are confident they are going to hit the high spots. And so are their bosses, Messrs. Adams and Goodfellow.

Hornets Tie Ramblers

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7—(AP).—Outclassed for two periods, Pittsburg Hornets staged a third-period rally to score three goals and tie Philadelphia Ramblers 4-4 in an overtime American League Hockey game last night.

Johnny Sherf, former Rambler, led the Hornets' attack with two goals, one in the second period and another in the third.

Lloyd Roubell and Lloyd Currie made the other third-period points.

Lloyd Ailsby, Lude Wareing, Allan Kuntz and Murdo McKay made the Ramblers' four points.

Russel Trophy Nominations Are Completed

TORONTO, Nov. 7 — (SP). — The Board of Governors of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union began today the task of selecting from a field of eight nominees the 1940 winner of the Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy.

Nominations were completed last night when Montreal's nameless team announced its pair of nominees for the trophy given to the player who the governors think comes closest to the high standard of sportsmanlike play set by Russel. Montreal immortal killed several years ago in an industrial accident. The value of a player to his team also is considered.

Canadiens Win Exhibition Tilt

SHAWINIGAN FALLS, Que., Nov. 7.—(CP)—Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League defeated Shawinigan Falls Cataracts of the Montreal and District Intermediate League, 10-7, in an exhibition game here last night.

Cataracts were strengthened by the addition of four Canadiens players, Tony Graboski, Doug Young, Louis Trudel and Murph Chamberlain, and the added help figured in six of the losers' seven goals. The new Shawinigan coach, Johnny Gagnon, also took part in the game, bagging a goal and an assist.

Canadiens took the lead in the first half-minute of play, and were ahead, 5-1, at the end of the first on goals by Tony Demers, Lach, Singbush and two from Ray Getliffe. Les Gruninger scored on a rebound for the only Cataract score of the period, and the only goal of the night from the stick of a Shawinigan Falls regular.

Benoit made it 6-1 for Canadiens in the second beore goals by Chamberlain, Grabowski and Trudel put Cataracts back in the running. Gagnon and Chamberlain opened the third with goals to tie up the game, only to have Canadiens rap home four counters against a lone reply from Cataracts.

Jimmy Gardiner Passes Away

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Jimmy Gardiner, member of the famed Montreal Hockey Club which captured the Stanley Cup in Winnipeg in 1902 and one of the game's all-time greats, died here Wednesday after an illness of several weeks. He was 59.

Gardiner was a forward on the team that was nicknamed "The Little Men of Iron" because of the presence of many short men in the line-up. The club captured the Stanley Cup, then emblematic of Dominion amateur suremacy, in a final against the Victorias in Winnipeg.

Gardiner, noted as a clever stickhandler, later played professional hockey and ended his career with Montreal Wanderers in 1912. In 1913-14 as manager of the Montreal Canadiens, he piloted the team to the league playoffs against Toronto and since managed several amateur clubs in various parts of Canada. In more recent years he was associated with minor professional hockey as coach and referee.

Sir Marlboro Is Winner Of Troy Handicap

SALEM, N.H., Nov. 7.—The Canadian silks of Connie Smythe, Toronto sportsman, figured in a popular victory at Rockingham Park Wednesday, when Sir Marlboro, piloted by Walter Taylor, took the measure of five others in the Troy Handicap feature.

The sturdy son of Swift and Sure completed the six-furlong trip a good length in front of Panoroscope, from the Fanfare Far. Charitable was third, with Cerisse 3rd, another Canadian-owned horse, from the A. J. Halliwell Stable, in fourth place.

Sir Marlboro, a strong favorite in the wagering, returned $4.20 for $2. Panoroscope, generally a router, closed strongly to annex the place by a length and a half. He paid off at $9 and $5 in the place and show slots. The winner stepped the six panels in 1:12 3-5.

The early pace was set by Charitable, but Taylor kept his horse in second place down the backstretch and moved to the front easily on the turn for home.

Victory for Sir Marlboro was his sixth in twenty starts this year. Last Saturday he just failed to get up, losing a neck decision to Halycon Boy.

Jockey Taylor completed a double astride the Smythe horse. Earlier he had piloted P. Mecklenburg's Hittie to a surprise victory in the first. Hittie pair off at $21.20 for $2. W. Snyder shared the saddle honors with Taylor by guiding to victory Gala Star, in the second, and Mill River, in the fourth.

The winner of the sixth race was decided on a claim of foul, which the stewards registered against B. A. Dario's Master Key. Calling up Ted Atkinson, who finished second on James Emery's Mon Time, and Eddie Connolly, who finished first on the Dario colt for crowding Mon Time through the stretch drive, and moved up Mon Time Master Key was time in 1:46 3-5 for the distance.

Montreal Names Smaill, Daniels

MONTREAL, Nov. 7 — (CP). — Doug. Smaill, backfield, and Lloyd Daniels, outside wing, were selected last night by Montreal Football Club teammates as nominees for the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy.

The trophy, awarded annually to the player judged most valuable and most sportsmanlike in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, was won last year by Bill Davies of Montreal.

Smaill is playing his third season in senior football. A former Westmount High School star, he played last year with Westmounts in the O.R.F.U. and the previous year with Nationals in the same league.

Daniels is a native of Oshawa, Ont., and came here three years ago after performing with Balmy Beach in the O.R.F.U. He was injured in his first game here with the Cubs in 1938 and was out of action all season.

Dolly's Love Wins

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Baltimore, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Dolly's Love, 6-year-old gelding owned by Evander B. Schley of Far Hills, N.J., triumphed by a length and a half in the third Battleship Steeplechase Handicap of two miles here Wednesday. Often close up, but only able to score once in seven previous trips to the post this season, the veteran took the $2,375 winner's share in the smart time of 3:53 2-5 under 146 pounds.

Polish Soldier's Quick-Change Baffles Germans

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP). — How "Jan," bearded Polish sergeant, escaped from Warsaw as the Germans marched in a year ago reads like an episode from an Edgar Wallace thriller.

Jan, who learned to speak a little English as a lumberjack in Canada, is now in the Polish brigade with the British forces in Palestine. The tale is issued by the Ministry of Information here.

"My battalion," says Jan, "was brought back to defend Warsaw. We fought from street to street and there's nothing like a torn-up street to stop tanks." Then ammunition ran short. A German bomber "blew hell out of high water" and Jan and his fellow-soldiers had to leave their barricade, split up, and make for a railway line leading south.

"I hid in what was left of a dressmaker's shop for a couple of nights and knowing the Germans had entered the city dumped my uniform and put on a flashy dress," Jan related. He joined a crowd of refugees trekking out of Warsaw. It was stopped by a German patrol.

Jan tried to sneak into an alley.

"A little German soldier spotted me and shouted 'where are you going?' I slid into an open doorway and gave him the works with my Mauser. It took only a couple of minutes to strip him and get out as a full private of the Wurtemberg Hussars.

"Three days later I came across the body of a Polish sergeant, did another quick change act and finally joined up with a section of Polish regulars making for the Rumanian frontier. We outnumbered the frontier post guard so handed the sergeant a bribe with one hand and took it back with the other."

The rest was easy—comparatively.

Internee Captured

Lt.-Comm. Gunther Kray, of the German navy, escaped from a Northern Ont. internment camp, and made his way to Toronto, where he was captured as he tried to exchange English money for Canadian currency. He was made a prisoner of war at Narvik.

Eyes Of World Focus On Turkey As Axis Powers Invade Balkans Trying To Cut Off Suez Canal

By DEAN A. WOODRUFF
(Central Press Canadian Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 — With Axis moves in Rumania and actual war in Greece foreshadowing a further thrust in the Balkans, the eyes of the world and the hopes of Great Britain are turned toward Turkey. Can Turkey act as an effective barrier against the German drive to cut the British life line at the Suez Canal? Or will she have to permit the German war machine to ferry across the straits and rumble through her mountain passes to Syria and Palestine

These are burning questions in all the warring capitals to-day as Greece tries desperately hold back the legions of Mussolini. The importance of Turkey's stand becomes clear if one considers that a German advance through Turkey or Egypt would cut off the British Fleet from its vital supply bases in the East. Combined with a successful Axis attack on Gibraltar, this would force England to abandon the Mediterranean or see a large portion of her Navy bottled up.

Turkey Has Progressed.

Forty years ago Turkey would have been in no position to resist anyone. Then it was known as the "sick man of Europe," an empire disintegrating under chronic misgovernment and intrigue. The Turkey that to-day stands watch at the cross-roads between Europe and Asia, between the Mediterranean and the Black Sea, is much smaller, but infinitely stronger and more independent.

Thanks to the progressive and far-sighted work of the late Kemal Ataturk and Ismet Inonu, her present leader, she is now united and sturdy, self-reliant and potentially self-supporting. She has a well-equipped army of 2,000,000 first-class soldiers, her finances are sound, and the budget is balanced regularly, despite large purchases of armaments and industrial equipment abroad.

There are no large foreign interests or minorities in Turkey to intrigue or dictate policy. Only in the last two years has the government at Ankar permitted itself the luxury of accepting the foreign loans thrust upon it by the Germans and the British in their eagerness to gain Turkish friendship.

Unity, At Last.

If Turkey resists Germany, she can rely on internal unity, which is more than most European countries have been able to do. The secret of unity is confidence — confidence in the wisdom of every act of the government. Wise old Kemal Ataturk, the "grey wolf," knew how to inspire it. He steered clear of extremes.

Though his power was as absolute as that of Hitler and he was ruthless toward opposition, Ataturk was sure of his aims and his strength lay in the fact that his people were sure of them, too. Outside of his more spectacular acts—such as the abolition of the fez and the veil and the introduction of the Latin alphabet—most of Ataturk's reforms were unobtrusive.

Moreover, though he took away the political power of the Moslem church, which had retarded progress in Turkey, since the days of Mohammed, the faithful were not persecuted; and though, like the Nazis, he preached self-sufficiency, he never allowed it to become a fetish. Compare this to the present regime in Germany.

Foreign Policy Same.

A sane foreign policy also contributes to the potential strength of Turkey's position. Its leaders have contrived for 20 years to embrace Russia without also embracing Bolshevism; a treaty of friendship with Italy has survived the severe friction over sanctions at the time of the Ethiopian War; bitter quarrels with Greece have been patched up, and since 1932 Turkey has been a model member of the League of Nations. Her pact with Persia, Iran, and Iraq has made her strong in the Middle East, and with the sponsoring of the Balkan pact of 1933 she has emerged also as a leader among her small neighbors in Europe.

With her old ally Germany, she has been friendly despite the fact that she has come out on the short end of a good many of the typical Nazi barter agreements.

Pact Faces Test.

England and Turkey signed a military alliance a year ago which now is about to be put to the supreme test. It obligates them to fight side by side aginst anyone—except Russia — who disturbs the peace of the Balkans. So far it has affected none of Turkey's other relations; she still is allied with Russia, and even now officially friendly with Germany. She is on good terms with all the great Powers and has been able to remain completely independent — a feat achieved by straight dealing and moderation.

This "splendid isolation" from the quarrels of the world may be rudely shattered any day as Italy penetrates Greece and Hitler hints of giving the signal for his troops to march through Bulgaria toward Constantinople (Istanbul).

Turkey has a well-equipped army of 2,000,000 first-class soldiers

CANADA'S WAR LEADERS

By KEN CLARK, C.P. Staff Writer

By KEN CLARK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)
(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press.)

When the Royal Canadian Navy needs a new destroyer or motor boat, or a new wharf or drydock, there's a call for Engineer Captain Angus Downes Mathwin Curry, the Navy's engineer-in-chief.

When an oil tank is required at Esquimault, B.C., or a couple of mine sweepers at Halifax, or there's a suspicion of sabotage, who's to get and who's to fix?—Capt. Curry.

This captain is a tall, heavy-boned man with a ruddy face. He is an engineer and he looks like one, out of doors directing operations, indoors poring over blue prints. Only of late has he found it necessary to use spectacles for reading.

His Majesty's ships are nothing new in the Curry family, although the engineering part of it is a slight variation from the strict line. The captain's great-grandfather, his grandfather and his uncle were in the Royal Navy. His brother is a captain on the retired list, now actively employed in the Woolwich Arsenal, and his nephew is in the Royal Navy's air arm.

Capt. Curry hopes his son, in school here, will be in the Navy within a year and, thus the family line will run down through the British tradition from the blown frigate to the diesel supersubmarine.

When he had more time Capt. Curry made some study of the development of the man-o'-war, beginning with the canoe and coming down past Ethelred (surnamed the Unready), William the Conqueror and his "Mora," and the Battle of La Rochelle where the Spaniards first used guns aboard ship, firing stones.

Capt. Curry recalls with amusement the remark of Lord Melville, First Lord in 1823. When steam was introduced into H.M.S. Monkey, the First Lord averred, "The introduction of steam is calculated to strike a fatal blow to the naval supremacy of the Empire." Sir George Cockburn of White Houseburning fame, was also loud in his complaints against steam vessels with their "dirty decks and captains who look like sweeps."

While this sort of conversation is going on Capt. Curry is answering half-a-dozen telephone calls, reassuring, ordering, chiding, suggesting. He is apparently a sort of general clearing station for anything needed—constructor, co-ordinator, trouble-shooter-at-large — calm, with the mind working meticulously yet with seafaring vigor, as a captain on the poop, waiting and at the right moment saying, "You may fire when ready." It's a sort of old Navy quality.

Capt. Curry was born in 1889. His father was a clergyman, but it was foreordained that this Curry would follow the sea. He had four years in the Royal Naval Engineering College and then spent two years with the White Star Line.

On the formation of the Royal Canadian Navy in August, 1910, he was commissioned engineer sub-lieutenant to the old Rainbow at Portsmouth.

In 1911 Lieut. Curry was in the Niobe and in 1913—after service in H.M. Ships Agamemnon and Colossus—he was transfered to the staff of the Royal Canadian Naval College at Halifax. He served there until 1915 and then went to H.M.S. Vengeance, operating off the east coast of Africa and in the Mediterranean. He returned to the College in 1917 in time for the famous Halifax explosion, and stayed with the College as it moved to Kingston and Esquimault.

Then he went back to sea. He spent two years in H.M.C.S. Patriot and one year in H.M.S. Wanderer. He was engineer officer in both ships.

Tip to landlubbers: Never say engineer officer ON a ship. It's IN. Capt. Curry says you are ON board a ship but you serve IN it. He points out you don't live ON a house.

Later Duties

After serving in the Wanderer, Capt. Curry was an assistant to the Chief Engineer at his Majesty's Dockyard at Chatham, England, and then went to the Royal Naval College at Greenwich to take a senior officer's technical course.

In 1927 he was appointed Chief Engineer at Esquimault and the next year went to England to bring out H.M.C.S. Vancouver. He took up his duties as Chief Engineer at Esquimault upon his return and was later transferred to a similar post at Halifax. For a short time he was aboard H.M.C.S. Saguenay as engineer officer and on Jan. 1, 1934, came to Ottawa as Engineer-in-Chief of the navy, a post he has held ever since.

Capt. Curry is responsible for the construction of ships and the maintenance and repair of all waterborne craft. In this connection his duties have enlarged themselves during the past year to embrace not 13 vessels, but 130, and during the next year his ships will increase by another 100.

He is also responsible for all works projects, maintenance and repair of buildings, wharves, dockyards and the erection of all new buildings.

The jobs must have been less complicated in the days of Ethelred but the King's man then could hardly have been steadier in appearance, speech and action than Capt. Curry. He has an air, infrequent in these jumpy times, of probity in responsibility.

Capt. Curry's golf is in the 90's. He says he likes to "potter about" in his garden at Halifax.

But he has no time for those things these times.

Ford Is Awarded Order For Air Engines

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP).—The United States War Department yesterday warded the Ford Motor Company a $122,323,020 order for more than 4,000 airplane engines.

The Ford Company, latest of the major automobile manufacturers to swing into mass production for defence, contracted to turn out Pratt & Whitney air-cooled radial engines of from 1,600 to 1,700 horsepower.

The engines were described as the latest version of a type already in wide use on both United States army and navy planes. Records indicated the order was the largest single contract for airplane engines since the rearmament program was launched.

Anticipating the order, the Ford Company already is erecting a new engine-making plant at Detroit. Though the War Department disclosed no details, airmen believed the first of the new motors would be produced by next summer.

The order was the first of the current defence program to be awarded the Detroit manufacturer and completed negotiations which bogged down last June when United States defence efforts were accelerated.

Henry Ford first proposed to manufacture planes. The army flew a Curtiss P-40 pursuit ship to Detroit for inspection after the manufacturer was quoted as saying it appeared feasible to turn out 1,000 planes a day bp mass production methods.

When an agreement failed to be reached on planes, Ford was offered a contract for 9,000 Rolls-Royce engines of British design. He rejected it, saying that he would limit his defence efforts to helping arm the United States only. Six thousand of the proposed engines were earmarked for Great Britain.

The principal motor manufacturers already are working on substantial arms contracts and are considering a proposal by William S. Knudsen, Defence Commission Production Chief, that they turn out parts for 12,000 bombers.

Hertzog Resigns As Party Leader

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—General J. B. M. Hertzog, former Prime Minister of South Africa, has resigned the leadership of the "re-united" Nationalist Party of the Free State, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night.

The BBC said that a message from Bloemfontein, in South Africa, reports a "complete split" between General Hertzog's followers and members of the Malanite Nationalist Party had occurred during the inaugural congress of the reunited party.

"General Hertzog and those who followed him out of the United Party after General Jan Smuts became Prime Minister had been joined with the Malanite Party for a little more than a year," the BBC continued.

"The fusion was carried out on the principle that General Hertzog should lead the party, but that he would not accept the extreme Republican views of the Malanites."

However, the BBC said, news from Bloemfontein was that a breach had developed between General Hertzog's followers and Dr. Daniel F. Malan's followers.

Railways Gain $30,000,000 In 1939 Report

OTTAWA, Nov.).—Total revenue of Canada's steam railways increased more than $30,000,000 in 1939 from the previous year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in a preliminary report on the year's railways operations.

Revenue amounted to $367,179,095 compared with $336,833,400 in the year before, the report said. Operating expenses increased to $304,373,285 from $295,705,638.

The slump in railway revenues which took place in 1938 was carried over in the first four months of 1939, but from May until the end of the year, marked increases were shown each month, it said.

The report attributed the increased operating expenses to changes in the volume of work and not in wage rates. Reductions in basic rates of pay which had been in effect for several years were restored fully at April 1, 1938, and no major changes had been made since.

Interest on funded and unfunded debt was reduced from $79,215,333 in 1938 to $79,022,934 and the outstanding funded debt at the end of the year was reduced from $1,586,269,672 to $1,533,373,521.

Losses Reduced

A reduction of $16,231,733 was shown in the Canadian National Railways System's loss, while the Canadian Pacific Railway increased its income from $1,262,382 the previous year to $9,782,148. The Canadian National Railway's loss amounted to $38,239,264, against $54,470,997.

Effect of Canada's bumper wheat crop in 1939 was shown in the number of tons of freight carried one mile, the report said. The total of ton-miles was 31,464,991,270, a 17.3 per cent increase from 1938.

Passenger raffic in 1939 dropped to 20,482,296 passengers carried. This figure has been lower only twice in the last 38 years, the report said, the 1938 figure being 20,911,196.

The number of railway employees increased by 1,538 to 129,362, the Bureau said, and the total railway payroll in 1939 was $200,373,668, compared with $195,108,351 the year before.

Average hourly wage for all employees on an hourly basis was 62.5 cents, compared with 62.1 in 1938, while their average wage for the year was $1.4858, against $1.458. Employees on a daily, monthly or annual basis numbered 26,135, an increase of 451, and their salaries amounted to $47,110,114, a yearly average of $1,803, against ',779.

Power Suggests 'Chute Troops For Dominion

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—(CP). — Bold and bright young men with a yen for excitement will be in demand when and if a corps of Canadian parachute troops, now under consideration, is organized.

Air Minister Power has announced that formation of such a corps is being considered as one of the steps which should be taken with a view to a possible offensive by Empire forces.

In planning for parachute troops the Canadian authorities are taking a couple of leaves out of the new books on tactics of the German and Russian armies. Moreover, the United States army is engaged in the organization of a parachute battalion. At Fort Benning, Georgia, a parachute unit is being recruited from 24 infantry organizations, each infantry unit being given a quota in the new corps.

Parachute troops were used by the Germans in Holland, Belgium, France and Norway with some success and by the Russians in the Finnish war with somewhat less success, according to available reports. Just how big a factor they were in the German advance last spring has not been authoritatively determined but military authorities seem to be in agreement that the parachutist has a definite place in the fast-moving offensive operations of these days of mechanized warfare.

Fight On Their Own.

Intelligence and resourcefulness together with daring shape up as prime requisites for a parachutist. In the parachute forces every jumper, once he makes his jump, becomes his own general for the time being. Groups of men may be dropped from planes at once place to assemble under a designated commander but each man must use his own wits when he lands.

The highest kind of courage is required of a man who jumps from an airplane into hostile territory. The jumping itself becomes second nature through training, but the courage comes in when the man faces armed formation and possibly a hostile civil population single-handed.

Maj. Power said the parachute scheme will probably be a joint undertaking by the army and the air force. The men will come from the army and be trained by the air force in jumping but once on the ground they will operate as soldiers.

According to information available here it is probably that men for the jobs will be hand-picked from the army and not enlisted directly from civilian life as parachute men. The army, once plans are formulated, might ask for volunteers and choose the keen, daring type of fellow who will make the best parachutist.

Most Mobile Force.

Available information indicates the German parachute troops are a special formation within the air force. They are believed to be volunteers. Parachute troops are considered the most highly mobile force yet developed. They are a sort of super-cavalry and fulfil somewhat the same function in a modern army as did the horseman in the days of slow-moving armies.

They can be placed anywhere in short order to attack communication lines and key points, to create confusion in the enemy's back areas and to secure information. Placed in suitable locations, parachutists may send off wireless or visual signals to aircraft.

At the moment there is no intention of training Canadian parachutists to serve as fifth columnists. Hence present plans call for no particular stress to be placed upon the language qualifications of the men selected for the work.

Campbellford Woman Dies In Virginia

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 7 — (ENS).—Never quite recovering from the death of her husband W. H. Noell Gill, who passed away while holidaying at Trent River early in August, Mrs. Gill died in Manassas, Va., on Sunday. Though she had been in poor health for some time news of her sudden death shocked both friends and relatives here when it became known on Sunday.

Mrs. Gill, formerly Blanche Linton, was the oldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Linton of Campbellford. Born in the family home on Front street, where she was married to her late husband thirty-eight years later, Mrs. Gill spent her girlhood days in this town where she won many friends.

Following marriage Mr. and Mrs. Gill moved to Kingston, where the former taught for a number of years at Regiopolis College before moving to Port Hope and later to Manassas, Va.

Despite the fact of moving many miles from her home town, Mrs. Gill maintained contact with many of her old friends through returning each summer to camp at Trent River, a practice which was tradition since Mr. Gill's profession of school teacher made possible the long summer vacation that warranted the trip back to this district. Following the death of Mr. Gill she remained for only a short period at Trent River before going to Dundas where she spent several weeks with her sister, Mrs. S. H. Neal before continuing to her home in Manassas, Vt.

A devout member of the Church of England, she took a keen interest in various types of club and charitable work and was constantly on the alert to assist in many ways in the life at the various boarding schools in which they resided.

Surviving her are one son, Flying Oficer Linton N. Gill, of Regina, Sask., also one sister, Mrs. S. H. Neal, Dundas, and two brothers, Major A. T. Linton and John A. Linton, both of Campbellford.

On arrival in Campbellford Tuesday evening the remains were taken to the home of Mr. J. A. Linton, George street and on Wednesday afternoon were removed to Christ church, where the funeral service was conducted by Rev. T. S. Gault at three o'clock in the afternoon. Interment was made at the family plot at the Church of England cemetery.

Pallbearers were Messrs. J. V. Bedford, J. C. Birmingham, Major J. M. Bygott, Chas. Calver, J. E. Birks and S. H. Neal.

Jury Is Unable To Agree; Case Laid Over

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 7.—After deliberating ten hours, a fall Assize July last night failed to reach a verdict in the case of Robert McFarland, charged with the murder of his wife's 18-month-old child, Gordon Archer.

The jury retired at 1:30 p.m., returned at 8 p.m. to have parts of the evidence read to them, and then retired once more to the jury room.

At 11:30 p.m. Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay had the jury brought back to the courtroom.

"Have you reached a verdict?" asked his Lordship.

"No, my lord," was the foreman's reply.

"Definitely no?" queried Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay.

His Lordship thereupon set the case over for the next sittings, which will probably be in February.

Evidence Repeated

When the jury returned at 8 p.m. they asked that the evidence of Mrs. Fred Johnson and Allen Taylor be read. The testimony of these witnesses was as follows:

Mrs. Johnson, sister-in-law of the accused, testified that Robert McFarland had come to her home on the evening of Thursday, July 25, with his wife and her baby. They remained until 8:30 o'clock, when they left with the baby.

"My sister (Mrs. McFarland) resided with me from Feb. 22, 1940, until July 12, when she was married. The baby was with her mother until July 11, when Mrs. McFarland took the baby to Mrs. Mountenay's," said Mrs. Johnson.

"From your conversation with Robert McFarland you satisfied yourself that he intended to take the baby with them, after they were married?" Ormonde Butler, defense counsel, asked. "Yes, I did. If they hadn't taken the baby with them I would have kept it here."

"You wanted the baby to have a good home, after it left your place, and apparently Robert McFarland satisfied you that the child would be looked after?" asked Mr. Butler.

"Yes, he did," answered Mrs. Johnson.

The evidence of Allen Taylor was that McFarland visited his home about 6 o'clock in the evening, but he had no conversation with him at that time. The baby was then with the couple.

"About 9 o'clock in the evening I saw Mr. and Mrs. McFarland near the east entrance to the footbridge," said Taylor. "She was carrying the baby at that time. I noticed the couple cross the track to the edge of the bank and then return to the entrance of the footbridge."

Grant Ashley, foreman of the jury, also asked if the ties on the G.T.R. bridge, where the baby was found, were separated or were close together. Mr. Justice Mackay informed them that if the photographs did not indicate this, he was unable to give the information.

The jury again retired to consider the verdict.

Explains Common Intent

Robert McFarland was arrested with his wife for the murder of Gordon Archer on July 26, following the discovery of the wirebound body of the child in the Trent River by a railway section man. Mrs. McFarland, who admitted the murdre to the police in a statement was declared insane and incapable of standing trial when she appeared on Monday. Since that time the husband has been standing trial.

Mr. Butler called two witnesses to the stand. Both testified that Robert McFarland was of excellent character.

In his charge to the jury Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay said that if several persons had a common intent to prosecute an unlawful offense, then each is responsible for any act committed by any one of them. "If Robert McFarland agreed with his wife to take the child to a certain point and encouraged her to destroy the child by throwing it in the river, even if his hands never touched the child, he is just as guilty. If, however, she made up her mind to commit the crime herself, then the accused is not guilty of murder."

"As the Crown must establish evidence not consistent with innocence, there is a link which, if not missing, is decidedly weak in character. That link is: Has it been brought home to the accused that he did aid, abet, procure and counsel this woman to murder the child? It is clear that he did aid and abet, but has the Crown brought home the purpose, that is, murder. That is for you to say."

Crown Prosecutor Walter Martin stressed that a witness had testified that he had seen a man and woman coming from a footpath that led to the river, near the C.N.R. footbridge. The woman at that time was carrying a parcel.

"The baby weighed twenty-three pounds and the stone nine pounds. Would it not take a strong person to throw the combined weight into the river. It would also take a strong person to bend the wire and twist it like it was around the child," Mr. Martin stated.

British fighter planes also joined Greek craft yesterday in patrolling Athens and its port, Piraeus, and were credited with turning back two raiding Italian squadrons.

The Greeks said the Italians had bombed the cities of Volos, Patras, Larissa and the Island of Zante, but declared casualties and damage were slight.

(Reports from Belgrade, Yugoslavia, said the Italian Air Force had bombed the Green town of Phlorina, east of Koritza, several times yesterday. Half the town and most of the Greek villages in that area were said to have been razed with heavy casualties.)

Some Encouragement.

The Roosevelt victory, however, was not without encouraging aspects for his Republican opposition. The same figures which clarioned his re-election, also proclaimed substantial Republican gains over 1936 when Mr. Roosevelt won 523 electoral votes to the eight which two lone states yielded to his rival, Alf. M. Landon.

In 1932 the popular vote went: Mr. Roosevelt 27,476,673, Landon 16,679,583, but in 1940 Willkie not only slashed 50 per cent. off the numerical size off the Roosevelt plurality but piled up a record-breaking mountain of Republican ballots. Although the count was not yet complete, he already had surpassed previous Republican high of 21,392,190 which Herbert Hoover reached in 1926 in his great "prosperity landslide."

With the last tardy returns still dribbling in, Mr. Roosevelt had a multitude of affairs awaiting his attention. Problems of foreign policy, plans for greater assistance to Britain, and defence program details all promised to shove quickly into the background the election, its interests and controversies.

On these major questions the President received an increasing number of assurances of co-operation and support from the ranks of his erstwhile political foes. To implement these assurances, a post-election keynote of national unity sounded in every section of the country.

Get Back to Work

Following upon Willkie's telegram of congratulation to Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, Landon told the country by radio that its job now was to "grin and go back to work."

In Palo Alto, Calif., former President Hoover noted that both Republican Candidate Willkie and Democratic Canadiate Roosevelt had "pledged to the utmost national preparedness and to keep out of foreign wars."

"The transcendant duty now," Mr. Hoover said in a statement, "is the full co-operation of everybody in this vital purpose."

Along with their promises of support and co-operation, however, the Republicans gave every evidence of functioning vigorously as oppsition to the administration on all issues which they may regard as inimical to the country's best interest.

Almost complete returns showed that the strength which the Republicans will command in the new Congress, beginning in January, would be greater in the Senate and somewhat less in the House than in the present session. With the outcome of one Senate race still in doubt, the Republicans thus far had registered a net gain of four seats for a total of 28 as against 66 held by Democrats in that chamber.

In the House the Democrats had a net gain of five seats, with only five contests still undecided. This gave them a total of 263 members, compared with 218 necessary for a majority. The Republicans had elected 162 members and Progressives three. Independent Democrats one, and American Labor one.

Finance Minister Frederico Peneda announced yesterday that the Argentine cabinet had given provisional approval to his plan to restrict imports from the United States to vitally needed articles so as to check gold export. Such a step, he said, was intended to reactivate Argentine economy and "balance" foreign trade but would be put into effect only if other means of solving the nation's foreign trade problems failed.

Might Seek U.S. Loan.

One generally well - informed source here said it was possible that Argentina, which is the leading South American nation in credit rating because she never has defaulted on a national obligation, might seek a loan of as much as $100,000,000 from the United States.

Informed sources said the United States political campaign had made Argentine officials coy during discussions of possible military and naval co-operation with the United States. They hinted that conferences might find a warmer reception since the re-election of President Roosevelt.

The new Paraguayan Minister to Washington, Dr. Juan Jose Soler, who sails for New York tomorrow, said in Buenos Aires that his country was anxious to continue the close financial, political and defensive co-operation with the United States begun under the late President Jose Felix Estrigarribia.

Among the buildings destroyed in London by the German night raiders was a Roman Catholic church, where five priests and eight other persons were buried in the wreckage.

Another bomb struck just outside a motion picture theatre where 200 persons were shaken by the blast. When the manager tried to get the audience to leave they protested "carry on" and left only when he explained the building was unsafe.

One cluster of fire bombs which fell with a stick of seven high explosive bombs started a fire that sent flames leaping so high they silhouetted the majestic dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

German planes cruised overhead with the towering flames as a beacon until the fire was brought under control two hours later.

Several French soldiers and sailors were among the casualties when a club was hit in one London district, while in another district nine and 11 others damaged badly.

People sleeping in a shelter escaped when a block of office buildings above them was fired by incendiary bombs. The rear of the block was reduced to rubble and charred beams.

Eight people were rescued from the wreckage of houses along several streets in another region of the capital, where a stick of bombs fell during the first part of the night raid. Rescue workers continued to search the debris.

A bar was hit in one district, killing two and injuring many other customers.

Hunting Depletes Warsaw's Manhood

Mrs. Gordon Sharpe went to Peterborough to visit her mother during the hunting season.

Mrs. George Weller is in Toronto attending the Women's Institute convention which began on Tuesday of this week.

At long last Mr. George Taylor is gaining strength and beginning to look like himself.

BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings as reported today by the Peterborough clearing house for the past week totalled $728,514.

POPPY DAY.

Saturday is Poppy Day, and the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion has put forth every effort to make this year's receipts bigger than ever. With the education program for the troops, sponsored by the Legion, becoming more to the public notice, the Canadian Legion is becoming more than ever appreciated.

JOIN HUNT.

Ron Stuart and Jim Wharry have left the city for a few days to join the hunters at Redstone Lake, Haliburton. The pair have, apparently, been inspired by the feat performed by Dr. H. A. Mitchell, who is reported to have shot a deer and a bear the first of the week.

GETS TEN DAYS.

John Carr, transient, who pleaded guilty a week ago to a vagrancy charge, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to ten days in jail, despite his offer to get out of town immediately if he were released. "Will you date it back to my arrest?" Carr asked. "It will date from now," replied the Magistrate, and that was that.

ATTACHED TO UNITS.

Trainees from the Army Training Centre No. 32 will be allocated to the Non-Permanent Active Militia units as follows: Prince of Wales Rangers 129, Lanark and Renfrew Scottish 9, Midland Regiment 260, Princess of Wales Own Regiment 36, Hastings and Prince Edward 201, Grey and Simcoe Foresters 1, Queen's Cork Rangers 1, Irish Regiment 1, and Cameron Highlanders 1.

NEW UNION JACK.

A new Union Jack is flying at half mast above the city hall. Alderman McCannan ordered it Thursday afternoon. He looked up at the old one, faded to a drab monotone of grey in which the triple crosses were barely visible. "It certainly is time we had a new one, and it is the least and last thing we can do for Rollie Denne because if there was one thing that was characteristic of him it was to have things neat and bright. And, besides that, it will look better on Remembrance Day."

JUVENILE CASES.

Four juvenile cases were before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning. One 12-year-old Lakefield boy was charged with breaking and entering and the case was adjourned until Tuesday to give an opportunity to notify the proper parties to be present. The case of another small lad who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering St. Paul's Church was adjourned, by consent, for a month to see how the boy behaves in the meanwhile. Two nine-year-old boys, charged with stealing a bicycle, also appeared and their cases were adjourned.

MORE MEN NEEDED

An officer of the Canadian Air Force was in Peterborough looking for wireless mechanics, particularly those with practical knowledge of superheterodyne receivers, and also with a training in how to repair them. It was explained that a knowledge of fault finding was also helpful, and applicants should have mastered the elementary and basic principles of transmission and reception. The Morse code is not considered essential. It was stated there was also a demand for aero engine mechanics. The age limit for wireless and electrical mechanics is 18 to 45, and up to 50 for mechanics. There is a shortage of good camp cooks and the reason given for that is that the various training centres have gathered in most of them. The officer who visited Peterborough gave the address 297 Bay street, Toronto, as the place to apply. He interviewed a number while he was in the city.

GOES TO JAIL.

Thomas Cleary, a familiar figure in Police Court circles, was sentenced by Magistrate Langley today to ten days in jail on a vagrancy charge. Cleary told the Magistrate that he had nothing to say.

JOINS SOUND BATTERY.

Albert Russell, lockmaster at Lock Number 22, has joined the Canadian Active Service Force. He will take up his post in Petawawa with the 1st Sound Ranging Battery, 1st Survey Regiment, Royal Canadian Engineers.

SEND THEM IN

In the recent appeal for soldier's names, not one of the boys from this city now serving in the Royal Navy or in the Royal Canadian Navy had their names and addresses sent in. If these are sent in, not phoned in, on Friday, they will be put on the list to receive Christmas boxes from the I.O.D.E.

CLERK JOINS FORCES.

Kenneth Felix Barltrop, former clerk with the C.P.R., has left for Kingston. He is now in the C.A.S.F., and the Examiner would like to make a correction in the report of the capacity in which he is serving. He has taken his post as a clerk, and not as a cook as was previously announced.

POCKETS APLENTY.

Members of the Prince of Wales Rangers have been amazed at the number of roomy pockets in the new battle dress. There are five in the pants and four in the tunic. Each of the pockets has been designed with a purpose in mind, and the accommodation afforded by them is truly remarkable.

NEW BATTLE DRESS

The Prince of Wales Rangers will make their appearance on Tuesday night, resplendent in their new battle dress. The equipment arrived two days ago, and many of the troops have been issued already. From now on all ranks will parade in the new dress, and satisfaction has been expressed concerning its comfort.

RECALLING RELIEF.

Relief costs for the month of October in the twelve years since 1929 were tabulated as follows at the relief committee meeting Wednesday night: 1929, $247; 1930, $429; 1931, $1,349; 1932, $5,047; 1933, $12,687; 1934, $12,184; 1935, $13,317; 1936 $8,357; 1937, $5,323; 1938, $7,744; 1939, $6,730; 1940, $2,226.

REFUSES TO WORK.

An eighteen-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge in police court this morning was sentenced to five days in jail after the Magistrate had been informed that the boy, whose mother was on relief, had been giving her a lot of trouble and that he refused to work. The youth was in bed when police arrested him late yesterday morning in answer to a complain from his mother.

HOLIDAYS FOR CHILDREN

School children of the city are getting a break in their studies over the week-end. They will be out of school five days, from Wednesday night until next Tuesday morning. Today and Friday primary school teachers are holding their annual convention, and Monday will be celebrated as Remembrance Day.

KNOCKED FROM BICYCLE

Gordon McDougall, 78 Sophia street, C.P.R. telegraph messenger boy, was knocked from his bicycle Thursday when the wheel met in collision with an automobile driven west on Simcoe street by R. E. Stuart, 53 Park street. McDougall rode out of a laneway back of the Kresge Building and was making a turn east when the collision occurred. The boy escaped unhurt but the bicycle was damaged.

Obituary

MRS. CHARLES CURTIS

Mrs. Charles Curtis, the former Mary Stenton, and widow of Charles Curtis, passed away after a lengthy illness, at her home, Park Hill Road East, on Thursday.

The daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stenton, she was born in South Monaghan, and had lived in this district all of her life. Her husband, the late Charles Curtis, predeceased her on October 5, of this year.

Mrs. Curtis was a member of St. Luke's Anglican Church, and though her illness had kept her inactive for some time, she had been known as a splendid church worker. She was a friendly neighbor, and her large circle of friends will miss her influence. Throughout her long life she had earned the respect of all who had come in contact with her.

She and Mr. Curtis had celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1932, and this district has lost two of its most beloved residents in their passing. Surviving are two daughters, Bertha and Maude Curtis, both at home, and one brother, Fred Stenton, of Detroit.

The funeral will be on Saturday, and the services will be held both at home, and at St. Luke's Church. The services at home will be at 2:00 p.m., and at the church at 2:30 p.m. Rev. G. J. Bousfield will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

How Many Others Were Missed

ROBERT REX — BILL CLANCY

Names of soldiers now on duty overseas from this city have not been sent in to the Examiner. More than 200 are in England but so far only 58 names have been turned in. The two boys shown ABOVE, enlisted with the H. and P.E., but their addresses have not come in, and there are many others. The Examiner must have these names before Friday night, as the I.O.D.E. is packing Christmas parcels today and tomorrow for the soldiers from this city now in England. If your husband, son or brother is missed, the blame is yours. Names of men in the 4th anti-tank, Glengarry Highlanders, and 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers, are not wanted as we have a complete list of them. The boys who went with the Hastings, Prince Edward and other overseas units are the ones needed. No telephone messages will be accepted because of the possibility of errors, and all addresses must be handed in before Friday midnight. Give regimental number, name of regiment, and location, in brief, the information that one would put on a letter. Do it now, tonight, before you forget it.

Trainees Opposed To Camp Life Change Opinions As Time Passes

At eight o'clock this morning four trainees just released from Exhibition Camp, A.T.C. No. 32, were enjoying a hearty breakfast in a local restaurant when they were spotted by a reporter. The reporter asked the fou rif they would record in their own words their reactions and opinions on the camp they had just vacated, and a few words on what they thought of the 30 days training.

The boys agreed readily enough, and the following are their stories, uncensored and unchanged, just as the boys set them.

The first experience of military training started October 9, 1940. The first day was mostly getting everybody organized and the proper clothing for our duties. The second day was first of training. In these first two days most of the boys formed thei ropinion of the army. No one was allowed from camp, and it seemed to us we had lost our last friends and it was our opinion of spending thirty days on the Hill. These two days were our worst. As I said before we formed our opinion on everything: meals, routine, and officers. Meals were our worst comeback. They were flat and food was to us rather skimpy. As a result we spent most of our summer wages in eats at the Red Shield.

The first week everybody was stiff and sore, but as days rolled by we began to get used to this and we began to find things easier. Then everything smoothed out; our officers started to be our friends. Our work then became interesting and time went faster. They taught us more in thirty days than 90 per cent of men today ever thought existed in military training for several years.

The discipline is very strict and once in the routine is quite easily followed. I would advise later leaves for the boys, which would brighten their ideas a lot.

At the range the rifles were old and not sighted properly. I would suggest better rifles for the boys.

One thing which I didn't like was an officer 19 years old over older men and there was opposition from the start both from us and his fellow officers.

Most of the men would join active service in Royal Air Force or the Navy, if it were possible, but not so much the infantry.

The thirty days has done us the world of good in health and it also puts all men on the same standing; in other words one man, no matter what his position on equal basis with each other.

Each man now thinks himself as good as the other fellow and will be more prominent in his locality.

Although this thirty days has been tough, this experience has done us more good than any other position or place we were ever at.

FLOYD ABRAMS, PETERBORO' ROBERT S. DIXON, BUCKHORN

Trainees in general went into camp with idea they didn't think much of it. The first day was unbearable, standing around owing to unorganized conditions of camp. There were plenty of laughs. Some with trousers that could be pinned over their head, others with tunics with the waist up under their arms. Field service caps down over ears, others like a peanut on a pumpkin. It took three days to trade equipment, in order to look presentable.

The first meal, dinner in fact will never be forgotten. Meals were entirely out of the average chap's taste, the result, Sally Ann, done exceptionally well, that is the (Red Shield). On the other hand, it was not necessary to rely on the canteen. Some say you couldn't get near it which was a fact. There was plenty, but the cooks weren't cooks. The last two weeks, we saw a great change, the very best that could be arranged for a body of men numbering 750. Which if taken in consideration is a lot of work and preparation. We must give three cheers for the kitchen for past two weeks.

Training began in the way of squad drill. Every squad was awkward. Goose step, duck waddle, horse walk, stroll, everything imaginable. V-necked, round-shouldered and lazy, not for long though. Everyone was eager to receive their rifle, the sergeant said (Sgt. Beresford in our case) rifle, we said guns. When received after a week the looks of a rifle turned us sick. Then bayonets, well to stick a bayonet 3 inches in a man was supposed to kill him anyway we were told would hurt him. Bayonet practice in general was disliked by all.

The rifle range was interest with the exception of rifles we had to fire. The scores gradually increased. But the first time I myself was on butt party in 15 rounds of fire on my target there were two hits.

Fieldcraft was interesting but tiresome. We crawled through brush, burdocks, thistles and what have you, practicing the sneak up on enemy. Done on our hands and knees lots of times dragging ourselves along by elbows we managed the odd time to sneak a smoke or a wee nap while supposedly manouvering. Of courze the most exciting time in first two weeks was our first pay, then our first leave on that night. It really was a loosener for most.

By the way, we slept on floor the first night, no fires no pillow. When we got our beds we fell in love with them. We were always ready for bed at 10.30 when lights out was sounded on the bugle. Lots of rest made us full of vigor. We gained weight, got lots of color, and learned to be on the alert, when needed.

The gas chamber, which followed very interesting gas lectures was exciting. If you never saw a supposed to be man cry, try and be around on the day the boys are put through the tear gas. Tears, tears and more tears.

We didn't receive enough late leaves in our estimation. But the two we got were greatly appreciated, and were not abused. In our particular hut there was not a C.B. handed out.

Our N.C.O.'s, platoon commander, Sergeant Major and company commander were the best in the camp. Good sports, they showed us discipline and many of us didn't ever know what the word meant before.

On the whole we enjoyed our camp life and our discharge honorably given was gladly received. We hope every trainee to follow has as good a life as we while in camp. Sorry to leave, but happy all around.

The last day was supposed to be spent in the way of a route march, eight miles. But weather conditions curtailed that, as a result it was spent turning in equipment. The night was wild, spent in clean fun, no one slept; beds upset, filled with coats, etc. We had to be up at 4.00; breakfast at 4.30; bedding turned in at 5.30, pay parade at 6.00 and then loose.

We mustn't forget the hospital sick parade every morning. The grievance is bad there. Medicine amounts to a glass of water and a tablet in lots of cases, and usually back on duty, sick or not. We all agree that the medical hut could stand great improvement. However, we were not sick.

Highlanders Are Moved To Ottawa Camp

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—(CP)—Men of the 1st Battalion, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Canadian Active Service Force, settled down today at the Exhibition grounds at Lansdowne Park

Their pipe band, skirling "All the Blue Bonnets Are Over the Border," marched at the battalion's head as they swung into the exhibition grounds and made themselves at home.

Col. Hicks-Lyne emphasized that the Stormont are a composite unit. Headquarters and headquarters company consists of personnel from the Peterborough Rangers; No. 1 Company was formed from the Prince of Wales' Own Regiment, Kingston; No. 2, Brockville Rifles; Nos. 3 and 4, Stormont Dundas and Glengary Highlanders from Cornwall.

Overcoat Clue Leads To Youth's Arrest

Arrested Wednesday afternoon by Chief Wallace Hendren of Lakefield while on a hunting trip in Harvey township, Stuart Graham, 21, Lakefield faced a charge before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. in police court this morning of breaking and entering the residence of Mrs. Cecelia Graham, Lakefield, on November 2, with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Graham pleaded not guilty to the charge and at the request of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., was remanded until Tuesday night for trial. Bail was set at $1,000.

During Mrs. Graham's absence from home her house was entered Saturday night by an intruder who forced the screen door and then the inside door to gain entry. Nothing was stolen and it was assumed that the thief was frightened off because he had left behind him an overcoat. Chief Hendren visited clothing stores in Lakefield and Peterborough and as a result of the inquiries he made Graham was arrested yesterday.

Billy Anderson Passes Up Two Perfect Days Reporter Misses Trip To County's Big Bush

It would be just like Reeve W. A. Anderson to come along one of these d- now that the glory of October has gone the way of all things and propose a trip to the Dummer-Belmont border to look around the county's forest.

It may be that he has no notion of it, but he had mentioned it several times this Fall, he and Reeve Melville Johnston, a -t of inspection trip before the approaching meeting of the council, and also before the winter descends upon the county.

Should he come along one of these blasty days with snow on the ground and the sun misted over, the answer to such an official invitation will be in the negative, gratefully, of course, for being remembered by the county fathers.

The first time Mr. Anderson suggested this trip to see the county woods, and according to all reports they seem to have something there, was not long after the property was bought, and they had to determine its boundaries. So John Pierce was engaged to strike the lines, and the season must have been getting on towards Christmas, snow in the woods, only canvas overhead at nights, he-man atmosphere.

That was the first invitation and it didn't get any consideration; one might as well go south with Byrd as east with Anderson into the winter wilderness of Belmont.

"Why not come around in May: time when the flowers are out and the birds are singing, and all the rest of it?" a reporter suggested.

And after hearing somewhat vaguely that the chairman of the Forestry committee was likely to drive down there some time this Fall, hope rose up a bit on Monday and Tuesday of this week, somehow that Anderson and Johnston would happen along in such grand weather, take an afternoon off and ramble beneath their county trees.

But no! Nothing happened. And now comes the outriders of Winter, and like as not Mr. Anderson will be following along after them one of these days, heading off to the county forest to see that things are all set until Spring, but he and Melville Johnston needn't expect any correspondent along with them. If they want to go about the county's business the hard way, that is their affair, but they can go it alone or tak Warden McColl along.

If they hadn't mentioned the probability of an inspection trip, no one would have been expecting to hear from them Monday and Tuesday of this week. Ordinary, weak human beings in a public administration would have said, "Let's go down and see the bush" or something off hand like that; but not county councillors. That would have seemed like playing hookey or going soft, wandering off in weather like September. They've got to wait till conditions are tough and hard, chill in the air, snow on the ground and no joy in it.

However, the county's forest will be down there a long time, and it doesn't change much from year to year and there may be other perfect days like the first three of this week.

New Appointment

William J. (Bill) Garner, newly-appointed Advertising Manager of the Peterborough Examiner, succeeding Mr. T. L. Ashton, who has been attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Grant $40,000 Cut In Assessment

The Court of Revision last night granted a reduction of $40,000 in the assesment of A. Wander Company, Limited, local manufacturers of Ovaltine.

The assessment of the building was lowered from $140,000 to $115,000, the cut being $25,000, plus $15,000 off their business assessment, which was reduced from $90,000 to $75,000.

In another decision the Court allowed J. T. Braund $1,500 off the assessment of his business block at 182-186 Charlotte street. The land valuation was confirmed but on the building the reduction was appointed as follows: $1,080 less on the Steadman Variety Store and $420 on the W. J. Hamilton fur store.

Signet Ring To Pte. Chas. Baker

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Baker of Norwood was the gathering place for over seventy friends and neighbors who came to honor their son, Pte. Charles Baker of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Kingston, and present him with a yellow gold signet ring. The presentation was made by Mr. Ernie Colby, and the address, read by Mr. Harry Morgan, expressed appreciation to Pte. Baker for the service he is rendering his country, and referred to the debt owed to boys in uniform by not only the civilian population of the Norwood neighborhood, but by peoples of all parts of the Dominion and British Empire. A debt for homes and freedom that can never be repaid.

Games and cards were played, and music for dancing was supplied by John Stewart and Charles McNeely. Friends attended from Peterborough, Buckhorn, Campbellford, Havelock and Norwood.

Husky Trainees Routed At 4 a.m. As Thirty-Day Period Ends; Next Group Will Arrive Nov. 22

The bugle's clarion call echoed through Exhibition Grounds military camp at four o'clock this morning and 640 21-year-old trainees tumbled out of warm camp beds for the last time, their thirty-day training period was over.

Breakfast was at 4.30, there was pay parade at 6 and more than 100 of the young men caught the 7.18 train heading down east to their homes. The remainder will leave the camp in groups today as their equipment is turned in, and they receive their pay, $18. The men were paid $1.20 a day by the Government, and total payment for the thirty-day period was made in two instalments.

When the camp opened on October 9th, 673 men reported in, but of this number 31 were rejected on medical grounds. Three others were discharged on being called up by the R.C.A.F. and today 10 entrain for Kingston on active service in the signal section of an artillery unit.

On Wednesday Major J. H. W. Pope, supervisor of training camps in eastern Canada, visited the Exhibition Grounds and spoke favorably of the administration and training. He was on the last lap of a two-weeks' tour of all camps from Yarmouth to the West.

Two trainees who were injured in car accidents will report back at a later date to complete the thirty-day training period, and another man who claims to have a cracked rib was boarded by camp doctors yesterday and will not be discharged until such time as the condition is corrected.

Early last evening the men started to turn in their clothing and equipment, and if any of it was missing they had to pay for it. The underwear, sox and boots, they keep, as a gift from the Government, and along with this would be the $18 pay. Turning in of equipment is being completed this morning. If a man lives out of town he is given a transportation warrant by the officer in charge of supply and transport.

The next army of trainees will be called up on November 22nd, and during the interim period the camp will receive a thorough going over. An instructional course for officers and N.C.O.'s will be held at the camp during that time also.

All uniforms, blankets and bedding will be shipped uptown for a thorough dry cleaning and all will be in readiness for the next group late this month.

Last night all was gaiety at the camp as the men were entertained at a concert party in the Red Shield hut, with pupils of Marion Perry Laird taking part. The big hut was packed with soldiers and later the crowd whiled away the time with community singing.

District I.O.O.F. Hold Rally Here

Oddfellows of District No. 44 held a successful rally here last night with the following local lodges being represented, Havelock, Lakefield, Millbrook, Pontypool and Peterborough and Otonabee from this city, also Campbellford, Orono and Picton.

District Deputy Grand Master Sherman J. Rowe of Peterborough Lodge presided over the assembly of about ninety members of the Order from the district. The Campbellford degree team conferred the second degree, and the guest speaker for the evening was Grand Conductor of the Grand Lodge, W. J. Riddell from Orono.

Following the program in the lodge room the members adjourned to the banquet hall where an enjoyable repast was served.

Horse Leaps At Car After Collision

To have a big farm horse almost leap into his automobile after the animal and the motor vehicle had collided on Highway 28 early Wednesday evening was the exciting experience of H. Ingram, representative of a Toronto candy firm. After the crash the horse seemed to jump at the car and one forefoot smashed through the windsield and another badly damaged the top of the car. The damage done to the automobile is estimated at $300 and the horse was so badly injured that it had to be shot by Provincial Constable David Silvester, who investigated the accident.

Mr. Ingram was passing the farm of Michael Butler when the horse, the property of Mr. Butler, suddenly loomed up in front of him and the driver was unable to avoid the crash.

Co-eds To Play Football

COLUMBIA, S.C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—University of South Carolina co-eds will play a football game to raise funds for the "Bundles for Britain" cause. No tackling will be allowed, but the game will have its attractions—programs will include the names and telephone numbers of each and every player.

Rambling Reporters

KILLER DILLER

Stan Longhurst is now known as "Killer" Longhurst, according to Jim Wharry. The story about Stan concerns two rifles and their advantage.

His first day in the hunt this year saw Stan in rare form. One deer made the unhappy mistake of choosing the runway that he was watching, and found the hunter right on the "bit." Stan began shooting at the deer, and before he had hit it all of his ammunition was gone. Not a bit daunted, Stan quickly borrowed a friend's rifle, and succeeded in shooting the animal through the nose. He was heard to remark that next year he intends to hire an ammunition carrier

Because of the color his name lends, and because one hunter has already threatened to declare an open season on reporters, Jim Wharry will have to accept full responsibility for this story. It may be that Stan will feel it necessary to declare a Longhurst open season on Wharrys. Or perhaps it was Mr. Wharry who did all the shooting.

PERHAPS HE'S RIGHT.

Provost Sergeant Samis, of the Army Training Centre at the Exhibition Grounds, is smug these days in his conviction that it doesn't pay to advertise.

Last week, some of the trainees bragged that they needed no late passes, and that they had been out late, but had avoided detection by using a hole in the fence for their re-entrance. They have been sorry since that they were so boastful, because their story found it way into the Examiner. The next night Sergeant Samis detailed Corporal Joe Yeatman, an Indian from Baptiste Lake, to the inlet, and Joe, a husky chap, pounced upon seven of the "young defenders" as they came in.

"No, sir," said Sergeant Samis, "it doesn't pay to advertise, but it does get results."

HONEYMOON?

Last night, after a stag party for one of Peterborough's groomsto-be, Grant Gillespie, arrived at his new apartment with one of his fellow merry-makers, and found a veritable barrage of welcoming material.

The young ladies interested in the young men of the party had been obviously busy while the men were celebrating, and had plastered the apartment with posters. To-day Grant is being criticized for his desire to have his wedding rehearsal complete in each detail. Last night, the report goes, he unlocked the door of the apartment, and, to his companion's amazement, seized him in his arms, and carried him across the threshold.

Laymen's Group Elects R. G. Winters

MARMORA, Nov. 7—(ENS).—The annual meting of St. Paul's Laymen's Association was held at the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening, and although through mitigating circumstances the attendance was lower than in recent years, the meeting proved to be one of the most enthusiastic in the annals of the association, which observed its tenth birthday. At the earlier part of the meting, the honorary president Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell was unavoidably absent. The guest speaker of the evening, Rev. L. Harding, rector of Stirling and Frankford, was accompanist for the singing of "Fight the Good Fight" and the National Anthem, and also led in the opening prayers. In the reading of correspondence a letter from the Diocesan Laymen's Association regarding the Diocesan Chronicle was brought to the attention of the gathering.

H. R. Pearce, retiring president, gave a short report of the year's activities, following by reports by W. J. Cottrell, secretary-treasurer. In the secretarial report the harmonious working of the retiring executive was stressed as well as the secretary-treasurer's gratitude for restoration to health. The treasurer's report was most encouraging, showing receipts in excess of 138 dollars with about 130 dollars being allotted to parochial funds.

Past President C. H. Buskard ably presided for the election of officers. Those elected were:

Honorary President, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell; President, R. G. Winters; Vice-President, J. R. Hart; Secretary-Treasurer, W. J. Cottrell.

The program of the evening followed. Bert Kouri and William Hart were applauded for pleasing instrumental selections. Rev. L. Harding provoked interesting discussion by his talk on "Propaganda" in which he conveyed the thought that church men should be as enthusiastic for their church as salesmen are over the goods they seek to sell. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his inspiring message. The two instrumentalists having furnished two more numbers, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell spoke briefly in appreciation of the spirit of the meeting and pronounced the benediction. An appetizing lunch was then enjoyed before the gathering dispersed.

A BUCK PRIVATE

Free Yourself from Constipation!

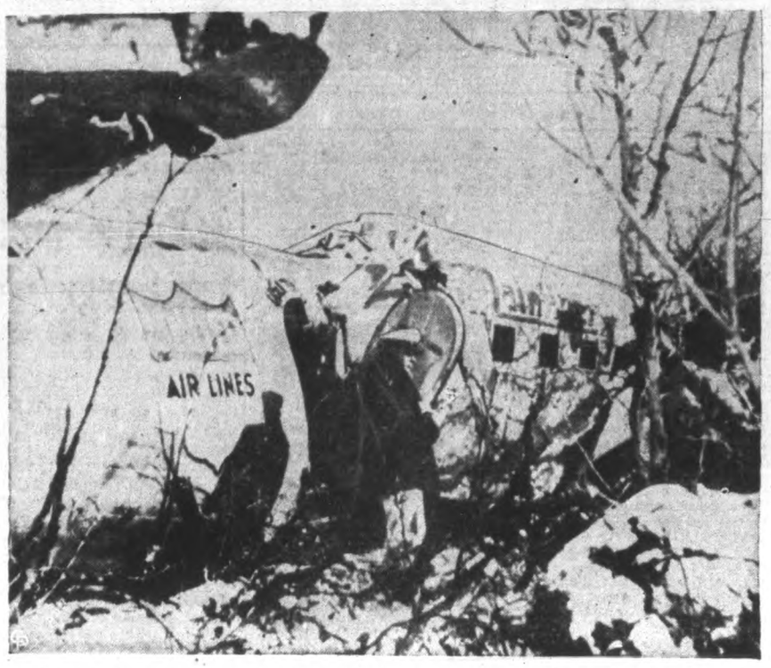
The surest way to rid yourself of any ailment is to discover the cause and to overcome it. Constipation is caused, in the majority of cases, by a diet lacking "bulk."

If your usual menu is made up mostly of bread, meat, potatoes—in all probability your bowels lack the necessary "bulk." Purgatives do not give any lasting relief. Then eat Kellogg's All-Bran. It helps form a soft "mass" in the bowels that is favorable to "regularity."

A delicious, crisp and tasteful cereal, All-Bran is also one of the foods richest in Vitamin B1, the natural intestinal tonic.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink lots of water, and regain your gayness and well-being. Made in London, Canada by Kellogg. At all grocers.

As Searchers Found Crashed Airliner In Utah Mountains



The wreckage of the transcontinental airliner which crashed atop a slope of the Wasatch Mountains during a raging snowstorm is pictured as it was found by a searching party 10 miles northeast of Salt Lake City, Utah. The bodies of the seven passengers and stewardess were jammed together toward the nose of the plane, indicating the crash was headon. The bodies of the pilots were discovered 30 feet from the wreckage. Aeronautical authorities investigating the tragedy intimated that the plane's directional radio probably failed while the pilot was attempting to find the snow-shrouded airfield.

Irish Feuds Are Robbing Great Britain Of Bases

(By JOHN STEVENSON.)

The criticisms of the Government of Eire, which Mr. Churchill made in Tuesday's debate at Westminster, were justifiably very pointed and along with the much severer strictures uttered by private members of all parties reflected the rising tide of indignation in Britain about the callous selfishness of the policy of neutrality which Mr. de Valera's Government is pursuing. The suspicion may be quite unfounded that German submarines and aircraft are getting secret assistance from Irish enemies of Britain for their forays, which have been all too successful in recent weeks, upon British shipping in Irish waters, but it is crystal clear that the protection of such shipping would be immensely simplified if Mr. Churchil had been successful in the fight, which he made in vain some years ago, for the retention of British control over fine natural harbors like Lough Swilly and Berehaven, as they would today have been available as bases for warships and seaplanes in an area where these are badly needed. So the sort of neutrality which Eire is practicing is in actuality a very valuable form of assistance to Germany.

De Valera's Plans for Defense

When, however, after the collapse of France the Nazis began to organize their assault upon Britain, Mr. de Valera could not disregard the possibility that they might use Eire as a jumping-off place and he expressed the determination of his Government to resist any invasion and called for national unity. He also initiated a recruiting campaign to bring his army up to war strength, announced the raising of a local defense force and made arrangements for blackouts, while he induced representatives of the opposition parties, Fine Gael and Labor, to join a National Defense Council. Then after Mr. Churchill had stated that the British Government was making every preparation to repel attacks whether directed against Britain or Ireland, and suggestions had been made that the Governments of Eire and Northern Ireland should co-operate in defensive measures, Mr. de Valera on July 9 last gave to a representative of The New York Times this strange exposition of his views and policies.

His Terms for Co-operation

"We are not prepared to join in any such proposal as a defense committee when Ireland is divided. What we do proposed is a union of Northern Ireland with Eire. This could be accomplished in a day. We are perfectly agreeable to Northern Ireland retaining its Parliament and its governing machinery to deal with local problems as they do today. The only change we contemplate is that the Northern Parliament should be subject to the Parliament of all Ireland instead of to the British Parliament. Defense measures can be worked out effectively. Such defense measures must be worked out on the basis of neutrality; strict neutrality is our best safeguard. If we let one country in, that will inevitably provoke the other to attack. Our only hope is to let none in."

To this exhibition of obstinate purblindness the obvious and unanswerable reply was that the only real defense of Eire lay in the British Navy and that without its protection Mr. de Valera could not defend his previous neutrality for a day, if Germany decided to violate it and, of course, the loyal folk of Ulster poured scorn upon the suggestion that they could ever accept a policy of neutrality.

Lord Craigavon's Obdurcay.

But unfortunately, Mr. de Valera is not alone in his self-satisfied complacency, for Lord Craigavon, the veteran "diehard," who has been Premier of Ulster since 1922, is his peer in reactionary obstinacy and the tremendous issues which are at stake. Speaking at an Orange gathering on June 30, he accused Mr. de Valera of blackmailing the British Government to end partition and declared that he would only agree to co-operate with Mr. de Valera in regard to defence measures if the latter would take an open stand on the side of Britain and the Commonwealth, dismiss the diplomatic representatives of Germany and Italy and undertake not to raise any constitutional issues. In July Mr. Churchill tried to induce him to adopt a more conciliatory attitude, but he had no success, and on his return from London, Lord Craigavon expressed himself as well satisfied with the position.

His Attitude Earns Disapproval.

Lord Craigavon's refusal to make any sacrifices for securing the safety of Britain, to which he professes undying devotion, did not satisfy all his followers in Ulster and two Parliamentary secretaries, Col. A. G. Gordon and Mr. Samuel Warnock, K.C., resigned from his Government as a protest against its inadequate defence policy; Colonel Gordon called for a new Ministry which should invite de Valera to agree to the establishment of a united Government of an Ireland, defended by Britain. But a protest, which attracted more attention came from the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, a young Conservative peer whose grandfather was Governor-General of Canada.

In a letter to the Ulster Press he argued that the Craigavon Ministry should long ago have realized that the things Ulster held in common with the rest of Ireland were a great deal more precious and enduring than the things about which they had fought in the past. He charged that they were too obsessed with the memory of bygone quarrels to appreciate that within a few hours everything they had fought for might be threatened by a foreign invader who had no respect for the Orange Drum, and at the same time he warned the people of Eire that, if the European continent passed under Nazi domination, it was improbable that a small corner of freedom in Ireland could be preserved like an appendix in a bottle.

OMEMEE

Anniversary Observed By Presbyterians

OMEMEE, Nov. 7—(ENS). — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church celebrated its one hundred and fifth anniversary on Sunday, November 3. Rev. D. K. Perrin, B.A., of Hastings Presbytery, was the guest preacher and brought two inspiring messages.

In the morning Mr. Perrin emphasized the necessity of having a Christian belief or creed in order to live the Christian life. In the evening, using as his text I. Cor. 15:33, "Evile communication corrupt good manners," or the Moffat translation, "Make no mistake about it, bad company is the ruin of good character." He stressed the necessity of the Christian nursing a way of life in conformity with his Christian belief.

The congregation of Trinity United Church withdrew its evening service and worshipped at St. Andrew's. Rev. R. M. Patterson, the United Church minister, assisted in the service by reading the Scripture lesson.

The visiting soloist was Mrs. R. J. Randall of Cobourg, who sang two soprano solos and also assisted the choir in their two selections.

At the evening service the local congregation welcomed many visitors from other communians who had come to worship with them.

Rev. D. K. Perrin of Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Randall of Cobourg and Miss Janet Young of Lindsay were guests of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Young on Sunday.

Hitch-Hikers "At Own Risk"

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—Pedestrians caught on London's streets during night air raids wondered why so many motorists ignored their endeavors to "thumb" rides. Some indignantly charged the drivers with selfishness.

Then a spokesman for the motorists gave their side of the case. Many drivers, he said, hesitated to offer strangers a lift because their insurance policies does not cover them against injury to passengers.

Lt.-Col. J. Moore-Brabazon, minister of transport, offers this suggestion. Drivers put a notice on the sides of their cars saying "free lifts at your own risk," he declares. This would absolve them from liability for any injuries suffered by passengers.

Ernest Bevin Is Coming Man In Great Britain

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—Many political observers here have already selected Britain's next Prime Minister—Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor in the Churchill Government who recently was added to the War Cabinet.

The men who watch politics from the press gallery of Westminster and try to predict future trends and events, have been wrong many times in the past. But this time they say they cannot miss—if Bevin stays in politics he will lead the nation, because, they reason, he won't stay otherwise.

Apart from Prime Minister Winston Churchill, no man in British public life has forged to the front so quickly as Bevin in the last six months. No man, and that includes the Prime Minister, has the confidence of the working classes of the nation in a comparable measure.

Big Boss of Labor

Bevin is in the somewhat difficult position of being the Big Boss of the Labor movement, but not boss of the Parliamentary Labor Party. The party elects its leader and deputy-leader each year, but there is no sign Bevin intends to run this year against Clement Attlee and Arthur Greenwood who have held these positions several years. His friends say he is quite prepared to play a subservient role until he makes up his mind whether he likes politics.

In fact, he has been a success at many things, from driving a milk-cart in Bristol to organizing and directing the biggest trade union in the world, the Transport Union.

Dominating Person.

Bevin has a domineering personality. He has never belonged to any organization or movement he did not dominate and that is one of the main reasons why he is being tipped as a future Prime Minister.

Once regarded as a future left-wing leader through the Socialist League with which he flirted but never joined, the Conservatives who sit around him in the House of Commons have discovered he is almost a bitter opponent of left-wing movements. It has come as a great surprise to them because he was associated in their minds with the general strike of 1926 and the series of disputes with the docker's union, whose fights he led for years.

Bevin had a prejudice against politicians for many years and was a bitter enemy of MacDonald, Snowden and Thomas, Laborites who helped form the National Government of 1931. But the war showed a deeper prejudice in him, a passionate hate of Fascism which he interpreted as being aimed at everything trade unionism had built up in a century of slow evolution. It was this conviction that propelled him into politics and he shows every sign of staying around for a while.

Buffalo Bisons Beat Capitals

(By the Canadian Press.)

Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, former goal-tending great with Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, made an official entry today into the list of winning hockey managers.

Thompson gave up the big pads with the Wings this season, taking over the managership of Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League. The Bisons, a new team to the league, won their first league game of the season last night by downing Indianapolis Capitals 3-2 at Indianapolis.

The Bisons, who have played only two games, won with a rally in the third period that netted all their goals. The tallies were produced by Morey Rimstad, Tony Hemmerling and Bill Cunningham. The Indianapolis goals went to Joe Fisher and Jack Keating.

In the only other game of the night Philadelphia Ramblers and Pittsburg Hornets battle to a 4-4 draw, with the Hornets duplicating the Buffalo feat of scoring three goals in the third period.

Pittsburg scorers were Johnny Sherf, with two; Lloyd Roubell and Lloyd Currie. Philadelphia goals went to Lloyd Ailsby, Lude Wareing, Allan Kuntz and Murde McKay.

Status Of Canada's Parliament Increased Through Years

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.—(CP).— Today—during a war such as the world has never seen—begins the second session of the 19th Parliament of Canada.

The gathering is a lineal descendant through 1,000 years of the Witenagemot, Anglo-Saxon National Council so named from "Wita" (wise man) and "Gemot" (meeting.)

Canada's "Witenagemot" is 73 years old. Its history through the years has been one of almost-constantly extending powers. First it was the governing body of a small but growing unit in the British Empire; then that of a Dominion, its status equal to that of the United Kingdom Parliament.

But always it has maintained its place as a bastion of democracy.

The first session of the First Parliament, with Sir John A. Macdonald as Prime Minister, began Nov. 6, 1867, and lasted 43 days. It ended its deliberations, the history says, "largely because of the number of members who belonged to provincial houses," and presumably had to get home to attend to provincial business in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Four Provinces in 1867.

These were the four provinces then embraced in Confederation under the British North America Act which came into force July 1, 1867.

Provision was made in the Act for admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the Northwest Territories and Newfoundland into the Dominion. Newfoundland alone has not availed itself of the provision.

Good and Bad News

At the second session of the first Parliament in 1869 there was both good news and bad. The Government reported a surplus of $20,836, but Louis Riel, the Red River rebel, seized the Hudson's Bay Company stores at Fort Garry, now Winnipeg.

Next year the Northwest Territories were transferred to the Dominion after purchase by Canada of the Hudson's Bay Company holdings in the Northwest, the Province of Manitoba was established under confederation, and the first Riel Rebellion was crushed.

In 1872 the Province of British Columbia joined Confederation and two years late Prince Edward Island. Alberta and Saskatchewan were created in 1905.

In the meantime, an Imperial Order-in-council in 1880 annexed to Canada all British possessions in North America except Newfoundland and its dependencies.

Addition of new provinces created a demand for speedy transportation. In 1880 the Government provided $25,000,000 and $25,000,000 acres of land to the Canadian Pacific Railway to build a transcontinental line. The first train from Montreal to the Pacific Coast went through in 1886.

Only a year before, Louis Riel's second short-lived rebellion broke out in the Northwest. Riel surrendered May 16, 1885, and the third session of Canada's fifth Parliament held a bitter debate on his execution, which occured in November.

The Parliamentary session opening today finds thousands of Canadian soldiers overseas helping Britain in the war against the dictators. The fifth Parliament also met while the nation was particing in Britain's battles.

Nile Rebellion

Today a joint permanent defence board has been set up by Canada and the United States to consider joint problems of defence. In 1898 Canada also was looking to defence, and an imperial military commission was studying the situation .

At the fourth session of the eighth Parliament a year later, Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved a resolution concerning difficulties in south Africa. It read in part:

"This House, represent a people which has largely succeeded by the adoption of the prinicple of conceding equal political rights in producing general content with the existing system of government, desides to express its sympathy with the efforts of Her Majesty's Imperial authorities to obtain for her subjects in the Transvaal such measures of justice and political recognition as may be found necessary to secure them full possession of equal rights and liberties."

In 1900, Canada decided to send overseas her second expeditionary force. Parliament voted $2,000,000 toward expenses of a South African campaign, amid stiff criticism that the Government, not Canada, was paying the wages of the soldiers. The Minister of Militia eported 158 officers, 3,790 men and 7,163 horses had been sent to South Africa.

The First Great War broke out in 1914, and a special war session of the 12th Parliament was called. Sir Robert Borden, then Prime Minister, made this statement:

"As to our duty all are agreed, we stand shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain and the other British Dominions in this quarrel and that duty we shall not fail to fulfil as the honor of Canada demands. Not for love of battle, not for love of conquest, not for greed of possessions, but for the cause of honor, to maintain solemn pledges, to uphold the principles of liberty, to withstand forces that would convert the world into an armed camp; yea, in the very name of peace that we sought to save at any cost save that of dishonor."

In 1931 Canada's Parliament achieved new maturity under the statutes of Westminister, being elevated to equal status in the British Commonwealth of Nations as the government at Westminster.

"I want to ask honorable members and the people of Canada: In what spirit are you going to face this crisis? Are you going to face it believing in the right of individuals, believing in the sacredness of human personality, believing in the freedom of nations, believing in all the sanctity of human life?

"I believe you are."

BABY HAS MORE TEETH THAN YOU
says Mary Blake

Yes, even a day-old baby. Two full sets—baby-teeth waiting to come through, permanent teeth lining up behind them. Mother's diet before baby arrives starts the building of those teeth; baby's food carries it on. That's why both need foods that are rich in lime and phosphorus, and in "sunshine" vitamin D.

Irradiated Carnation Milk is a splendid source of lime, phosphorus, vitamin D. That's one reason so many baby specialists prescribe it. Other reasons are its sterile safety, its uniformity, its convenience in preparing baby's feedings, its economy, and above all its greater digestibility.
Of course you don't have to have a baby to use Carnation Milk. Because it is double-rich, smooth, creamy it does a wonderful job in cooking, and saves money on the table when used in place of cream.
Learn more about Irradiated Carnation Milk. Order several cans from your grocer. Try it just as it comes from the can in coffee and on cereals. Dilute it for recipes calling for milk. And get these Carnation books. "Your Contented Baby" is free. The big, colourful Carnation Cook Book is 15¢ (postpaid). Carnation Company, Limited, Toronto, Ontario.

Laurence Patrick Cullen, son of Captain and Mrs. L. P. Cullen, of Liverpool, England. Rev. Father Woods officiated. The wedding music was played by Mrs. George E. Morfow. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length dress of sapphire blue chiffon velvet, with matching hat, and wore a corsage of white carnations and bouvgardia. She carried the prayer book her mother carried on her wedding day. Miss Marcella Keogh, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, in fuchsia chiffon velvet, with matching hat, and wore a corsage of yellow Queen Elizabeth roses. Mr. James Ryan was best man. During the signing of the register Mrs. Francis Kelly sang "Ave Maria."

After the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's father. The groom's gift to the bride was a cheque, to the bridesmaid a necklace, and to the groomsman a gold watch chain. A pretty house wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robbie of Picton, Ontario, when their daughter Gladys Emily was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Russell Shearer of West Hill, Ontario, son of Mr. Gavin and the late Mrs. Shearer, of Indian River. The Rev. W. R. Pair, of Texas, pastor of the Pentecostal Church of Picton, officiated.

The spacious rooms were decorated with pink and white streamers, weding bells, and bouquets of lovely flowers.

The ceremony took place beneath an arch with portiere effect of pink and white streamers, two wedding bells hung from the centre of the arch were fastened with white ribbon bows and gardenias. Beautiful autumn leaves and fern formed the background.

Several beautiful hymns were softly played by Mrs. George Mallory of Hamilton, sister of the bride, after which the bridal group proceeded down the prettily decorated stairs to the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus," played by Mrs. G. Mallory.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charming in a street length dress of dusky pink sheer with silk lace trimming, matching bridal hair wreath, and shoulder corsage of Premier roses and baby's breath. Tells Of Mission School In India

The November meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of Murray Street Baptist church had a fine attendance of members who listened with interest to an account of Rev. E. E. Garland's early experiences in India, and his life at the Vizagapatam High School, where he has been for the past six years. Mr. Garland is justly proud of this school, where so many prominent men of India have had their early training. He illustrated his address with a number of vivid stories of this land of strange contrasts and fantastic religions, and urged that "we dig down deep, for the financial need of the mission field is great." The president, Mrs. H. H. Graham, thanked the speaker, who, with Mrs. Garland, came from Toronto to be at the meeting.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe opened the meeting with prayer, and the Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. D. Loomis. A beautiful remembrance day solo was sung by Mrs. Pitt-Smith, with Mrs. P. Johnston at the piano. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Says England Is A "Living Nation"

Freedom of vote and religion, and all the attributes that makes for a happy, prosperous country, are what make England a "living nation" declared Rev. H. L. Roberts when he spoke at the November meeting of St. Andrew's W.A., at which Mrs. Paige Rowell presided. Rev. Roberts referred to the nations who are dying or already dead, such as Rome, now fallen for five reasons which he defined as concentration of wealth in the hands of a few; the worship of wealth when money could buy honor, conscience and virtue; universal extravagance; political plunder, and ignorance. The speaker was thanked by Mrs. A. Moir.

Numerous suggestions were heard in connection with the buying of War Savings Stamps, including purchasing them as gifts or bridge prizes and taking stamps in change at stores. Mrs. J. R. Marshall proffered several ideas for the bazaar, to be held the latter part of November. Miss M. Brown is arranging an interesting farm table displaying all types of farm products which will be delivered should the customer desire. Mrs. M. T. Breckenridge and Mrs. Arthur Belleghem were appointed conveners for the entertainment of Nicholls Hospital nurses during the first week of December. A nominating committee of Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Mrs. Harry Wightman and Mrs. A. Moir was appointed.

The group in charge of Mrs. L. M. Brooks and Mrs. Ford Turner was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. E. W. Young read the Bible lesson, and the speaker was introduced by Rev. Dr. E. W. Young, who also closed the meeting with prayer.

300 Youngsters At "Y" Party

A Ghost-Walk through the subterranean passages of the Y.W.C.A. thrilled three hundred of Peterborough's healthy youngsters who afterwards trooped into the gymnasium, passing through the "magic curtain" and climbing the slippery springboard. Much fun was had over the Hallowe'en contests and dances which were the main part of the program.

The Grand March for the judging of the costumes presented a lovely picture for the spectators watching from the gym balcony, tiny tots in ballet costumes, nursery rhymes, etc., bigger girls in gorgeous array made one wish for a movie camera.

Refreshments were served in the Recreation Room by Mrs. C. Collins, Convenor of the Social Committee and Junior members.

Judges were Mrs. J. H. Vernor, Mrs. C. E. LaBlanche, Mrs. B. W. McClennan and Miss Lily Bacon was at the piano.

Realizing that a knowledge of health is most essential to successful pupils, students of the Peterborough Normal School who plan to go out into various parts of Canada to further education among young people, are increasing their own knowledge of modern health by attending Home Nursing Classes sponsored by the Local Canadian Red Cross.

Only one part of the important phases of the work of the Red Cross however is the instruction of students. The organization assists the sick, the homeless and aged, and is already forming new classes for the coming year which will include special instruction on air raids, gases, etc., as well as the already complete course. Special arrangements are being made for groups who wish to enroll, and applicants are asked to telephone the Y.W.C.A. at 7705 or 7581. The objective of this Red Cross Home Nursing Course is a two-fold one, first, "To Promote Health," and second, "To Mitigate Suffering."

To Send Books To Northern School

At the November meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., held in the Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday evening with the Regent, Miss Mabel Patterson, presiding, plans were formulated for the annual Christmas tea to be held in the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, December 7. A wreath is to be placed on the Cenotaph at the memorial service held on Armistice Day. A donation was voted to the Y.W.C.A. campaign, and money to the filling of sixty boxes, the Chapters share towards gifts sent to overseas soldiers at Christmas. A substantial sum of money was also voted toward financial aid for a sick child in need of treatment.

Chapter calendars are being placed as usual in rural schools, and copies of the book "Canada Within the Empire," sent to each pupil in attendance at the Northern adopted school. Refreshments were served after the meeting, and included products donated by a Hamilton firm.

Otonabee Chapter Is Busy Group

In spite of a lengthy program of Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. Wednesday afternoon at the Y.W.C.A., interest of members did not waver for a moment as they planned activities for the next few weeks, and listened to a lively paper on "The Great Empire of Russia," given by Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, describing the fingers of Russia's sea routes and possible contact with the rest of of the world. The country itself was pictured with its mineral wealth and wheat-producing power, as well as the Russian nature, Stalin, and the bluff of prosperity shown visitors.

Mrs. F. L. Robinson, regent, was in the chair, and thanked various members for their outstanding efforts in Chapter working during the past weeks, and expressed gratitude for the gift of children's garments for bombing victims of England made by Mr. R. J. Goring. The draw on the Afghan has been deferred until a later meeting, since tickets are not all in.

Mrs. A. Sherwood is head of the committee of helpers representing the Chapter in the packing of Christmas boxes for soldiers overseas, and money and socks have been donated for this purpose by the group. Plans were made for a War Veterans' tag day, and for wreaths to be placed on the cenotaph Armistice Day. Several news members were welcomed, and a number of names voted upon for membership. Mrs. D. W. Clark has consented to convene the Sunday entertainment at the Exhibition ground to be given shortly. Money was voted toward the Y.W.C.A. fund, the milk fund and the Navy League.

A Pimple Covered Face Kills Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples, and you probably know of cases where a promising romance has been spoiled by those red, white, festering and pus filled sores on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Rice Has Many Qualities Not Contained In Wheat

By MARY MOORE

Potatoes and wheat (in the form of bread) are both excellent carbohydrate and cereal foods but we want to keep our cooking interesting and our families interested in their meals—besides rice has many qualities wheat and potatoes lack (remember to the Japanese and Chinese it is the main part of their diet)—and saturated as our market is with unnatural and refined foods we cooks have to hunt for foods to get or keep health by the Back-to-Nature route.

I think rice is delicious—for at one time I had what a brutally frank doctor called neuoritic indigestion—the only food that did not give me a stomach ache was boiled Demarara rice with melted butter and salt.

Chinese Method of Cooking Rice

One cup rice, 2 cups cold water, 1 teaspoon salt. Use a quart saucepan, round bottomed if possible, as there is less chance of the rice sticking. Put washed rice, salt and water in the saucepan, cover closely and set over hot fire. Do not lift cover once until ready to serve. When water boils over a little (or if larger saucepan is used—when it boils hard)—ordinarily 10 minutes—reduce heat so that water boils slowly exactly 10 minutes. Without lifting cover stand in warm place for 10 minutes. Remember not to lift cover until the end of that time. The water should be all absorbed and each rice grain separate.

The Chinese cook it without salt as they serve rice with salty foods, but most Canadians will prefer to have it added.

Rice Cooked in Double Boiler

One cup rice, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 quart boiling water. Put washed rice (wash it well to wash off starchy coating which tends to make it cloudy) in double boiler with the boiling water and salt, cover and steam until soft (about 50 minutes.) The water will be all absorbed. Uncover and let stand 5 minutes in warm place to dry.

A nice variation of the above method when rice is to be served with beef is to melt ¼ cup butter in bottom of double boiler to be used and add 2 tablespoons minced or grated onion, let cook for 1 minute—then add rice boiling water and salt and cook for 50 minutes in double boiler as directed above.

Rice Cooked in Boiling Water

The reason rice packs when cooked this way is because it is not washed sufficiently, is stirred too much, is allowed to overcook. Wash and soak 1 cup rice 1 hour. Drain. Have 5 quarts water boiling hard, add 2 tablespoons salt, sprinkle rice in slowly enough that water never stops boiling. Do not cover. Boil hard until rice is soft.

Do Not Overcook: This will make the rice mushy. Turn out into sieve or colander, cover with a cloth, set where it will keep warm—maybe in warm oven with door open—and let steam for 5 or 10 minutes. (Save the water in which rice is cooked as a base for soup—it contains valuable mineral matter.)

Rice may be cooked in milk to make it more nourishing for children or invalids, by using the double boiler method.

I have not yet mentioned Brown or Unpolished Rice, which almost always comes in packages and is a little more expensive, but it worth the difference because the brownish coating of brown rice contains much of the mineral matter of rice. If you do not always care to afford brown rice, do at least insist on buying unpolished rice for most grocers although they do not stock anything but ordinary polished common rice know the difference and can get it for you.

Parched Rice

This is an excellent accompaniment for creamed or curried meat, or chili con carne or meat warmed over in gravy.

Two tablespoons bacon fat or drippings or butter, ½ cup rice, 1 cup stock (or water), 1 teaspoon salt, dash of paprika or red pepper. Heat frying pan, add fat—when hot add rice and panfry until golden—about 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add salt, pepper and stock, boil slowly 30 minutes. After 25 minutes cover pot with piece of muslin under lid to prevent escape of steam. At end of 30 minutes, uncover, stir, cover with cloth again and let stand 5 minutes before serving.

Rice Pilaf

This is not the genuine Turkish dish, but this is the name we knew it by at home and it makes an excellent main ingredient of a vegetable plate—and in my opinion ranks in the top three best ways of serving rice.

Use either bacon fat, butter or cooking oil—about 4 tablespoons and heat in saucepan, then add ½ to ¾ cup washed raw rice and saute until golden, then add two large Spanish onions cut into very fine rings, and saute another 5 minutes, adding a little more fat if necessary. Then add 1 No. 2½ can of tomatoes, cover and let simmer until rice absorbs tomato juice then add 2 cups water, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper, and ¼ teaspoon black pepper, and let simmer until rice is cooked but not mushy about 15 minutes—a little more water may be needed but be very sparing with it as it dilutes the flavor.

Rice Baked in Cheese Sauce

(Rice gut Gratin)

Heat 4 cups milk in top of double boiler for ½ hour. In large baking dish put 2-3 cup rice which has been well washed and mix with 1 or 1½ cups grated cheese, and sprinkle over 1½ teaspoon salt. Pour over the hot milk and bake for about 1½ hours at 350 deg. Fahr. An excellent supper dish.

High Standard Rice Pudding

One-half cup rice, 1 quart milk, 2-3 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of nutmeg, grated rind ½ lemon. Mix in large baking dish, bake in slow oven until rice is tender—2 to 3 hours. You may want more sugar or prefer to add 2 beaten eggs.

DOROTHY DIX

Girls Should Always Pick Men Who Are Always Doing the Unexpected If They Want Happiness in Marriage.

Mrs. Willkie is reported to have said that she married Mr. Willkie because she knew he would never bore her. Smart woman. That's about the best reason in the world for any woman picking out a man with whom she expects to spend the next 30 or 40 years, for a wife may tire of a husband who is a hesaint; she may yawn in the face of a learned scholar; she may even get fed up with one who showers her with limousines and mink coats and things; but she never wearies of the husband who keeps her entertained and amused. So I commend the example of the astute Mrs. Willkie who put a snappy line of conversation at the top of the desirable qualities of a husband, to all young girls who are on the husband hunt. Pass over the good-time Charlies whose brains are in their heels and whose step matches yours so well in the dance. You'll spend many more evenings at home than you will at night clubs after you are married, and walk the colic oftener than you will do the rhumba. Don't fall for Johnny's Greek profile and waving locks. He'll turn bald and paunchy on you, sure as shooting. And even if he doesn't, a living picture husband is a pain in the neck and a case of insomnia to his wife. Don't chose a romantic lover for a husband in the belief that you'll be fed on honeyed words all the balance of your life. He dishes out all of his goo before marriage and never mentions the state of his affections again. Don't even espouse a go-getter unles you feel that you'll enjoy spending your evenings with a Tired Business Man who only grunts when you speak to him, and who is about as conversational as a stuffed shirt.

What To Look For.

But chose a man for a husband who will be a good provider, who will not only feed your body on beefsteak and onions, but your soul on white hyacinths.

Pick out as a life mate a man who loves the sound of his own voice, who is interested in little things, who has a sense of humor and a faculty of picking up bits of gossip and bringing them home to retail to his wife over the dinner table. The great silent men are thrilling figures in novels and the movies, but they don't fit into home life.

Now, of course, it is difficult for a girl to tell beforehand just what sort of a matrimonial bargain she is getting, because in the glamor of courtship every man looks like a fairy prince. Also, as long as a man is telling a girl how beautiful and wonderful she is, he is a spellbinder to whom she could listen for ever.

But after marriage, when the lover ceases to chant his sweetie's praises, only too often she finds out that she has married a dummy who has nothing to say that she has the slightest interest in listening to, and who bores her to tears.

This is why every girl should stop asking the boy friend: "Do you love me? Are you utterly, positively certain that you passionately adore me as no woman was ever loved before, and that you will never, never, never change?" long enough to get his views on current topics and discover if he can discourse entertainingly on any other subject except herself. For what a husband says after marriage is not always flattering nor even entertaining and amusing.

Beware of Boredom.

Why women lay so little stress on marrying men who are interesting to live with is hard to understand, since every woman knows that boredom is the thing that is at the bottom of most of the domestic misery and that it causes nine-tenths of the divorces.

It's the husbands and wives who bore each other who fight like cats and dogs just to find some relief for their overtaxed nerves. It's the husbands and wives with nothing to say to each other who spend those ghastly evenings at home in a silence so thick you could cut it with a knife, and who look as if a relief expedition had arrived when any outsider drops in.

It's the husbands and wives who find each other dull beyond endurance who wander off after other women, and affinities who understand them, and get themselves in messes and scandal.

And, on the other hand, it is the husbands and wives who find each other interesting and amusing and who never talk out, who live happily together till their golden wedding day.

Lady Byng Of Vimy Member Of Vice-Regal Party

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—(CP)—Probably for the first time in the 73 years since Confederation, the wife of a Governor - General mounts the Princess Louise throne in the Senate Chamber today under the eyes of another woman who preceded her to the same red-cushioned seat.

When Princess Alice, wife of the Earl of Athlone, accompanies her husband to the throne at today's opening of parliament, Lady Byng of Vimy will be a member of the vice-regal party.

As wife of a former Governor-General, Lady Byng mounted to the same chair when she attended the opening and prorogation of parliamentary sessions between 1921 and 1926.

Not since July 1, 1867, when Viscount Monck took office as first Governor-General of the new Dominion has this situation been duplicated, according to available parliamentary records.

Princess Alice is the third princess to live in Canada as wife of a Governor-General. Her predecessors were Princess Louise, wife of the Marquess of Lorne, and Princess Louise-Margaret, wife of the Duke of Connaught.

Princess Louise-Margaret was in Canada after the first Great War began, but she also was present at parliamentary ceremonies in peacetime when the opening of a new session was an affair of social brilliance.

In contrast, Princess Alice's first attendance in the Senate Chamber on opening day will be in an atmosphere of subdued dignity imposed by the tragedy of war.

The evening gowns of satin and velvet, the furs, the lavish jewels which brightened the austere Senate Chamber in peacetime will be replaced by simple afternoon clothes.

Many of the women who are to attend have expressed complete agreement with the decision to do without the social phase of the ceremonies, saying a lavish display would be in the worst possible taste and an unwarranted frivolity during the war.

In the Governor-General's box in the Senate Chamber with Lady Byng will be Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, a refugee from the war zone who now is living here; Lady May Abel-Smith, daughter of the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice; and Lady Redfern, wife of Sir Shuldham Redfern, secretary to the Governor-General.

Wives and daughters of Cabinet Ministers, the diplomatic corps, consuls, and judges and other prominent women who have been invited to attend the opening will be seated in the galleries and foyer of the Chamber. Usually some visiting women are allowed to sit on the Senate floor, but this procedure has been abandoned this year.

In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away eight years ago today, November 7, 1932.
No one knows how much we miss you,
No one knows the bitter pain

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweetly tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.

Treasure her with care,
You will never know her value
Till you see her vacant chair.

Frederick-Scott Vows Are Pledged

HAVELOCK, Nov. 7 (ENS)—Attractive with potted chrysanthemums, Knox Presbyterian Church at Havelock was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday November 6th at 3 p.m., when Lois Georgina Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott of Havelock became the bride of Francis "Danny" Frederick, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Frederick of Campbellford. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. K. Perrie. Mrs. H. L. Scott of Belmont, the bride's aunt, played the wedding music, and Mrs. (Dr.) D. J. Holdcroft of Havelock, sang "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was winsome in a gown of blue net over taffeta, with attractive finger-tip veil falling from a flowered halo. She carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and white baby's breath. Miss Jean Scott of Havelock attended her sister, wearing a deep pink French taffeta gown with matching accessories and carrying a Colonial bouquet. The groom was attended by Mr. Jack Mathison of Toronto, and the ushers were Mr. Fred Dorie and Mr. Donald Bowen of Campbellford.

Following a motor trip to Quebec, for which the bride wore a teale blue travelling costume, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick will reside in Campbellford.

Among the out of town guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. George Frederick, Miss Helen Frederick, Pte. Jerry Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kelly of Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. H. Payne, Peterborough; and Mr. and Mrs. V. Scott, of Hastings.

Millbrook Group Takes New Name

MILLBROOK, Nov. 7—(ENS). — Mrs. E. J. Powell was hostess for the Junior Girls' Club, which met at her home yesterday afternoon, with eleven members present. The roll call was answered with "A list of good books and their authors."

At next week's meeting, which is to be at the home of Mrs. Russell Smith, this roll call response will be repeated, since its scope is wide and could not be exhausted, to even a limited degree, at one gathering.

The matter of a name for the group was fully discussed, and all suggestions considered, "The Home Front Guards" being finally chosen. The demonstration on "Posture" by Wilma Armstrong, Luella Kennedy and Ruby Fallis, took up considerable time and was very helpful, discussion centring round this topic, and also on first aid.

Mrs. W. E. Armstrong, the leader, took up the latter topic first, under the head of "Open Wounds," noting: control of the bleeding, lessening the effect of shock, prevention of infection.

The vote of thanks to the hostess was sponsored by Luella Kennedy and Melba Ball.

Personals

Mrs. Lloyd Byam, Miss B. M. Turner, and Miss Josie Sutton motored to Toronto on Sunday, and on Monday saw the Princesses' dolls, France and Marianne, with their lovely and complete wardrobe; total receipt to go toward the refugee fund. The party returned Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Wainman and family have moved to Lindsay to reside; their house on Centre street being now occupied by the Flicking and Yelland families. The "Wainman Pheasantry" will now be an attraction in Lindsay, as it proved to be locally for some time past. Lois Wainman was given a party by the teachers and scolars of the public school before leaving the village, and presented with a box of fine stationery, and other gifts. Lunch and games completed a pleasant evening.

Mrs. Karl Vesper of Los Angeles, California, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong, last week; another daughter, Mrs. L. Richardson, who comes from Saskatchewan, and who had visited her mother for two or more weeks, left for her home in the West; Mrs. Armstrong accompanying her as far as Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Martin and two children, of Toronto, were recent guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam.

For Friday, November 8.

Judging by the weak positions of the ruling planets this may be a day of routine events with matters moving in customary grooves. In these there may be fair success, with promise of expansion, progress and rather pleasnt personal relations. It is probable that social, friendly or sympathetic understanding may dominate or influence busines decisions.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which matters may move along in moderate grooves for successful approach to not too exalted ambitions. This happy state of affairs may be assisted by the support and friendly understanding of social or cultural comrades.

A child born on this day may be fairly ambitious, making a moderate success by its efficiency, expansive ideas and humanitarian and friendly impulses.

Grow Blooming Plants to Brighten Your Home

Favorites Easy to Raise

How gorgeous this astilbe japonica! Seeing one like it in a friend's window, will you wish too late you had started an astilbe, too?

Be forehanded! Now is the time to pot astilbe roots to enjoy this winter the pretty foliage, the feathery masses of tiny flowers—whitish, pink or red.

And this favorite plant thrives with very little care. Pot in any sandy loam, water well, and when buds begin to appear keep the pot in a saucer of water.

The astilbe likes an even temperature — about 60 degrees during the day, not lower than 50 degrees at night.

Other flowers, foliage plants, too are easy to grow if you know their likes and dislikes.

Geraniums love sun, but ferns sulk in direct winter sunlight. Gloxinias hate water on their leaves, an aspidistra is all the better for a good leaf-washing.

In our 32-page booklet you will find complete instructions for raising many kinds of foliage plants, ferns, bulbs, vines, blooming plants. Has information on fertilizers, watering, repotting, pests. Tells of material to grow in water, window boxes, bracket pots.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of MAKING PLANTS AND FLOWERS GROW INDOORS to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

A SMALL SLAM PLAY

THERE IS just one kind of play which is of value in making a small slam contract, but utterly worthless for grand slam purposes. That is a lead-throwing end-play. Since it involves giving the defenders a trick so that they must lead back what you wish, the very use of it would defeat a grand slam contract at once. But many a small slam would be impossible without use of this device, especially when a finesse or finesses may be marked as probably destined to fail.

After West led his heart 4, South could count up only eleven tricks unless the heart J could win or one of the minor finesses would work. So he played the heart J and East covered with the Q, the K winning. Then came seven spade tricks and the heart A, South discarding so as to leave both minor tenaces intact. When West discarded so that he had to put his heart 10 on the A, South realized West was holding on to his minor suit cards, four of them.

There would have been no point in West's doing this, the declarer figured, unless he was trying to guard an honor in each of the minor suits. If the declarer had now finessed one of those suits, West would have won, could have returned the suit, and there would have been a loser then in the other suit. But he didn't do that. He played to the club A, then led the club Q to the marked K in West's hand. The latter had nothing to return but a diamond, so the A and Q of that suit took the last two tricks.

Two Girls Killed In Factory Fire

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 6 — (AP). —Two girls were reported killed and several more were feared dead today as fire of undetermined origin swept through a toy factory in downtown Buffalo.

William R. Castimore, fire commissioner, said two bodies were taken from the blazing three-storey brick building. Several more girls were seen hanging from windows and crying for help as firemen arrived in response to a general alarm.

Science Works To Build Canadian War Machine

OTTAWA, Nov. 7 — (CP). — The War Technical and Scientific Development Committee is directing its money and effort toward the development of up-to-date war apparatus of all kinds, for advanced aeronautical studies and furtherment of medical and physiological research upon men engaged in mortal combat.

Air Minister Power made this announcement in a statement, prepared for the press. The statement said that Canada had taken over certain research work which would have been difficult to maintain in England under war conditions.

Assumption of the duty of pursuing research for the Empire would be relatively easy, the statement said, because of the active co-operation between Canada and the United Kingdom in recent years. "Canadian scientists have worked overseas and British scientists have studied with the Research Council in Canada. Stationed in Canada for the duration of the war as liaison officer for the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research of Great Britain is Dr. R. H. Fowler, Professor of Physics at Cambridge."

More Funds Wanted.

The committee was formed, the statement said, to assure that funds placed at the disposal of the Government for prosecuting the war would be put to the greatest use.

Air Minister Power wants $10,000,000 for research. He has already received $2,000,000. The Air Minister said that with these contributions "a most important phase of war activity will be pressed ahead, industrial and private wealth making it possible for science to serve to its fullest capacity without the check reins made virtually indispensable under Government financing."

At a press conference the Minister explained that in experimental research it sometimes happened that great deal of money was spent with nothing tangible achieved except for the exploration of certain avenues of research. He said he could get all the money he needed for equipment and personnel in the Air Force from the Government, but when it came to expending funds for something speculative, it was difficult to obtain.

U-Boat Captain Tows Lifeboat

SWANSEA, Wales, oNv. 7—(CP). A U-boat commander towed a lifeboat containing survivors of a ship he had torpedoed, gave them supplies and apologied for sinking their vessels in a manner contrasting strikingly with the usual behavior of U-boat men, according to Arthur Hulland.

Hulland was cook aboard the oil tanker British Fame torpedoed in the Atlantic last August. When the survivors in the lifeboat came alongside the submarine the commander asked "how many have I killed?" Hulland related. He was told three with the first torpedo.

The German said he was sorry and asked survivors to convey his regret to their families when they reached home.

"There you are," he added. "It is your duty to bring petrol into your country and it is mine to stop it. It is your turn this time. Perhaps it may be mine next."

The commander provided the survivors with food, water and tobacco and then took them in tow until the tow rope snapped. Not considering the spot a safe one to linger in, the commander then set the lifeboat a course to the Azores. The survivors reached there safely after five and a half days.

Healing Bitterness

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(CP).—Public bonfires to destroy all campaign literature and buttons were suggested by William Allen White today as a means of "healing partisan bitterness." The Emporia, Kas., editor also urged "unity mass meetings."

LUFTWAFFE TO BLAME

MANCHESTER—(CP). — A case here was postponed because the officers of the solicitors for the defence had been "made the subject of an attack by the King 's enemies" and necessary documents ruined.

Imprisoned

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, one of two men chosen by Mohandas K. Gandhi to make anti-war speeches in India, was sentenced to "four years of rigorous imprisonment" on charges brought under the Defence of India Act.

Bride and Groom Honored at Keene

KEENE, Nov. 7—(ENS)—A miscellaneous shower was held in the Town Hall Monday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Elmhirst (nee Marybelle Humphries) in honor of their marriage. A large crowd enjoyed round and square dancing with S. Sullivan as floor manager.

Miss Rosetta Frankish read an appropriate address followed by the presentation. The newlyweds were also presented with a beautiful electric table lamp by the Young People's Club of which both are members.

The groom replied in a fitting maner and lunch was served after which dancing was resumed for the remainder of the evening.

Y.P.S. Meeting Well Attended

HASTINGS, Nov. 7 — (ENS). — Twenty-eight young people met in the basement of Trinity United Church on Monday evening for the regular meeting of the Young People's Society.

The worship period included the singing of a hymn, an explanation by the Rev. J. E. Glover of the scripture reading given by Muriel Oliver, and prayer by the pastor. Mrs. Basil Johnston, the vice-president, presided over the business.

The Keene Young People's Society will be guests at next Monday's meeting, when they will be presented with the attendance banner won by Hastings and Keene at the Peterborough Presbytery Rally. As each society won the same number of points the banner was to be shared each society to possess it for six months.

The meeting of November 18 will be disbanded to enable the young people to attend the Peterborough Presbytery supper meeting to be held in George Street United Church, Peterborough, when addresses will be given by two noted missionaries, Dr. Robert McClure of Honan, China, and Rev. Lester Burry of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Rev. J. E. Glover, Mrs. Basil Johnston and Miss Claudine Hoard were appointed as a committee to arrange for transportation to the supper meeting.

It was announced that the Young People's Fall Rally will be held in George Street United Church, Peterborough, on November 29.

A delightful program then followed, consisting of a piano solo by Miss Elleda Buck; a reading by Miss Frances Hoard; a solo by Miss Helen Richardson; reading by Martin Rusaw; saxaphone solo by W. W. Knight; reading by Miss Ruby Fleming and a recreational period conducted by Martin Rusaw.

Expected In Italy

Rome, Nov. 7 (AP)

FASCIST political circles today described the indicated re-election of President Roosevelt as "re-affirmation of American policy, which was expected."

"Since there was no surprising result, there is no occasion to comment," one Fascist observer said. "American policy evidently will remain the same, and so will Italy's."

Minor Mishap Leads To Fatal Accident

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 7 (CP) —B. Violette, Timiskaming taxi driver, was killed nine miles from here on the Timiskaming highway last night when struck by an automobile as he discussed a slight accident with another driver.

Violette's car collided with another driven by Leonard Lackey of North Bay. Violette walked to the Lackey machine and after talking to the driver turned to go back to his car. As he stepped on the road, an automobile driven by William Grant of Timiskaming struck him.

Salvaging Of Used Materials Reduction Of Waste Studied

OTTAWA, Nov. 7—(CP). — Possibility of reducing waste and salvaging certain types of used materials is being studied by the Voluntary Services Branch of the National War Services Department, with a view to launching a nation-wide campaign.

But unless it is carefully organized, that sort of campaign could be a liability instead of an asset, Dr. W. E. Stapleford, Director of Voluntary Services, said to-day. For instance, tin cans were useless for manufacture into munitions or for other war purposes.

"Machinery for re-processing cans for war purposes is too expensive to make it worthwhile," he said.

Salvage campaigns already are being carried out in various parts of Canada, and from the drives considerable money has been realized for various war charity purposes. A lot of scrap iron and steel has been reclaimed for use in the munitions industry.

"The furnaces at Hamilton, Ont., use 1,500 tons of scrap iron and steel daily," Dr. Stapleford said. "Our survey shows there isn't as much of the metals available in scrap as one might think, but there is enough to justify a general campaign across the Dominion."

The plans now being studied by the Voluntary Services Branch for a nation-wide salvage campaign will not interfere with similar activities already organized by groups across the country. They were carrying on a "really useful war service."

Instead, it would be an extension of the work so that every means would be employed to prevent waste and salvage all useful materials, at least until the end of the war.

Machine Is Out

GENESEO, N Nov. 7—(AP).—The board of elections left up to the Attorney-General's office today the problem of deciding what to do about a voting machine that gave both President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie 458 votes each in normally overwhelmingly Republican Geneseo. Tells of Great Benefits From Using Syntona Medicine

No Longer Suffers With Acid Indigestion, Gastritis, Dizzy Spells, Heartburn ad Headaches. Pains in Back and Limbs Also Relieved. Has High Praise For Syntona.

"I feel so different in every way since I have taken a treatment of Syntona that I can hardly realize I am the same person," said Mr. Norman Carson, Tilbury, Ontario

"For two years I hardly knew what it was to eat a meal in comort. I would have awful hungry feelings, but the least bit of food so upset my stomach that I would suffer for hours with cramps and heartburn. Gas would fill up my stomach and chest so bad I could hardly draw a full breath and sour, burning liquids would rise right up in my throat. I was always having headaches and dizzy spells, my tongue was coated and my breath was bad. There was a soreness and pains all through my back and limbs.

"That is the condition I was in a few weeks ago when I began taking Syntona, but now I am happy to say I am free of all that stomach misery and I don't get those headaches and dizzy spells like I used to, I got grand relief from that sore, inflamed feeling in my back and joints, so I can get a good night's sleep once more. I never took a medicine that acted so pleasantly and efficiently before and I think everybody who suffers like I did should give it a good trial."

Syntona produces these results without the aid of harsh drugs or depressors. It is made only from the pure juices of herbs, roots, and barks that have long been known for their beneficial action on the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. It is pleasant to take and will not harm even the most delicate constitution.

GREEKS BALK ITALIANS

Londoners Are Quickly Adjusting Themselves to Rigors of Shelter Life

DREW MIDDLETON, ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER, FINDS MEN HAVE COME TO ACCEPT THE RUINED HOMES AND SHOPS AS INEVITABLE AND THAT THEY DO NOT TALK ABOUT BOMBS.

LONDON, Nov. 8 — (AP). —There is no peace in London's bomb-harried East end where, after two months of almost continuous punishment by German air raiders, residents have re-arranged their lives.

This morning, I watched them troop out of air raid shelters at 7 a.m. The women and children had been in there since 7 o'clock last night. Most of the men had been there since 10 p.m. after their nightly beer and game of darts in a nearby pub.

Inside the shelter, two men doused the bunks with insecticide, and two more spread disinfectant over the floor.

One of the men said the people quickly adjusted themselves to the routine of shelter existence.

"We got no faith in them sirens, though. We stay in the shelter until daylight, no matter what time the 'all clear' sounds.

"Funny, we don't talk about bombs any more, although some women lie awake almost all night looking over at their young ones. Some mothers are sending their children away. Hurts them, it does, but who'd want a kid to grow up like a wild thing living in a cave?"

The men don't get angry now the way they did in the first few nights of the concentrated attacks. They have come to accept ruined homes and shops as inevitable.

"All we want is that Berlin gets a little of its own back."

Ottawa Plans Revamping Of Financing

Provincial Premiers Called To Meet About Mid-January

By CARL REINKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—(CP).—A revamped public finance system in Canada—held essential to efficient prosecution of the war—loomed today as one of the major prospects of the parliamentary session just begun.

However, Prime Minister Mackenzie King broke a six-months' silence regarding the weighty reports of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, which was handed to the Government last May.

Today general debate on the throne speech begins in the Commons when Brooke Claxton (Lib. Montreal-St. Lawrence-St. George) and Rene Jutras (Lib. Provencher) move and second the address in reply. After that Conservative Leader Hanson will move adjournment of the debate, to be resumed Tuesday afternoon. The Commons will

Eire Guards Bases

LOUGH SWILLY, Eire, Nov. 8—(AP).— Units of Eire's tiny navy patrolled the waters of Lough Swilly today in fulfillment of Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's promise to guard naval bases against any attack.

Lough Swilly, in the county of Donegal in the extreme north of Ireland, was one of the most important of the bases used by the British fleet in the last war.

Eleven Husky Yukon Miners Come Out To Fight Hitler

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., Nov. 8—(CP). — Out of the north has come a cosmopolitan group of 11 men, husky miners from the Yukon goldfields, united in a common objective—to get "a crack at Hitler" as quickly as possible.

The men, all from Dawson, Y.T., where they were employed by the Yukon Consolidated Mining Company, are aboard a coastal vessel which left here yesterday for Vancouver, intending to enlist in the Canadian Active Service Force.

At least one of them has a personal feud with the Nazis.

"I want to get as far overseas as I can," said Walter Erickson. "I want to get even with the man who killed my sister and her four-year-old baby girl in Norway."

Erickson told how he had learned of the death of his sister and her child. Living outside Oslo, Norway, they had seen two transport planes land, and had run out into the field, with other inhabitants. The planes were German, and the invaders swung machine guns on the civilians and mowed them down.

The party is headed by Tommy Rogers, Welsh veteran of the last war and eager to get into the present conflict.

U.S. Aids Britain

50 Per Cent Of Production For Britain

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—(AP). — The Priorities Board announced today that the British Purchasing Commission will be permitted to negotiate orders with the United States aviation industry for an additional 12,000 planes.

The action was announced shortly after President Roosevelt told a press conference he had established a rule of thumb policy whereby Britain and Canada would be supplied 50 per cent. of United States defence items now coming off factory lines, including large bombers and other things needed both here and abroad.

The 12,000 planes, the Board said, will be built in existing plants and in other facilities now developing.

Already Orders For 14,000.

Britain already has orders in effect in the United States for 14,000 planes, President Roosevelt said in an election campaign address at Boston last week. At the same time he had announced that Britain had asked permission to order 12,000 additional. He said then that he had asked the Defence Commission's priorities board to give "most sympathetic consideration" to the request.

The board said today it was intended, under plans now being devised, to gear construction of the British planes to United States production in such a way as to prevent interference with American defence requirements.

Steady Deliveries.

"The question of delivery priorities is being studied," the board said in a brief formal statement. "They will be fixed at appropriate times as production progresses."

There was no announcement as to when the ships might be ready for delivery.

At his first press conference since he was elected to a third term, Mr. Roosevelt also reported that United States and Mexican army officers have carried on conversations regarding joint defence similar to those with other Latin American countries.

The President said that heretofore, in regard to defence items

Driver Killed When Car Strikes Tree

Passenger Found Badly Injured By Passing Driver

George Pearson, 31, of 33 High street, North Monaghan, was killed instantly and Wilbert T. Regan, 50, of 600 Gilmour street, member of the plumbing firm of Shaughnessy and Regan, seriously injured.

Early this morning when the car in which they were riding shot off Highway 28, 300 yards west of the Chemong turn and crashed into a tree.

Pearson who was the representatives of a Toronto plumbing supplies firm was driving and police believe that he fell asleep at the wheel.

Phillip O'Reilly, driver for the Weston Bread Company discovered the accident at five minutes to 6 o'clock this morning when he noticed the wrecked car in the ditch He investigated and found Pearson dead at the wheel and Regan badly injured beside him. Police were notified and Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure was soon on the scene.

From the marks on the highway and shoulder of the road it was possible to reconstruct the accident. Apparently the car, travelling toward Peterborough, had run off the south side of the road angling over

BELFAST, Nov. 8—(CP Cable).—Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, today declared the present situation in regard to the refusal by Eire to allow the British Navy to use its port is a "complete vindication" of the stand taken by Belfast at the time of the Anglo-Irish pact of two years ago.

Commenting on Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's statement that Eire would continue to deny the use of her ports to the British submarine-hunting forces, Lord Craigavon said:

"I gave a solemn warning to the British Ministers from time to time on the dangers bound to accrue from such unnecessary action as the surrendering of these valuable bases for British use as protection not only for Great Britain and Northern Ireland but for Eire also.

"All the sacrifices Ulster has made in the past have been fully justified by having secured for His Majesty's forces a place in Ireland from which they can successfully combat the dangers which confront us by land, sea and air. What has happened is a complete vindication of the government of Northern Ireland since it took office."

Arms Plants, Oil Tanks Hit By R.A.F.

Armament Factories Oil Plants Hit By Heavy RAF Raids

LONDON, Nov. 8—(CP).—Official sources reported today that the Royal Air Force carried out a smashing attack on various German-held objectives during the night, particularly on the great Krupp armament works at Essen, on which raids were reported to have been "exceedingly heavy."

Oil plants in Germany, "invasion ports," already black from fires and the demolition of many previous raids, and airdromes in Nazi-occupied France also were blasted.

The other targets of the R.A.F. raiders were listed as a synthetic oil tank at Cologne, a large part of which was reportedly set afire; blast furnaces at Dusseldorf and Oberhausen; docks on the Dartmund-Ems Canal; the inland port of Duisberg; shipping in Dunkirk harbor, and airdromes in Germany and German-occupied territory.

Struck at Power Station.

At Lorient, the Air Ministry News Service reported, the R.A.F. struck at a power station, naval workshops, barracks near a drydock, shipbuilding ways and railway approaches.

Tons of bombs started fires which were still visible for half an hour after the bombers had started home, the News Service said.

Despite powerful ground defences, large concentrations of searchlights and interception attempts by Messerschmitt pursuit ships, the News Service said, the British raiding force returned without casualties.

Aircraft of the Coastal Command also bombed airfields at Abbeville and Lannian, firing buildings at Abbeville and dropping explosives on the Lannian field as German planes were taking off.

No Aircraft Lost.

The Air Ministry issued the following communique:

Metaxas Line Holds Duce's Drive

Mechanized Forces Hurled Back In Drive On Ioannina

ATHENS, Nov. 8—(AP).—Italian forces were reported today to have been thrown back by Greece's defenders, both in the centre sector of the moutainous border front and on the northeastern wing, where the Greeks have been in Albania since the start of the war 12 days ago.

The gains of the right wing were described as small but those in the centre as important.

This centre sector is where a large number of Italians were reported trapped some days ago, according to dispatches from the front, and the remnants are being encircled now, it was said.

Attacks Thrown Back.

Earlier the high command announced that all attacks on the Greek left wing, along the main defences of the Metaxas line, near the Ionian shore, had been thrown back.

The Italians had brought the full force of their mechanized forces into the battle to crack the line near the coast in a drive toward Ioannina.

Artillery blasted along the entire front with troops fighting on a fairly heavy scale, it was said, but Greek field artillery and anti-tank guns were most active in the protection of the coastal route to Ioannina.

Neutral military experts said the Greek positions now are as good as or better than they were on the first day of the Italian offensive.

Offsets Withdrawal.

They said that the Greek advance into Albania on the Macedonian front more than offset their withdrawal 100 miles to the southwest in the Epirus region.

Everywhere, according to these observers, the Greeks apparently are operating in accordance with well-laid plans and with no break in their communications or supply organization. Both army and civilian morale

Pensions Cancelled

OTTAWA, Nov. 8— (CP). —Italian veterans of the last war who are still citizens of Italy no longer are entitled to the war veterans' allowance in Canada. Under an Order-in-Council tabled in the House of Commons Thursday, payment of the allowance to nationals of a country at war with Canada is prohibited.

In the last war Italy was an ally and the war veterans' allowance was payable to men who served in the allied armies, lived in Canada, and were in need and unable to make a living, subject to certain restrictions.

Germans Claim Convoy Sunk

BERLIN, Nov. 8 (AP)—The German high command claimed today that surface warships of the German navy operating in the Atlantic "have destroyed completely a British convoy on the North Atlantic route, sinking 86,000 tons of shipping.

(There was no immediate comment from British sources on this Nazi claim.)

(On Nov. 5 the 16,698-ton British liner Rangitiki radied that she was being shelled by a German vessel of the Graf Spee class—a pocket battleship—about half way between Ireland and Newfoundland, and a little later the British freighter Cornish City, 4,952 tons, sent a similar message of distress.

(It appeared then that a convoy had been attacked. The Nov. 5 messages were the last received from the two vessels.)

Gunmen Kidnap Toronto Man

TORONTO, Nov. 8 (CP)—Police today sought two gunmen who kidnapped a printing salesman in crowded downtown streets and later are believed to have staged a holdup in suburban New Toronto, escaping with $800.

Malcolm McCutcheon of Brampton told police that as he entered his automobile here yesterday a man, armed with a revolver, slid in beside him. Another gunman took over the wheel and after they were out of the city, they bound his hands with his tie, parked the car behind a race track and locked it.

The thugs then are believed to have gone to Reeve Edward Vogleman's drug store in New Toronto and at gunpoint, forced two customers and the staff to lie on the floor. They fled with the money to McCutcheon's car, drove off and, several blocks away, left him.

It was the first armed robbery in New Toronto in the last 15 years.

Strike At Industry

Children's Hospital, Home For Aged Hit

LONDON, Nov. 8—(CP).—German warplanes appeared early over London tonight after widely scattered daylight attacks over Britain.

Anti-aircraft guns roared into action almost immediately after the sirens wailed, and the first night bombers were heard droning high above the capital.

Anti-aircraft batteries went into action shortly before the first daytime alert sounded in mid-morning as the defences sought to turn the raiders away from the city.

Five bombs plunged down on one southeastern town, striking a working class street and causing three casualties.

The "raiders passed" signal ended London's first day raid about noon. It had lasted 1½ hours.

Hospital Hit

Raiders also were reported over the Midlands during the morning and reports of last night's raiding disclosed that a large library, a children's hospital and a Catholic home for the old were among the places hit. Casualties were few at all three.

Fair weather prevailed in the Strait of Dover, but a slight haze cut visibility.

Casualties were few in the night raids which were concentrated mainly on London and the surrounding area, the Ministries for Air and Home Security said. A few bombs were dropped on the industrial Midlands, a town in the southwest and at other widely scattered points.

Tower of London is Bombed

Famous Church Of St. Clement Danes Is Also Wrecked

LONDON, Nov. 8—(CP). — The Tower of London and the Church of Saint Clement Danes in the Strand have been hit by bombs in recent raids, it was officially announced today.

Much of the historic interior of St. Clement Danes, regarded as one of the most beautiful churches designed by Sir Christopher Wren, has been destroyed but the structure still looks proudly down on the Strand.

A bomb fell near the church, demolishing windows and making most of the interior "almost a shambles," as the rector, Rev. W. Pennington-Bickford, put it.

Two of its most precious parts escaped damage, however. They were the stone altar dating back to pre-reformation days and the pulpit, carved by Grinling Gibbons.

The ancient tower, the scene of many events in English history, served in its day as a fortress, a royal residence and a prison. Its tall spire on the shore of the Thames is one of the historic landmarks of London.

Among the famed figures of history who were imprisoned in it were James I. of Scotland and Sir Walter Raleigh. It was there that Henry VIII married Catherine of Aragon and Anne Boleyn.

There also Anne Boleyn was beheaded. Sir Thomas More and many others walked to their death behind its grim walls.

It was there that "the princes in the tower" were murdered.

Like St. Paul's Cathedral, the Church of St. Clement Danes was designed by Sir Christopher Wren. It was built in 1681 and a tablet in one pew recalls that Dr. Samuel Johnson once worshipped there.

Elderly Woman Protests Leaving Bombed Home

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(CP).—Bomb splinters from the Battle of Britain:

A delayed action bomb fell in a cottage garden. The elderly woman owner protested vigorously when the bomb disposal squad ordered her to evacuate and kept anxious watch from a distance when the Royal Engineers started to dig. Suddenly a corporal ran up the path toward her.

"Would you mind coming along for a moment, ma'am?" he asked. "The turkeys are attacking the Boys and they're so frightened they can't go on with the digging."

18 PLANES DESTROYED

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(CP)—The Air Ministry said tonight that "18 enemy planes were destroyed today" as against four British fighters, two of whose pilots were saved.

Want No Cellar Shelters

Prefer The Open Ditches So They Can Watch Air Raids

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 8.—(AP).—Residents of this Macedonian city hastily piled sandbags about important buildings and dug trenches in open spaces to-day to prepare for an aerial siege from the Italian air armada.

In three days this once-powerful city has been transformed into a trench-scarred citadel.

Most of the residents prefer open ditches to cellar shelters during air raids because they can see what is going on outside.

A hit on an Italian plane brings them charging out of the trenches like infantry going over the top so they can be on hand where the plane lands, whether it is loaded with bombs or not.

One Italian plane which fell in Salonika was torn to shreds in a few minutes by Greeks seeking souvenirs.

The Government was forced to issue regulations prohibiting residents from taking parts from fallen planes before the authorities can take control.

Many of those who fled from the city when the Italians first attacked are filtering back.

Those who remained have adopted a nonchalant attitude toward air raid alarms. Children play a Greek version of hopscotch with bomb fragments.

Even in buildings converted into hospitals for the civilian wounded there is an air of confidence.

In one hospital, I saw a boy swathed in bandages as the result of an air raid. He did not speak of his pain, but asked me:

"Mister, did you see our soldiers shoot down that Italian plane? I saw it fall. They can't beat us."

1,000 Homes Hit By Bombs

In Spite Of Heavy Raids Casualties Been Small

RAMSGATE, England, Nov. 8 — (CP).—Contributions from Canadians are helping this battered southeast English town re-establish itself after heavy Nazi air raids.

In one mass raid bombs fell for four minutes and damaged more than 1,000 houses. There have been sporadic attacks since them, but Ramsgate still carries on. Appeals were sent to English towns and to Canada, where a number of former citizens of the town live, and the response is going to relieve the difficulty.

Casualties in the town have been comparatively few, for it has probably the safest air raid shelters in the world—3¼ miles of tunnels cut

Engineers Plan To Rebuild Tacoma Bridge

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 8 (AP)—The elements won in the battle for the $6,400,000 Narrows Bridge, and the floor of the world's third largest suspension span lay in Puget Sound today. But man and his science will try again.

Agitated and twisted by a wind of gale proportions, the colossal structure, which only four months ago was dedicated as a monument to engineering science, crumbled, then collapsed with a mighty roar yesterday into the white-crested waves of the Sound.

Two Men on Bridge

There was no loss of human life. Two men—an engineer and a newspaperman—who were on the bridge when it began to twist violently, miraculously escaped, even as sections of the floor began hurtling into the waters 300 feet below.

Tubby, a cocker spaniel riding in the car with Leonard Coatsworth, Tacoma newspaperman, was not so fortunate. Coatsworth had to abandon his car to save his life. And the terrified Tubby nipped at the knuckles of Prof. F. G. Farquharson, the engineer, who attempted to release the dog. As Farquharson and Coatsworth made their separate and precarious ways to safety, the car and cocker spaniel fell into the Sound.

Plan to Rebuild

A. F. Andrew, chief engineer of the Dashington Toll Bridge authority, who announced that plans for rebuilding the bridge would be undertaken immediately, attributed the tragedy to "substitution of plate girders eight feet in depth for a truss design which had been previously been planned." He explained:—

"The solid metal expanses acted like a sail, catching the wind and swinging the bridge. We had planned to bore holes to allow the wind to pass through, but had not had time."

It was a race with the elements that the engineers lost. From its opening, the bridge had shown menacing signs of sway whenever a high wind whipped up. There was an up-and-down swing that gave motorists a sea-sick feeling.

A $20,000 model of the span consequently was constructed in the University of Washington engineering laboratory, and was studied by engineers seeking a means of arresting the sway.

The State carried insurance of $5,200,000 on the bridge, plus insurance against loss of tolls.

Was On Bridge

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 8 (AP) — I was the only person on the narrows bridge when it collapsed. It wasn't bravery on my part. I didn't believe it would happen, and besides, I was anxious to get a motion picture of the unusual way the bridge was acting for my official records.

When I arrived about 9:45 a.m., the bridge was moving in a normal way, in the familiar rippling motion we were studying and seeking to correct.

About half an hour later it started a lateral twisting motion in addition to its veritical waves. It had never done that before. There was considerable noise of stress and strain. As the motion increased in severity, lamp posts were jerked back and forth in a side motion and at least six snapped off while I was on the bridge.

I noticed one auto stalled in the middle of the span. Previously I had seen two men near the car. They were deathly sick. They stumbled and crawled to the Tacoma end.

I looked in the car and saw a dog in there. Then I went ashore to get some more films for my camera, and walked out on the careening span again.

Returned For Dog

About 10 minutes later, as the pitching, twisting and rolling increased, the dog occurred to me again. Since I love dogs, I staggered out to mid-span again and opened the door and tried to coax him out. The animal, sick and terrified, bit me on a knuckle.

Then I gave up the attempt, deciding that even if I succeeded in getting the dog out he'd probably fall overboard. So he stayed and plunged to death in his master's car.

Looking toward the gig harbor end, I saw the suspenders—the vertical steel cables—snap off and a whole section of the bridge caved in.

The main cable over that part of the bridge, freed of its weight, tightened like a bow string, flinging the suspenders into the air like so many rain lines.

I realized the rest of the main span of the bridge was going so I started for the Tacoma end. Behind me, the rest of the bridge plunged into the sound.

By that time I was between the tower on the Tacoma side and the Tacoma shore. I thought I was out of danger, but suddenly the bridge dropped from under me. I fell and broke one of my cameras. I got up and started, only to have the bridge fall out from under me again.

The part of the bridge I was on had dropped fully 30 feet, due to the sudden shift of weight in the main cable....

It was one of those things that couldn't happen once in 1,000 years, a combination of conditions that no one anticipated.

(Farquharson suffered only minor bruises and abrasions.)

The coastal thrust toward Ioannina was the greatest threat to the Greeks.

Holding Heights.

The high command made no mention of further advances there and military observers believed the Greeks would be content to hold the commanding positions they have already won.

Italian attacks on the Greek left flank in the Epirus sector, reported yesterday as apparently the beginning of a major offensive, thus far have resulted in purely "local" fighting, a government spokesman said.

The high command used the same phrase in referring to fighting there.

Reports from Cairo said the British Middle East Command was giving valuable air and naval aid to Greece, but that it was moving cautiously because of the necessity of keeping its forces ready to meet a threatened Italian drive at the Suez.

Greek reserve officers and non-commissioned officers living in Egypt received orders to report to their consulates, and it was understood they were to form the nucleus of a Greek division to be recruited from the large Greek colony there.

Italian aircraft continued their attacks yesterday on objectives behind the Greek front lines, bombing Corfu and a number of towns in the interior. The Greek high command said there were some casualties, but no damage of military importance.

The nightly raids began on schedule but the all clear was sounded several hours earlier than usual, in contrast to the previous night when the Capital was kept under the longest alert of the war.

Casualties Not Heavy.

"Damage was caused (last night in London and surrounding regions) to houses, shops, and public utility services at various points and a number of people were killed and injured but the casualties were not heavy, having regard to the scale of the attack," an early morning communique said.

Other places reported hit despite fierce anti-aircraft fire were an ambulance depot, a shelter, a previously bombed hospital, a number of private dwellings and a block of apartments. Twenty bombs hit one garage on the outskirts.

In other areas of England there was little damage and few casualties, the Government said, but a number of houses was damaged in the south-west England town and "a small number of persons" killed.

One daylight raider, swooping down on a London suburb, machine-gunned workers on their way to work.

Shortly after the second alarm of the day shrilled in early afternoon, fighting planes again wove a pattern of vapor trails in the sky.

Distant gunfire could be heard. Channel observers reported that strong forces of British and German planes manoeured over the channel about noon, with the Germans apparently trying to draw the defence forces to one zone to let the raiders through another. They said the Germans were finally turned back to the French coast.

Bombs were reported to have fallen in the industrial Midlands early this afternoon and raiders were said to be in the vicinity of Liverpool at about the same time.

Reports of last night's raids said the Germans appeared to have used Junkers 88S carrying the heaviest type bombs. One authoritative source said Defiants, new British night fighters, were believed to have joined the defender formations.

Ramsgate is proud of its shelters but it is also a matter of deep civic pride that "like London, we can take it, too." The big city catches the headlines now, but this town has stoically endured the trials of a front-line coastal centre with little public recognition for its heroism.

Many of the older citizens remain in their homes despite the aerial pounding. A 75-year-old resident who went through more than 100 air raids on the town in the First Great War, refuses to leave.

Former Premier Gravely Ill

LONDON, Nov. 8—(CP).—Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, former Prime Minister, is "gravely ill," Mrs. Chamberlain informed the press today.

Mr. Chamberlain's strength has been failing the last few days and he is now gravely ill," the message said.

The former Prime Minister, who laid down his duties as Prime Minister in May and retired from public life last month, is 71.

Mr. Chamberlain is understood to be in the country, where he has been resting since his resignation October 3 as Lord President of the Council. He resigned as Prime Minister last May 10, giving way to Winston Churchill the day Germany began her drive into the Low Countries and France.

Mr. Chamberlain underwent an abdominal operation July 28 for relief of symptoms of intestinal obstruction, but his recovery was described as satisfactory and after a short while he was back at his government post. He has suffered attacks of gout in past years.

British Freighter Reported Sinking

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP). — The British freighter Empire Dorado radioed to-day that she was "sinking slowly" about 300 miles west of Ireland, and that there were "casualties aboard."

MacKay radio picked up this message:

"Sinking slowly. No means of getting away. All lifeboats smashed. Two rafts still alongside. Help urgently requested. Casualties aboard. Latitude 55.7 north, 16.50 west."

Shipping men identified the Empire Dorado as the former United States freighter Tolosa, purchased from the United States Maritime Commission last May by Runciman Limited of London for $267,187.

She was due to arrive in New York Nov. 18 from United Kingdom ports.

Cromwell Rift Been Admitted

SPRING LAKE, N.J., Nov. 8 — (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada, said to-day that he and Mrs. Cromwell, the former Doris Duke, were estranged, but added he had no knowledge of any plans of her instituting divorce proceedings.

Cromwell, defeated on Tuesday as Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, said he had not seen Mrs. Cromwell since June 4—his birthday—at a party in New York.

Cromwell is staying at the Spring Lake home of his mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury. He said he had been making his home there the past few months, after moving from Mrs. Cromwell's estate at Somerville.

The former Minister said he planned to spend the next week in New Jersey, after which he would go to Florida for a short vacation.

Help To Britain Seen In Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 — (AP). —Facing the big questions of higher taxes, an increase in the national debt limit and the whole subject of defence and assistance to Great Britain, President Roosevelt returned to Washington on Thursday, received a roaring welcome, and engaged in a long series of conferences.

He talked with the Defence Commission, with Arthur B. Purvis, Montreal head of the British Purchasing Commission, received a letter of resignation from Interior Secretary Harold Ickes—tendered to give the President a free hand if he wishes to reshape his Cabinet—and found himself at once facing a fight on the question of debt limitation.

The President's conference with Purvis stimulated speculation that aid to Britain may be increased soon. Purvis told reporters he was flying to Britain and undoubtedly would return soon with more orders for war materials. Morgenthau also attended the conference, and all three lunched in the President's office.

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, saying that "we've just begun to rearm," announced that the Treasury would request that the statutory restriction upon the size of the debt be raised from $49,000,000,000 to $60,000,000,000 or $65,000,000,000. Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, a leader of the economy bloc, said immediately that a raise of more than $5,000,000,000 at this time would be fought. The Government, he said, should cut "non-essential, non-defence spending to the absolute minimum" and raise taxes. If the occasion arises later, he said, a further increase in the debt limit can be authorized.

Indian Is Freed On Murdr Count

He was acquitted here last night by a Supreme Court jury of murdering James Kilpatrick, 57-year-old carpenter in his (Dodge's) shack near Exeter, Ont., last June 20 with an axe.

Evidence had been given that police, called to the Dodge shack, had found Kilpatrick's body lying partly scalped in a pool of blood while Dodge was found kneeling beside a bed in an adjoining room with his head resting in his hands.

There also had been evidence that Kilpatrick, accompanied by Dodge, had bought cheap wine the day of his death.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McLennan & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. —(Adver.)

Unpopular Test May End On Labor Query

LONDON, Nov. 8—(CP). — The unpopular household means test used in determining unemployment allowance rates will shortly be abandoned by the government, political circles predict.

Meanwhile new draft unemployment assistance regulations have been drawn up providing larger sums to meet the increased cost of living. An extra two shillings weekly will be given a husband and wife in receipts of unemployment assistance. Persons over 16 will get an extra shilling weekly and children under that age an additional threepence. The measure must be passed through parliament before it goes into effect.

The household test of means for long-term unemployed has been applied since the unemployment insurance scheme was remodelled in 1934. It was bitterly criticized by the Labor party.

The cabinet, under the urging of Labor members of parliament, has had the scheme under review and is expected to decide to drop it. The fall in unemployment figures since the war began has cut the cost of the "dole" and made possible some relaxation of the regulations governing its application.

If this decision is reached, the means test will no longer apply to unemployment assistance, supplementary pensions and payments to blind persons. It will be replaced by a personal means test. The family means test covering payment of public assistance for the poor will likely be retained, however.

The Manchester Guardian editorially welcomed the prospect of "this considerable social reform." It declared "the lumping together of the family's income for the assessment of the assistance due to an unemployed member always in the nature of things involved an unpleasant inquisition leading to many cases of hardship."

Abitibi Probe Again Tuesday

TORONTO, Nov. 8 (CP).—Further plans of reorganization of the multi-million-dollar Abitibi Power and Paper Company will be considered by Mr. Justice C. P. McTague's three-man Royal Commission durin gthe week-end adjournment of commission sittings.

Four such plans were added to previous ones at yesterday's hearings of the financial affairs of the vast power and paper empire which controls numerous mills, power sites, a rail line and timber limits in Northern Ontario and Quebec. The company itself has been in the hands of a receiver since 1932.

New organization shemes were submitted by William D. Ross, Toronto bond dealer; E. B. Kernaghan of Toronto; R. A. Stewart of Toronto; and W. C. Lamont, Toronto investment dealer.

During the hearing Kernaghan referred to an intimation made previously by Mr. Justice McTague that special legislation might be passed to validate any plan agreeable to all parties.

"I didn't make any statement that a special act would be passed," the chairman said. "Some persons have inferred that the provincial legislature would pass such an act. I didn't say so. I merely said that such meticulous requirements as were difficult to meet in existing procedures could be avoided by a special act."

The hearing will be resumed on Tuesday.

Dutch Indies Must Play Ball With Japs

By RELMAN MORIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

TOKYO, Nov. 8—(AP).—Complete co-operation between Japan and the Netherlands East Indies is not only desirable but inevitable since authorities in Holland's rich colony "realize that to maintain their island government they must shake hands with us," Ichizo Kobayashi, Japanese Commerce Minister and head of a special commercial mission to Batavia, said today.

"War has closed Europe as a market to East Indies products," he declared in an interview. "Therefore, steel, bauxite, nickel and agricultural products must be sold to Japan....The Dutch realize the importance of close relations with Japan."

Kobayashi, who returned here recently to report on the commercial mission's negotiations in Batavia, disclaimed any Japanese intention of interfering with Indies tin and rubber exports to the United States.

"We can get all necessary for us elsewhere," he added.

"Japan," he also said, "has no more territorial or political ambitions in the direction of the Indies than in the direction of China."

Can Invest Capital

But Japan is the only nation in the world in a position to invest capital and develop resources in the Indies, he contended, and if Japanese capital flows there, Japanese immigration "could be expected to follow."

Kobayashi is expected to return to Batavia soon to continue negotiations which the Japanese hope will divert more Indies oil to Japan for her war machine.

He has been conferring daily with government officials and although he refused to describe his recent oil negotiations, he admitted that "a certain quantity" of oil which the Indies offered would not fill Japan's needs and that therefore talks would continue.

Make World Sit Up

Questioned concerning Japanese newspaper reports that British and United States oil companies exerted undercover pressure against a Japanese-Indies oil agreement, he replied:—

"Having interests there they must have had some conversations with the Dutch, but I can't say anything about obstructionism."

The newspaper Asahi, meanwhile, predicted today in post-election comment that "the United States, both in politics and armament, will try something in the next few months which will make the world sit up and take notice."

President Roosevelt's re-election, it added, signalized the start of an American campaign of "national aggrandizement."

Wheezing in the Chest Points to Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied by a rapid wheezing and tightness across the chest.

There is a raising of phlegm, especially in the morning. This phlegm is at first of a light colour, but as the trouble progresses becomes yellowish or greenish.

You may find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, relieve the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucous, and aid nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

The Plea Of a Great Man

Ignace Jan Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, and for a time president of his country, is in United States. Eighty years of age, he told his friends he was feeling "fine." Possibly that was one of the first questions asked as it seems to be a universal custom.

He was plain spoken when he said he had come to United States to escape from what he termed "the unbearable moral atmosphere" of Europe. He knew there would be questions asked when he landed and Paderewski had carefully written out a prepared statement, which was afterward typed and handed to the reporters. Then, as an afterthought he added: "Help Great Britain save the world."

Paderewski is indeed a great artist; the world has not known a greater pianist. He loved his art, but the deadening effect of that which has taken place in Europe can be measured and fairly appraised by the remark of Paderewski's secretary: "He hasn't touched a piano since Poland was invaded."

And this great artist, upon whom indignity was heaped by being arrested while passing through Spain, seeking in his eightieth year to move away from "the unbearable moral atmosphere of Europe," had one added message to the people of United States where he is welcome. Just this: "Help Great Britain save the world."

Why Not Act On Evidence?

There was a murder trial at Goderich and it ran for several days. An Indian was accused of killing a man with whom he had been on good terms, but it was one of those cases where a crock of wine had been consumed. Examination of the contents of the stomach revealed an alcoholic content which would be sufficient to make the deceased person hopelessly drunk, and Dr. T. R. McLeod, for nine years a doctor on the Muncey Reserve, testified that wine or liquor affected an Indian to a much greater extent than a white person. It was known that a gallon container and two quarts of this cheap wine had been purchased. Dr. E. R. Frankish, whose services are in demand at many of these places, says this cheap wine is just plain rot and poison. "It was a terrible drink to give an Indian," was his comment, adding "You cannot tell when a man will recover."

Well, why then should it be allowed to be placed in stores where it can be readily purchased? What is the use of having competent men state their conviction that it is rotten stuff of high alcoholic content, and then doing nothing about it?

Why should the provincial authorities not banish it; clean it out or lock up the places where it is sold; put an end to the making of it?

The evidence is there plain as a pikestaff, so why not act on it?

With Respect We Say This

The Examiner realizes this is a delicate question to handle, but we are convinced readers will agree that there is in it something which requires saying.

Roland Denne, ex-Mayor and good citizen, died the other day and in due course citizens gathered to pay their last respects on the day of his funeral. They came in large numbers, and they came from many walks of life. They left aside for the time being the tasks which had been occupying their attention, and they did that because they wanted to. By their presence they desired to pay some inadequate measure of tribute to the splendid citizen who has gone from our midst.

And that is exactly as it should have been and exactly as we knew it would be. But it is right here that the question comes, and we submit it with respect and candor.

Roland Denne had been a good citizen; in his way he was outstanding; the amount of actual service which he gave to our city would be difficult to compute. He was in the midst of things for years, and yet we are moved to wonder how many times he was told his work was appreciated, or that you or you or you approved of what he was doing.

We realize it is an unusual question to state, but we have been for so long a time wedded to the custom of reserving our tokens of appreciation until the hour when the ears which should hear them can listen no more that it seems right enough to ask that plain question.

What a pleasant community we could create in a new way if we were more outspoken in regard to saying the kind and helpful word at the right time. The standing of Roland Denne in the community and the extent to which his record is enshrined in our official and personal memory is thoroughly established. Often though, when final tribute is paid to such a man that same question has pressed for attention and for utterance. It has been regarded as something which it might be better not to mention. The case of Roland Denne is used because it is fresh in the memory of our people. Did we tell him and others whose work has been faithfully and competently done—and tell them in the midst of busy days and in the heat of battle—that we had a feeling of appreciation? If not, then there is before us a great field to be cultivated, where we can do the spade work of kindness and plant the seeds of vocal appreciation.

What Will Lewis Do?

John L. Lewis, president of the C.I.O., will have to resign his office when that labor organization meets in November. Either that or there will be a good deal of explaining to do.

In the election of 1936 Lewis was all for Roosevelt. It is on record that the mine workers' organization of that time, with which he was connected, gave something like half a million dollars for the Roosevelt campaign fund.

In the 1940 campaign Mr. Lewis had picked up his tent and staked space on the Willkie lot, and he had a great deal to say. So much that he finally reached the point where he declared that the re-election of Roosevelt would be regarded as repudiation of the position of John L. Lewis, and would bring about his resignation as president of the C.I.O. Mr. Lewis made that condition himself, so his resignation is in order.

It does look very much like a case where John L. Lewis had mistaken the extent of his own dimensions and his own importance. He has been head of a very large and powerful labor organization. But that did not give to him the license to believe that people would be swayed by the threat or promise that John L. Lewis was going to resign if the vote did not go according to his desires.

The people of United States were not voting for or against John L. Lewis. They had all sorts of votes to cast and they were primarily interested in electing a president. Lewis was somewhat puffed up when he made this threat and according to his own stipulation it is up to him to resign his office. Nor can be complain because he stuck his chin out and asked for it.

Selling At a Loss

The Kingston Whig Standard has been considering the cost of a pound of cheese, and W. A. Kirkpatrick, president of the Frontenac branch of the Cheese Producers' Association, has been assisting in the process. He comes in with figures which have been secured after records had been kept by 1,250 farmers who produced milk for cheese factories, and their average showing was $1.40 for producing 100 pounds of milk. Mr. Kirkpatrick says that in his factory this year 100 pounds of milk has produced 8½ pounds of cheese, which makes the cost of the milk content 16.47 cents per pound. The cost of manufacturing is 1.75 cents per pound, or a cost price at the factory of 18.12 cents for a pound of cheese. In order to make a small profit the contention is that the price should be 20 cents per pound. That is, the factories should receive that amount.

Looking at another page in the Kingston paper it was found that Toronto reported: "Dealers were offering large Government grade cheese at 14¾. Wholesalers offered to retailers new cheese at 15¾ cents."

So right there the Kingston editor came to the conclusion that he had spiked a problem. And he had. His argument is that if there is a loss on five cents per pound on each sale then the cheese-making business in Frontenac is not an asset but a liability, and eventually it would have to go out of business.

This is not a new question because it has been before the rural people for a long time. It must have been 25 years ago since the movement was started by some of the experts at the O. A. C. in Guelph to have farmers keep books and records to find out their cost of production prices. Prof. Archie Leitch put a great deal of intelligent effort on the plan, and the scheme was rather widely adopted. Farmers kept records on what it was costing them to produce milk, grain, etc., but the weak spot was found to be exactly the one which is being considered in Frontenac today. Just this: "Here is our cost price, and with a little profit added here is what our selling price should be." From that point they stepped right smack into that old agricultural question: "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

To explain that we submit the experience of one farmer who had followed the cost-finding plan carefully. His own explanation was this:

"I know what it costs me to produce a bushel of wheat because I have the figures all down including labor, rent of land based on taxes and investment, fertilizer, depreciation of machinery, twine, threshing costs, etc. They have all been tabulated and not one of them is marked in beyond the cost price. So I take a load of wheat into the village eight miles away where there is an elevator. The buyer comes out and looks through the bags and he tells me what the day's price is. But it was 11 cents less than my known cost price without adding anything for profit, and a farmer is a man in business and he is entitled to a profit. I can bring out my record sheets and show them to the grain buyer; he may be interested in my figures, but all he knows is what information or orders he has received to tell him what to pay for wheat on that particular day, and if I do not wish to sell at that price then there is nothing left but to take my wheat home. So of what use is it to me to keep records unless I find that there is no money in selling wheat as a cash crop?"

Mr. Kirkpatrick of the Frontenac Cheese Producers' Association, is facing that same old problem, only it is made up of milk and labor and cheese instead of wheat. Our primary producers have been trying for a long time to get to the point where they can name the price at which they will sell that which they have produced. We'd like to see them master the situation, but they have some steep hills yet to climb.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Joe Louis was out in the campaign spouting for Wendell Willkie, and for once Joe had to take the count.

One report says that 35,000 Italian soldiers in the Greek campaign are helpless. We thought the number would be greater.

Let's see, wasn't there a man named Lindbergh who had a lot to say in the election campaign? He loomed greater before the event than he did after the ballots were counted.

One man of 78 was arrested in New York for having a revolver in his pocket. The weapon was no use. It would be more to the point to gather in the mugs who have guns all loaded and which will shoot.

Quebec musical festival has been suspended until the conclusion of the war. Last year it had 13,000 competitors. We can anticipate the day when they will all gather together for the grand victory chorus.

One place we read where troops from a training camp "marched with the smoothness of veterans." We are clever in this country, but not to the point where we can do the like of that in thirty days.

In one Pennsylvania city voting took place in a building formerly occupied by a bank which had failed. So many people lost their money there it was feared when they were given a ballot they might possibly start making all sorts of marks on it.

Toronto Star says it was the first to suggest a third term for President Roosevelt. That's nothin'. The Examiner a day or so before the election said if we had a vote across the line it would be cast for Roosevelt. And look what happened.

The claim has been made several times that we should save our used tin cans for the war effort. We have seen it stated on the authority of an expert that saving tin cans is not worth while as the cost of processing them would be too great and we have no facilities for doing the work.

CAMPAIGN

¶ My Cousin Jake, hard to believe, feels that he ought to run for reeve, his platform is prepared; he's worked for weeks upon the thing, knows all the items he will spring, and crooked things be aired.

¶ The village should progress, says Jake, this standing still's a great mistake, of pavements he wants more; he wants improvement on the street, so things will look right smart and neat, it goes right past his store.

¶ He wants new industries to come, he longs to hear the wheels go hum, the sound of added feet; for if more folk locate in there, why Jake will surely get his share, and sell them things to eat.

¶ More people in the village hall, the staff down there is far too small, it makes Jake almost sob; the clerk has far too much to do, long hours it takes before he's through, Jake's daughter needs a job.

¶ The village jail is far too old, 'twill not contain bad men nor bold, for such 'twas never meant; he'd build a strong one right away, and it is true enough to say, his brother sells cement.

¶ If Cousin Jake starts out for reeve, he'll make a good speech I believe, he'll promise them new wealth; he'll rouse their pride and light their fires, and make it plain that he desires—just nothing for himself.

Philippines Not An Asset To United States

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Asked whether or not the U.S. can defend the Philippines, Navy Secretary Knox's answer was, "We can defend anything."

Secretary Knox

Of course, the secretary's questioner meant, "Can the U.S. defend the islands against Japan?" From chats I've had with a great many naval officers in the U.S. service, I conclude that generally they agree with Frank Knox—we can do it. They concur, however, that it must be a terrible chore and an enormously expensive one.

Naturally it will be a job for American sea fighters to attend to. To get to the archipelago's vicinity they'll have to cross two or three thousand miles of ocean, even from Hawaii. To be sure, Secretary Knox promises more bases for warships on the other side of the Pacific—Singapore, for instance. But these prospective bases are as far away as the Philippines are. There's all that salt water to negotiate, no matter how many bases the U.S. have. Japan, on the opposite hand, has a formidable base at the southern end of Formosa, a scant overnight's steaming from a northern Filipino landing.

Obviously the clash, if one occurs, will be mapped especially for the Jap's convenience and about as inconveniently as possible from Uncle Sam's standpoint.

WHAT CAN U.S. GAIN?

AND if, again, the rumpus does eventuate, and if America wins, as forecast by Secretary Knox, with U.S. navy men's endorsement, what'll they gain by it?

It's been emphasized again and again that the Philippines never have been an asset to the United States, only an expense and a liability. Moreover, they're to have their independence shortly. Nevertheless, comments Secretary Knox, so long as they're under the U.S. flag the U.S. will defend 'em. I don't think anybody'll dispute the propriety of that utterance. Even though the United States may not want 'em, it would be an intolerable affront to have 'em taken away from them forcibly.

And even after they become independent? Even then the U.S. probably shan't like to see Japan grabbing 'em immediately. American sense of responsibility may wear off in the course of time, but only, in all likelihood, after a considerable interval.

The fact is, as U.S. state and navy departmental functionaries currently remark quite frequently, we certainly stuck our neck out in a most injudicious fashion when we took those islands over from Spain following Admiral Dewey's Manila Bay victory — a victory that wished a highly undesirable overseas possession on to American hands, as repeatedly has been demonstrated since then.

Over and over I've heard competent commentators in Washington blame Rudyard Kipling for that error, as they described it.

Rudyard, at the juncture referred to, was at the flood tide of his stories relative to the activities of the English in India. They caught the American fancy. The U.S. wanted to be a far-flung empire also, with dependencies to send "younger sons" to. The Philippines offered precisely such an opportunity. The U.S. grabbed at the chance, accordingly. Now they're having troubles to unload it.

DEFEND THEMSELVES?

THE suggestion's made that maybe the Filipinos can defend themselves against the Japs.

General Douglas MacArthur, former American chief of staff, is trying today to train a Philippine army. His account is that the Japanese can't afford an invasion of the islands, either financially or numerically. But Filipino President Manuel Quezon, who ought to be a pretty fair judge, doesn't agree with him. Quezon's verdict is that a successful defence of the archipelago, at best, is doubtful.

The U.S. is rushing thither such warplanes as they can spare, anyway. If they can scarce up any additional surface war craft they're due to send them likewise.

Rudyard Kipling was primarily responsible for the situation.

And Teddy Roosevelt was a strong booster for the island's acquisition.

The Filipinos aren't to blame. They wanted to be independent from the first — had been fighting for it against the Spaniards when the Spanish-American war started. Uncle Sam had to lick 'em subsequently, under Aguinaldo. If Aguinaldo's won (which, of course, was impossible), Uncle Samuel would not have had the islands to worry about at present.

• Likes Warning Before Being Hit

Letter in Montreal Star

SIR:—I read with interest a letter in your paper of Friday, Nov. 1, signed "A Careful Driver." I have often thought how wonderful it was, as I saw children of various ages on bicycles in the daytime dashing around in the heaviest traffic, that more were not injured. So I can agree with him that something should be done about these same young people being so careless at night.

But there is also one thing in which I think the motorists are at fault, and perhaps two things. I myself am a pedestrian. Often I have had to wait at a street corner for the green light to come on so I might cross in safety. There would be autos lined up near me apparently waiting to go the same way that I was. When the green light came on I would start confidently to cross the street, believing that I was safe in doing so. I would be looking ahead watching to see that the light did not change, when suddenly a car supposedly headed the same way that I was would be upon me and, if I did not jump one way or the other, I would have been knocked down. All people are not able to jump out of the way, and I think the autoist should either make use of his horn in his car to let you know that he is about to turn on you thus or take his horn out of his car. For what is it there for if not to use? For, as I walk along a street and see such things happen, I believe I am stating the truth in saying that not one motorist out of one hundred gives such warning. The pedestrian, it is true, has eyes in the front of his head, but he hasn't in all four sides.

The other thing I wish to draw to the motorists' attention now follows. One evening I was standing on a street corner talking to a friend when an auto passed which was, it is safe to say, being driven at the rate of anywhere from twenty-five to fifty miles an hour. The party I was talking to drew my attention to it and remarked, "Doesn't that beat all? For they are not supposed to drive over eight miles an hour, and there he hurried by this corner so fast without stopping to see if it was safe." I do not claim to know about the speed laws of this city, but I think that an autoist should at least be kind enough to let a pedestrian know that he or she wishes to knock them down.

A MERE PEDESTRIAN.

COURAGE LEVELS CASTE

IT HAS been said that Nazi bombing of London has brought to Britain a practical social democracy the country has never known before. Lords and ladies, it is declared, are sleeping in servants' quarters; they are playing bridge in cellars with butlers and maids; and they are sitting almost in each other's laps in trains. People from the East End have moved into mansions further west, and on all hands social barriers, especially those of wealth, have been broken down.

This is true. But it is somewhat of an exaggeration to suppose these things are a new phenomenon in British history.

The diarist Pepys, for example, frequently sat down for an evening's music with his wife and servants, nor was there considered anything socially odd in this.

It is a mistake to imagine that the past of Britain is wholly aristocratic. The roots of democracy go deep; its growth is correspondingly lofty.—Christian Science Monitor.

"A young man asked Mr. Ernest Brown, Minister of Labor, what the Bible had to say about Hitler. Mr. Brown said yesterday that his reply was to refer the man to James Moffatt's translation in Daniel xi., verse 21. It reads:

"'A despicable creature shall arise, one on whom the royal honor is not conferred, but who comes when men are off their guard and gains the kingdom by means of crafty promises.

"'He shall work deceitfully. He rises to power by aid only of a small party. When men are off their guard he attacks the leaders in each province.

"'He shall scatter prey, plunder, and property among his followers.

"'He shall not heed the gods of his fathers....or any other god, for he shall exult himself above all gods.

"'But he shall honor the god of forces.

"'His favorites he shall advance to high power and make them rulers over the masses.

"'His heart was against the Holy Covenant.

"'Yet he shall come to his end and none shall help him.

To The Editor

GETTING THE NEWS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Your editorial in yesterday's paper "When Newspapers Quarrel" reminds me of an occurrence upwards of thirty years ago. It happened in Toronto that a man and his entire family including his mother or mother-in-law were out on the lake in a sail boat when it capsized and all were drowned, about six or seven persons altogether.

Of course that made news, but how to get the news was the alert reporters worry.

Like many more had done, the alert reporter asked the telephone operator to help him.

Well, in each telephone office, in a prominent place, was a notice to the effect that any employee divulging information regarding subscriber's affairs would be dealt with accordingly.

And yet he wanted the story; the public demands the news in all its gruesome details; the operator knew, but could not tell. So in a burst of confidence she said "I'll give you the undertaker that has charge of the funerals." With a voice full of emotion the reporter asked if it were true that his brother-in-law and family had been suddenly taken away? And so with the sympathetic understanding of all successful undertakers he proceeded to explain the details of the tragedy to the reporter.

The next morning, at least one Toronto paper was printing the news of the multiple drowning. Now who could say that that reporter cheated?

Yours sincerely,
LUCILLE ALLEN.

P.S.—This actually happened, as I was the operator who gave the reporter the undertaker, and I heard the reporter ask if it were true about his brother-in-law, etc.—L.A.

"Well, look you here," said the old dame. "I've refused to leave this house for t'landlord; I've refused to leave for t'bailiffs; and I'll be hanged if I'll leave it for Hitler."—Manchester Guardian.

Denne Funeral Reflects Broad Esteem

Peterborough paid a final tribute of remembrance and affection to Roland Denne, its mayor in the eight-year period from 1928 to 1935 inclusive, at his funeral service in St. John's Church Thursday afternoon and at the last rites of burial in the Little Lake Cemetery.

The service was conducted by Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson, assisted by a surpliced choir in the presence of a congregation of men and women from all walks of the city and county that filled every seat in the old Anglican edifice with many having to stand at the rear and along the side walls. It was a memorably, solemn farewell in its pervasive atmosphere of esteem for the comparatively young man suddenly taken from life and the innumerable friendships he had so well earned, and also in its final and impressive completeness in the word and spirit so simply and sensitively expressed by Canon Robertson.

Rarely has St. John's Church witnessed such an assembly of persons with all their little differences that affect their daily affairs forgotten in their deep and common regard for the personality that was Rollie Denne. Individually he had known them and left upon them the impress of his broad interests and enthusiasms, and individually their memories were thinking of him as he had seemed so vital as he had been until even the first day of this week, but as a congregation they were all drawn together and united in a community of sadness That was the palpable essence of this splendid personal tribute to Mr. Denne. His personality was reflected as it was known to have been, a rallying attraction for all kinds and sorts of men, each of whom had found during the years of acquaintance and friendship some kinship, some likeable facet of that many-sided nature of his under the influence of which they felt drawn to him. Before his coffin and its beauty of floral background they were all united in this brief and ultimate sentiment and act of mourning. Their religious and political differences and whatever social division there might have been in that company, all of them were temporarily dissolved during the solemnity of the service by the afterglow of the humanness which had so strongly characterized Mr. Denne, by the recollection of personal relationships apart altogether from the remembrance of his diverse interests in so many of the phases of Peterborough's public affairs.

Civic Bodies

The executive heads of nearly all the city's industries were present at the church service, together with many of their assistants. The municipal bodies of Peterborough, city and county, and of some of the townships, were also represented. Directors of the Peterborough Exhibition and their associates, with whom Mr. Denne had been long connected, fifteen years as president, attended as a body. Members of the Little Lake Cemetery Board were also present in a group.

At the time of his death Mr. Denne was a member of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, which was represented by Gordon S. Matthews, chairman, and E. R. Shirley, commissioner; R. L. Dobbin, manager, and John R. Corkery, solicitor. T. F. Matthews, of Toronto, who had served the city for years on this commission, was present with his son, G. S. Matthews.

President Tom Brown of the Exhibition Board was accompanied by many of the directors of the present and past years. Mayor James Hamilton and most of the aldermen of the City Council, heads of the municipal departments, members of the County Council, lawyers, doctors, retail merchants, and so many others who could be classed together just as citizens, these were all of the cross-section of the community noticed in that exceedingly large congregation.

Among the former mayors noticed were T. H. G. Denne, brother of the deceased; Wm. H. Buller, Senator J. J. Duffus, Wm. H. Bradburn, A. A. McIntyre, John J. Turner and George A. Macdonald.

Alex. L. Elliott, M.P.P., postponed returning to a hunting camp on account of Mr. Denne's death, and George A. Macdonald, of Chicago, former general manager of the Quaker Oats Company here, came down from Ketcheeum Lake for the funeral. Colonel R. E. Birdsall and his son Lieut.-Colonel F. E. Birdsall of Asphodel were present, Colonel John A. Dewart, M.C., and a strikingly large number of others who knew Mr. Denne perhaps best in his familiar milieu of main street, to him the barometer of Peterborough's commercial well being.

The Pall Bearers

The active pall bearers were Mayor Hamilton, Harold A. Morrow, R. M. Glover, J. P. Strickland, K.C., William Kennedy of Toronto, Lieut. Col. F. L. Bradburn, Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., and and Gerald A. Wood.

Honorary bearers were: Chris. G. Graham, G. A. Macdonald of Peterborough, W. C Ackerman, G. H. Thompson, Herbert E. Stenson, Wm. A. Bennett of Toronto, W. R. Breyfogle, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Vincent Eastwood, J. K. Hughes, Alex Spence, Dr. Murray Moher, Toronto, A. L. Killaly, C. A. Salmonsen, Robert Ross, 675 George street, F. Douglas Hammond, Thomas Brown, Fred S. Potter, R. L. Dobbin and Robert Ross, Stewart street.

Rev. Canon Robertson in a personal reference to Mr. Denne and his life work in Peterborough said that the exceedingly large congregation of citizens was eloquent testimony of the place he had attained in the community. Some of those present had grown up from boyhood with Mr. Denne, others had come to know him in later years. In the light that beats upon a citizen in a city of this size, and from all the contacts of every day life, the verdict which his fellow citizens has passed upon Mr. Denne by their presence was in its expression a high tribute. Canon Robertson said he would not moralize on the shortness of life, and concluded his remarks by recalling Mr. Denne as he had been privileged to know him in a relationship which, he said, brings out all the worst or best in a man,—in his family circle. And with fine reticence and more by implication he recalled the times he had met Mr. Denne at the bedside of his sisters, affirming that he knew what he had been to them, and how they regarded him. He added, also, that he had known the deceased in the privacy of his own home.

Out of Town Friends

Friends of the late Mr. Denne who came to Peterborough for the funeral included: Roland Cardy, manager of the Toronto branch of the Bank of Toronto, representing the head office of the bank, and Mrs. Cardy; David Johnston of Brantford, of the Johnston Construction Company; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. O'Connor, Fred O'Connor; William Kennedy, Toronto.

Mr. H. Smith of Toronto, a nephew, and Mrs. Smith; Dr. Harold J. Murphy and Mrs. Murphy, Toronto; Mr. E. J. Roy and Mrs. Wallace Roy of Napanee; Dr. Murray Moher and Mrs. Moher of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Nesbitt of Brighton; Mrs. C. R. Widdifield of Stratford, Miss Phyllis Denne of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Heck of Toronto; William J. O'Brien of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough; Mrs. F. J. Crawford, Toronto.

The Canadian Pacific Railway was represented by N. McMillan, Toronto, general superintendent; R. Taylor, Toronto, superintendent of the Peterborough division; W. Fulton, Toronto, retired assistant general passenger agent; and by Thomas McArthur, Peterborough. The Toronto men came to the city in Mr. McMillan's private car.

Limestone City Gives Highlanders Great Send-Off

Residents of Kingston gave the 1st Battalion, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders a rousing send-off this week as the unit entrained for their new winter quarters at Lansdowne Park in Ottawa. The Glengarrians are rated in the top bracket by staff officers as one of the smartest regiments recruited in Eastern Canada, and they made a grand picture as they swung along in perfect marching rythm. ABOVE is shown two groups of soldiers on the station platform. Charles Sharpe of this city is standing in the rear wearing the small Glengarry hat, and in the other group the soldiers are shown with ground sheets across their shoulders as raincoats, because of inclement weather. Local people are happy over the fact that the men will apparently be stationed at Ottawa until Christmas at least, which will permit the majority to visit their homes for the Yuletide season. It is 180 miles to Ottawa by road down No. 7 Highway.

Britain Denied Bases By de Valera

DUBLIN, Nov. 8.—(CP)—Prime Minister de Valera rejected Thursday the suggestion that ports of Eire be opened as refuelling bases for British warships and planes patrolling Atlantic commerce lanes.

Mr. de Valera told the Dail (Parliament) that there could be "no question" of handing over or leasing the ports to Britain "under any conditions whatsoever" as long as Eire remains neutral.

He said Eire intends to stay out of war, but declared: "We shall defend our right, whoever shall attack us."

The Irish leader said his statement was prompted by a British press campaign—"re-echoed in the United States"— following Prime Minister Churchill's statement on Tuesday that the ban against British flotillas in Irish ports was "a most heavy and grievous burden" on the British effort to combat U-boats.

Commenting on accusations against Eire, Mr. de Valera said: "It is a lie to say that German submarines or any other submarines are supplied with fuel or provisions in our ports." Such charges, he said, have been called false by the British Government.

A "most extensive system of coastal observation has been established," Mr. de Valera said. He implied that the Free State's ability to protect itself was impaired by difficulty in obtaining military supplies.

"We tried to get armaments in Britain, America and even on the Continent," he said, "and it is no fault of the Government if our armaments are not even several times stronger than they are."

James Dillon, Deputy Leader of the Opposition, questioned whether Mr. de Valera's words were "best calculated to promote calm thought among our people in the unforeseen future," and said that "as in the past, so in the future, no demands, no threats, no violence will be employed by our neighbors calculated or designed to prejudice our sovereignty."

The ports in question had remained in British control, with British garrisons, from the time of the setting up of the Irish Free State in 1921 until the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1938, under which the Chamberlain Government withdrew from them at the same time that the Anglo-Irish economic warfare was ended.

Mr. Churchill, then a backbencher, protested vigorously at the time that Britain should have these ports at her disposal in the event of a new war. Cobh (Queenstown) was a particularly valuable base in the campaign against submarines in the last war.

Ask U.S. Pressure

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(BUP). — A movement was under way in Parliament last night to persuade the United States to approach Eire's Prime Minister, Eamon de Valera, regarding the lease of Irish coastal bases for the British Navy and Royal Air Force.

Parliamentary circles said that such bases are necessary to halt the German submarine menace to Britain's overseas supplies of food, munitions, raw materials and airplanes, particularly from the United States.

Fines Of $500 To Penalize Labor Poaching

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—(CP). — By Order-in-Council the Government has introduced strong measures, including fines up to $500, to back up its policy of no enticement of labor in the field of war production, Labor Minister McLarty announced last night.

In his statement making the move known, the Minister said some employers had ignored the warning he issued some time ago against "labor poaching." Mr. McLarty said the Order-in-Council became "the first notable restriction on industry since the outbreak of war."

"An Order-in-Council, dated Nov. 6, provides for fines up to $500 on summary conviction for firms guilty of enticing workers away from other firms engaged in wartime production," the Minister's statement said.

"The Order-in-Council expressly provides that the measure is not intended to limit the individual rights of the workers."

Mr. McLarty said the action followed his warnings issued some time ago when he noted that such enticement "results in decreased output and generally unsatisfactory labor conditions."

The statement added:

"Under the new Order-in-Council persons, firms, corporations or their agents, when advertising, when writing, or otherwise appealing to the public are required to state that applications for employment will not be considered from those employed in the production of munitions, war equipment or supplies for the armed forces.

"Exception is made for employees not actually employed in their usual trade or occupation. The order also prohibits verbal solicitation of any person engaged in the manufacture of munitions, war equipment or supplies."

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat. After telling him her father is in the penitentiary for murder, Lona learns the stranger's name is Jim Claridge. He obtains a hotel room for her and promises to call her next day. In view of her past experiences, Lona wonders about Jim, decides she can trust him.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER FIVE

NEXT MORNING, as she dressed in the strange atmosphere of the hotel room in which she had spent the troubled night, Lona's curving red lips were hard and unsmiling. It was unthinkable, in the sane, revealing light of day, that she should be taking help from a strange man. Charity — from a stranger she had never seen before. Allowing him to pay for her roof. Just because he had found her broke, on a park bench. It couldn't go on!

When she was attired once more in the shabby blue suit that had been her daily garb for the eight months since she had left Ardmore's, she took the bill Jim Claridge had given her last night from her purse and looked at it. This was the last she would see of him, of course. She had been silly to think he meant what he said about meeting her today. He had been trying to be polite, had pitied her, and given her a handout as he would any tramp he might have found in the straits he found her.

Her head went up at the thought, and she crumpled the bill back into her purse almost angrily. She'd have to use it, of course. There was nothing else to do. But she'd find work. She'd find work today. And then she'd pay it back to him, every cent. She wouldn't have him thinking she was a gold digger, a racketeer, perhaps, who earned a living working on men's sympathy. She could not bear even a stranger to believe anything like that of her.

Anxiously she scanned the list of "Help Wanted" ads in the morning paper. It was pitifully short. A maid was needed in the hospital, colored preferred. . . . A girl for housework in the fashionable district. . . . An extra saleslady for a few days' selling. . . . Book sellers who would ask for a large deposit on a set of sample books nobody ever bought. She knew those kind! A garment factory wanted girls. There were only two calls for office workers. One was at a downtown address she remembered faintly in connection with her work at Ardmore's. The other was a strange name out in the factory district.

With he thoroughness learned of long practice she jotted down the list on a fresh sheet from the little notebook she carried in her purse. First the two office addresses, then the rest of the ads in the order of their appeal to her. The factory ad first then, the "saleslady wanted." Then came the housework; even the maid at the hospital was scribbled at the end. Anything was worth trying today. Anything!

She choked down a bit of breakfast in the hotel dining room, driven by a sense of urgency that had become habitual with her of late. Then, lugging her suitcase, she boarded an uptown car. The problem of a new boarding house must be met before evening. But she pushed it back into the corner of her mind as she deposited her luggage at the first department store checking counter she reached. Time for that later. She found herself walking with unreasonable haste as she strode on up the busy street toward thef irst address on her list.

It was an imposing building into which she turned a few minutes later, and her heart sank a little as a flash of recognition came to her. The Allison Trust! No wonder it had seemed familiar when she read the ad. Melvin Hardy, who had succeeded old Stephen Ardmore at the Ardmore offices, was part of this firm. The stenographer who had taken her own job had been brought from here by Hardy, she remembered.

With her finger on the elevator bell, she hesitated, a shrinking feeling at the pit of her stomach. Was there any use applying here? Melvin Hardy would never allow her to work for him. When he had taken charge at Ardmore's, he had dismissed her the second week he was there.

He'd made a great speech about retrenching, and the depression making it regrettable that so many faithful employes must be dropped, but he hadn't fooled her. She'd known what was back of it. The letter her father's lawyer had written old Stephen was still in the files. She had seen Hardy discover it when he went through them the first day.

After that the same speculative gleam had come to his beady eyes that had been in Tim Evans' after he had—found out about her. Then he'd gone the same route as the others. Not that he had openly made any advances to her. None of them did. But there had been that look she had come to dread growing ever stronger in his eyes. And he had taken to standing too close when he talked to her, and letting his hands touch hers—little things only he and she noticed. But when he had finally turned nasty and let her go, she knew. There were half a dozen girls who had come to Ardmore's after she had. And none of them better workers than she.

As the elevator door opened now, and she stepped into it, she set her chin defiantly, and squared her shoulders. After all, there was no reason why she should not apply for this job the same as any other girl. She had done nothing wrong. She marched resolutely across the corridor at the eighth floor and opened the door of the office marked "Allison Trust" before she could lose her courage.

Early as it was, the room was already lined with girls. Some were seated, the first comers probably. Others stood about watching each

Fire Sweeps Factory In London

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 8—(CP). — Damage estimated at upwards of $15,000 was caused Thursday when fire swept a section of the Yocum-Faust chemical factory in North London.

The blaze broke out about five a.m. in the chemical storage section of the plant, and was still smouldering several hours later.

Fire Chief Robert McRonald said that the cause of the outbreak is undetermined.

Firemen checked the flames before they reached the newer part of the factory containing offices and expensive machinery. The fire was discovered by a watchman.

WHY HIS HEADACHES WERE RELIEVED

Wife Put Kruschen in His Coffee

He could not understand why the headaches he had been subject to were suddenly relieved. His wife told him, and he at once sat down and wrote the following letter:—

"I am 62 years of age, and ever since I was a boy of ten years, I was subject to very bad headaches. But two years ago the headaches eased up—for what reason I did not know. I was surprised when one day my wife told me I had been using Kruschen Salts in my coffee for over two years. I am still using them, as I know of nothing finer."—J. T.

Headaches can often be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons — prevent them forming again—and you remove the cause of many aches and pains. And that is just how Kruschen Salts brings pleasant relief. Kruschen helps Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter.

RECORD TEAM SCORE IS SET UP BY THE TAMBLYN BOWLING STARS

Nice 3852 Mark Is Piled Up In City League

Turning on a vicious power drive for a huge 3,852 team total at Duffus' Alleys last night, Tamblyn's bowlers served notice to one and all that they will be the team to beat for City League honors this year. Their opponents last night were Grafton's and the Chief's men gave them a great battle in losing a 3 to 1 decision after rolling a creditable 3,556. Raine's youngsters rolled the Kinsmen under 4 to 0, while the losing squads in all the other tilts managed to save at least one point. The showings of Centre Theatre, Huffman's, and Capitol Grill when each of them checked in with better than 3,400 scores, has left a decided feeling that bowling is going to be a tough racket in which to make a living this winter. Huffman's beat the Nationals last night after whitewashing Grafton's a week ago.

Soldiers Must Swim

EDMONTON, Nov. 8 — (CP). — Lloyd E. Wood, Independent Mayoralty candidate in Edmontons November 13 civic election, promised in a campaign speech last night, that if elected he will sponsor a campaign to teach all soldiers stationed here how to swim. He said this would give them a chance to save themselves if a ship they were on was torpedoed on their way overseas.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 8. — One hundred and thirty pupils from Havelock schools were in Campbellford on Thursday for their annual theatre party. The group was chaperoned by Principal R. W. Goheen and used both cars and trucks to make the trip to see the picture, "The Immortal Storm."

By FRED D. CRAIG

Doping out tomorrow's football games should be an easy task. However this has been a season when form has counted for little and so the sport forecasters approach the job these days with a certain amount of trepidation. The Saturday card is not full of all-star features but is not without its interest seeing that the Hamilton Tigers have still an outside chance of working themselves into a tie with the Argos for the right to meet Rough Riders in the finals. The Oskie-wow-wows have to do it the hard way. To earn a tie all they have to do is to beat the Rough Riders in Ottawa tomorrow and have the nameless Montrealers defeat the Argos in Toronto. Our prediction is that both ends of this program will prove a pain in the neck for Tigers and that the end of the day will find only Rough Riders and Argos left in the running and the playoffs scheduled to start next week.

* * * * * *

There is a lot of power on that Montreal squad and better booting than the Argos can hope to offer but still we call the Hayman gang to pull through with a win in Toronto tomorrow. In that prediction we are taking into account the fact that the conditions under foot may be heavy and thus will favor the Montrealers. However, the Oarsmen will have some of their injured stars back, notably Bill Stukus, and they should be able to come through with enough good football tomorrow to earn a verdict over the gang from the metropolis and thus earn a place in the playoffs. As for the game in Ottawa the Rough Riders have been below form for two consecutive Saturdays. The law of averages calls for them to snap back into the old time tempo again and if they do the Tigers have nothing to present that should give the Ottawa supporters anything more than a few mild worries. The O.R.F.U. games mean little or nothing but we'll call Balmy Beach to trim Hamilton Alerts and Sarnia Battery to prove too much for Camp Borden.

Former Peterborough sporting enthusiasts continue to keep in the picture. Thus Stratford reports that a junior B squad will be entered in the O.H.A. this season, made up of graduates from the city's midget teams and that the manager will be none other than C. R. Widdifield, former city solicitor here. While in Peterborough the Stratford junior manager took considerable interest in baseball and hockey and it will be recalled that when the 93rd Peterborough County Battalion decided to enter a team in the intermediate series of the O.H.A. in 1915-16, Widdifield, a captain in the unit was one of the moving spirits in the military hockey venture. More than that he donned the pads and the breast protector and went in and played goal for the soldier team. And did a pretty fair job of it too. He should make a good pilot for the Stratford kids.

This Makes It Easy

The war-time regulations of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association certainly go the whole way in smoothing things for players who are engaged in military service. In the first place the residence rule has been entirely suspended for all players in any kind of military service and it is provided that such players may play for more than one club in the same season if they are moved by the military authorities during the course of the playing season. Further, any army team which may be organized in the respective military districts may be entered as a unit in the Allan Cup playdowns through the branch playdowns. As for professional players, the new regulations declare that any pro who goes into military service, shall, with the permission of the National Hockey League be allowed to play with or against amateur players. These are certainly wide concessions.

* * * * * *

In another way the new rules are in line with wartime conditions. The hockey moguls have realized that players are likely to answer the call to arms at any time and they do not want to put any obstacle in the way. Accordingly it has been set forth that clubs which lose players during the season because of enlistment for military service may replace such players up to such times as the club enters the branch playdowns. The residence rule is tossed out of the window. Players for replacement purposes may be obtained either from players who are engaged in military training and are moved into the district or from players from any other club in Canada or elsewhere, provided that such club is willing to grant a release. That means that if an Oshawa player for example were to enlist in mid-season the Oshawa club could substitute a Peterborough player in his place if the Petes' executive were willing to grant the player wanted his release.

* * * * * *

One by one, hockey's old guard are passing. Harvey Pulford joined the great majority a short time ago and now it is Jimmy Gardiner whose death is being lamented by older hockey fans. If you remember Gardiner you have been following the game quite a while for he was a member of the celebrated Montreal Hockey Club which won the Stanley Cup in Winnipeg in 1902. That club was known as the "Little Men of Iron" because most of the players were short in stature and Gardiner, one of the cleverest stickhandlers of his day—and there were more then than the present game produces—rated as one of the great stars. Gardiner eventually drifted into professional hockey and wound up his playing career with the Montreal Wanderers, predecessors of the lamented Maroons, in 1912. He afterwards managed Montreal Canadiens for several years and later was a referee and coach. He did a lot for hockey and deserves a niche in the game's hall of fame.

Amerks Spoil The Opening

Worries in some quarters that war excitement might interfere with hockey patronage are evidently not justified. Chicago Black Hawks opened their home season last night and 15,211 persons, a record opening attendance, were on hand. The old mark for a first night crowd was 14,864. Red Dutton's New York Amerks rather took the shine off the opening however by defeating the Hawks 1 to 0. The veteran Johnny Sorrell netted the only counter of the game early in the last period and after that the Amerks just barred the door and invited the Chicago lads to come on. They stormed in for the rest of the battle but Earl Robertson took care of everything they hurled at him and the Dutton brigade skated off the ice winners.

News of the death in Toronto of Dr. Jack Maynard will be regretted by old time football fans who will remember Maynard as one of the great stars of the game thirty years ago. Many Peterborough folk will be among those who will mourn his passing for Dr. Maynard when he attended Trinity College School in Port Hope and afterward in his Varsity days visited here frequently. Associated with him both at T.C.S. and in the triumps of the great Varsity football team of 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913 was a former well known Peterborough boy, Pete Campbell, who was the quarterback who started Maynard away on his brilliant dashes down the field. Campbell in an interview has said that Maynard was one of the all-time greats of Canadian football and no one who ever saw the Varsity half play will quarrel with that tribute.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: It is announced that Toronto may not be in the International League next season. We did not think the Leafs were in its last season....Tony Lazzeri has been definitely released by Toronto. Perhaps Cleveland might be interested....Jonnny Gagnon has asked to be allowed to play as an amateur. Why not? The only real amateurs nowadays are the birds who have got too old for the pro clubs to be interested in them....Sports Service League has a huge bingo game in the Maple Leaf Gardens tonight. That will be about as corny as some of the Leafs' games....Toronto Leaf lines are being scrambled again. They should call them the put-and-take lines....Hockey players and fans should not forget Monday night's meeting. It will be an important session.

Jack Maynard Ex-Star On Gridiron Dies

TORONTO, Nov. 8. — Old-time sportsmen of Toronto and district were moving back reverently through memory's lane Thursday night after word came of the sudden death of Dr. John C. (Jack) Maynard.

Those among the older sportsmen of our community who knew the football and the Jack Maynard of 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913, last night found no difficulty comparing him with the Conachers, the Snyders, the Batstones, the Leadleys, the Stirlings, the Boxes, the Isbisters and the Wests of our modern era.

The late Dr. Jack Maynard was a Stratford, Ontario, boy. He attended the Trinity College School in 1905. In 1907-8 he set an athletic mark of much importance in those days by playing hockey, football and cricket. In 1908 he was with the T.C.S. team that won the Little Big Four football championship. Pete Campbell, well-known local sportsman, who was closely associated with him through T.C.S. and Toronto Varsity days, was captain of that team.

It was in 1910 that Jack Maynard started his brilliant college football career that was to stamp him one of the greatest halfbacks in the Dominion. He was a member of Hughie Gall's classy Varsity team of that fall that defeated Hamilton, 166-7, for the Canadian championship.

On Nov. 25, 1911, almost 29 years ago, Jack Maynard captained the University of Toronto football team that won another Dominion title, beating the powerful Toronto Argonauts at Varsity Stadium, 14-7. That game was played before 16,000 people. Elliott Green, Maynard and Pete Campbell were the stars of a brilliant Varsity team, according to newspaper accounts. Argonauts included such stalwarts as Smith, Binkley, Mallett, Lawson, O'Connor, Sinclair, Russell, J. Wright, Murray, Arnoldi, Wigle and Gall.

The late Jack Maynard was with the 1912 and 1913 Varsity football teams as well. Pete Campbell captained the team in 1912. Maynard was re-elected to the post in 1913. He played no hockey at Varsity because of studies. In his first year at school, however, he returned to Stratford to play junior O.H.A. games.

A son, Jock Maynard, was captain of the Toronto Varsity senior hockey team last winter. At present he is attached to the British navy.

The fall of 1911 was a memorable one in University of Toronto athletic history. The new Varsity Stadium was opened on Sept. 31. The Varsity team of that year defeated Varsity Old Boys, 11-66. H. C. Griffiths, headmaster at Ridley College, was the referee. Varsity was represented by McClaren, Maynard, Ramsay, Gardiner, Taylor, McDonald, Cory, Clark, Curtis, Grass, German, Sinclair and Thompson. Hughie Gall, Billy Foulds and Dr. Smirle Lawson were among the Old Boys.

Varsity lost only one game in the 1911 season as the Blues marched to a Dominion title. Ottawa College, headed by the brilliant Phillip Cornellier, defeated them 10-8 in Ottawa. The Duke of Connaught was one of the spectators. Maynard had injured his angle in an 18-11 victory over McGill the previous Saturday, but got into the Ottawa game long enough to score the only touchdown on a 20-yard run.

On Nov. 4, 1911, Varsity routed Queen's 23-5 in a game that saw Maynard go 90 yards for a touchdown. He injured his ankle again.

It was Nov. 11 that Varsity won its fourth straight intercollegiate title by defeating Ottawa College 29-13 here.

"Dr. Jack Maynard was undoubtedly one of the all-time greats of Canadian football," Pete Campbell, former Varsity teammate, declared last night. "He wasn't the powerful type of footballer like Smirle Lawson, Warren Snyder or Lionel Conacher, but he was gifted with remarkable all-round ability. And he was not only a great offensive player, but one of the best tacklers in the game."

Hornets Outscore Hershey Bears, 3-2

HERSHEY, Pa., Nov. 8 — (AP). —Unleasing a crushing power attack, Pittsburg Hornets defeated Hershey Bears 3-2 in an American League game last night.

Gordie Bruce gave the Bears a lead in the firt period. Mickey Blake deadlocked the score in the second period and Gordie Pettinger again put the Bears in front with a goal scored when the puck rebounded from Red McAtee's stick.

Mickey Drouillard and Lloyd Roubell rifled two shots into the net in 2 minutes and 36 seconds of the third period to put the Hornets in front.

Tweed In Finals Against Stirling

TWEED, Nov. 8—(ENS).—Tweed High School rugby team entered the finals with Stirling by virtue of a decisive win over Madoc by a 9-2 score at Madoc in the weekly interscholastic game. Tweed finished the season with 4 wins, 1 tie and 1 defeat, just edging out Stirling who had 4 wins, 2 losses, while Madoc in third place finished with 3 wins, 1 tie and 2 defeats.

The series will be in two games, with total points on the round deciding the winner.

Tweed played their weekly game without the services of Douglas Connor, husky linesman, who suffered a painful leg injury in a previous match and has been out of the game for two weeks.

East To Reach Schedule's End Saturday

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The East reaches the end of the football schedules tomorrow with only one playoff spot still open, and it's as surprising as anything that happened this season to find Toronto Argonauts having to battle right to the wire for a chance to go at Ottawa Rough Riders again.

These are difficult if not altogether evil days for the once-so-mighty men of Haymen. They can lose tomorrow against Montreal and still make it, but they must win to be absolutely safe from the clawing Hamilton Tiger. If Argos lose and Tigers win at Ottawa, there'll have to be an extra playoff in the Interprovincial Union.

Offhand, a call to Riders and Argos seems safe enough for they're on home grounds and have already licked tomorrow's opposition once this season. But the Tiger has had his claws sharpened since the first game, and is a formidable animal right now, while Montreal has improved steadily. They held the Riders to a 7-4 victory last week and it was no fluke.

Argos will be in better shape for this clash than for any since the opening of the year. Bill Stukus likely will be back in action and the ace Argos passer will aid their spotty offensive considerably.

The Argos will need every man they can muster, if Montreal's recent form continues. In Gord Norseworthy they have a punter to outdistance any of the Argo hoofers. Scotty Wright of Tigers showed just how valuable kicking distance is against this season's Argos club by practically beating them singlehanded last Saturday.

Because Haman has a way of instilling extra zip when the stakes are high, and because the Argos know better than anone that they can't afford to lose, they get the call by a narrow margin. Ottawa, too, is picked to beat Hamilton because they're at home and they've played two games below their standard. It's time they came up with a good one.

The Ontario Union card seems clear-cut. The unbeaten, untied Balmy Beach club from Toronto go after Eddie McLean's Hamilton Alerts, at Hamilton, while Camp Borden travels to Sarnia to meet the Battery. There's nothing but prestige at stake, Sarnia and Balmy having qualified for the playoffs.

Balmy's all-star backfield led by Bob Porter and Don Crowe should be able to smother Hamilton fairly easily. Sarnia came back after trouncings from Beaches to swamp the Alerts last Saturday, and the Soldiers shold prove even less formidable.

Tony Lazzeri Released By Maple Leafs

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Verifying what had been expected ever since the International Baseball League season closed two months ago, the Toronto Baseball Club yesterday afternoon announced that Tony Lazzeri will not be back as manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1941. In a statement issued by Secretary-Treasurer Arthur Leman, it was also intimated that the future of the Toronto club was uncertain. Following is the statement:

"I am authorized by the directors of the Toronto Baseball Club to make the following statement:

"In view of the uncertainty regarding Toronto continuing in the International League in 1941, Mr. Tony Lazzeri's contract has not been renewed. Mr. Lazzeri severed his connection with the Toronto Ball Club with absolute good-will and under an arrangement which was entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned.

"In view of the uncertainty above mentioned, the Toronto Baseball Club, Limited, has not, as yet, engaged a manager for next year, nor has it approached the Harbor Commission for a renewal of its lease."

Yours very truly,
A. H. Leman
Secretary-Treasurer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP).—President Frank Shaughnessy of the International Baseball League said yesterday he knew nothing of any uncertainty about Toronto remaining in the league.

"As far as our headquarters is concerned," he said, "we have heard nothing to make us think the Maple Leafs would not be in the league next year, and I am confident Toronto will find its way clear to continue."

BLACK HAWKS SHUT OUT IN FIRST GAME OF SEASON BY AMERKS

Dutton's Team Displaying Real Good Form

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The door-mat days of New York Americans apparently are over.

In the not so long ago, everybody trampled upon Mervyn (Red) Dutton's men. For many years the Americans were forced to carry on with a player personnel made up mostly of veterans. Whenever a star began to fade it seemed inevitable that he would wind up with Dutton, for the Americans were forced to take just about what they could get because of cash difficulties.

Slowly, however, Dutton has added new blood to his team, worked out a farm arrangement with Springfield Indians of the American League, and now apparently is almost ready to make his bid for honors in the National Hockey League. It's been a long, hard grind, and more spade work may be in order, but Dutton seems to be getting there.

Broke Even With Rangers

The first sign of possible power came when the Americans broke even with Lester Patrick's New York Rangers, the Stanley Cup champions, in a pre-season exhibition series. The teams each won three games in a six-game round.

The Americans did not fare so well in their first scheduled game of the season, losing 4-2 to Detroit Red Wings. But last night they displayed good form in scoring the first shutout of the season, winning 1-0 against Chicago Black Hawks and spoiling the Hawks' home debut before 15,211 fans.

The crowd established an opening game attendance mark for Chicago. The best previous attendance was 14,864 last season.

Won In 3rd Period

Last night's game, the only one on the card, was won in the third period when Johnny Sorrell, one of the half-dozen or so veterans that Dutton still has with the club, fired the puck by Goalie Paul Goodman after a play with Defenceman Wilf Field. The score came early in the last period and the Hawks weren't able to get it back as Goalie Earl Robertson of Americans continued his air-tight work.

The Hawks play their second game of the season on Sunday in Montreal against the Canadiens, who drew with Boston Bruins in their opening game before nearly 12,000 fans. Montrealers have been so enthusiastic about their club that another full house is anticipated. On Saturday the Wings go to Toronto to play the Maple Leafs in a game that is the second of the season for each team.

Old "No 'Count" Mare Captures Challenge Cup For U.S. Army

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 — (AP). — She's chiefly described as a "no 'count" mare, and the best information you can get is that she's of uncertain age and parentage, but big old Enterprise is giving the United States Army cavalry something to cheer about at the 55th Annual National Horseshow.

For the last six year, the army's individual riders have been playing second fiddle to the military of such countries as Mexico, Chile, Eire and France in the matter of jumping horses in international competition.

Then, along came Enterprise. Young Captain David Wagstaff, Jr., of Fort Myer, Va., rode her out on the tanbark at Madison Square Garden last night, and, with the crowd of 10,000 cheering him on, piloted the old mare over the 11 difficult jumps to win the Bowman Challenge Cup for the United States Army for the first time since Lieut. Carl Raguse did it with Dakota back in 1934.

A lot of the society folks inside ermines and behind fronts of jewels at the Garden knew all about young Captain Dave, a native of Tuxedo Park, N.Y., but no one knew much about old Enterprise. And, after all, she only did the jumping.

Since the program listed her only as an "aged" chestnut mare, the press box went into action trying to find out all about her. The only information available was that she was bred in England, was brought over here some years ago—no one knew just how many—and was mustered in to the army at Fort Myer by Capt. John Mead. When he was transferred to Kentucky, he couldn't take old Enterprise along, so he sold her to young Wagstaff.

Johnny Gagnon Asks For Amateur Card

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—(CP). — Johnny Gagnon, right winger with Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League for many seasons and last year with New York Americans, has applied for reinstatement as an amateur, it was announced last night.

Alphonse Therien, Registrar of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, said Gagnon's case will be brought up at a meeting of the Q.A.H.A. Friday night.

A native of Chicoutimi, Que., Gagnon recently was named coach of the Shawinigan Falls Cataracts in the Montreal and District League. It was understood he intended to play with the team during the winter campaign.

Minor Leagues Seek To Split Reserve Fund

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8 — (AP). — The principal fight that is likely to be waged in the convention of the minor leagues at Atlanta, Ga., next month will be over the reserve fund that the National Association has accumulated over the husbandry of Judge William G. Bramham.

Baseball men say the fund now amounts to about $300,000 and at least two amendments seeking to slice it will be offered on the floor. One of these will propose that the tax on sales of players which is levied for the benefit of Bramham's central office be cut from two per cent to one per cent. The other will come out openly for reducing the present pool by distributing part of it back to the clubs that are members of the association.

Strip Tickets

The experiment of the Brooklyn Dodgers in selling "strip tickets" may give the club $100,000 in its till before the season ever opens. The Dodgers have offered to reserve the same seat for opening day, two holidays and all night games for any fans that wish, and let the Flatbush fans pay in installments. They're reported going fast—for Christmas presents.

Larry MacPhail's three-year contract, incidentally, was extended by the board of directors last month. They gave him a three-year lease when he took charge and have extended it every year since.

Pitcher Kirby Higbe might get excited about the value of $150,000 President Gerry Nugent of the Phillies has publicly placed on him in trade talks, but it won't do him any good in 1941 salary negotiations because he is already signed.

Outfielders Joe Mary and Johnny Podgajny, the rookie hitting sensation of the National League's closing days, also are under contract to the Phils for next year.

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Alva Bradley is hurrying here from Cleveland and the boys were wondering if it's to talk to Babe Ruth . . . The gossips say the baseball trade winds will blow Eddie Miller of the Bees to Cincinnati for Billy Myers and $60,000 next month.

Today's guest star:

C. L. (Poss) Parsons, Denver Post: "I am going into the tough Southwest Conference for the week's most likely upset—Arkansas to topple a favored Rice eleven."

Feed box special:

Paste this in your hat: Horace Stoneham says Mel Ott will stay at the Polo Grounds as long as he can stand on two feet—also that the Giants aren't about to sell either Harry Danning or their Jersey City farm . . . Jimmy Thomson, just back from an exhibition tour of Alabama, left the boys talking about his terrific drives. He drove a 350-yard green at Tuscaloosa; got over a ditch 300 yards from the 10th tee at Anniston and hit the 340-yard 10th green at Montgomery.

Hastings Group Doing Much Red Cross Work

HASTINGS, Nov. 8 — (ENS). — The Cobourg Road Red Cross Society held their monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Virgil Oliver, with 18 members present, and Miss Clara Williamson presiding.

The secretary, Mrs. R. King, read the minutes of the last meeting, and the treasurer, Mrs. Cecil Oliver gave an encourgaing financial report. Since the last meeting, $51.75 had been received realized from a euchre and the sale of tickets on a quilt. Thirteen wash cloths, 5 pairs mitts, 2 girls' sweaters, 3 air-force scarves, 1 pair Khaki gloves, 3 pairs childs' bloomers, 1 boys' shirt, 1 navy scarf and 1 helmet have been made by members.

Three hundred cigarettes were sent to each of the three local boys now serving overseas, and Christmas parcels each containing a sweater, socks, 2½ lbs. Christmas cake, home made candy, chocolate bars, apples, razor blades and shaving cream and packed at the home of Mrs. Vincent Keogan, were sent to three of the boys overseas, one of whom resided here for some time and enlisted in Hastings, and two were were born and have always lived in the community. Two overseas boys who were formerly employed by farmers here, were also sent parcels.

Two quilts were quilted during the afternoon; one quilt top being donated by Mrs. William Foster and the other pieced by the members.

Members agreed to make 5 sweaters, 3 pair socks, 2 scarves, 1 wash cloth, and 2 windbreakers and 1 pair pyjamas for overseas before the next meeting.

The members will be grateful if bundles of old newspapers or magazines for the paper collection are left on Wednesday, November 13, and Thursday, November 14, at the office formerly occupied by J. L. Doughty, so they may be sold to a buyer.

The society will hold a progressive euchre in the Hastings Town Hall on November 27. Mrs. Vincent Keogan, Mrs. L. Lamey, Mrs. A. Beamish, Mrs. Cecil Oliver, Mrs. R. King, Mrs. G. Dickey and the president were appointed as a committee in charge of the euchre.

Miss C. Williamson invited the members to her home for the December meeting.

On Guard Over Vital Firth Of Forth Bridge

Frowning muzzles of anti-aircraft guns on a British warship sweep the skies, ready if German planes again attempt to blast the great steel bridge spanning Scotland's Firth of Forth. The Forth Bridge was one of the first objectives attacked by Nazi raiders on outbreak of the war and it and the naval base have been bombed repeatedly ever since.

Millbrook W.A. To Assume $300 Debt Note

MILLBROOK, Nov. 8—(ENS). — The Women's Association of St. Andrew's Church met on Wednesday at 3 p.m., at the home of Mrs. Edmund Ball, with twenty members present, and the president, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, in the chair.

The devotional theme was "Beginning the day with God," and in addition to the monthly talk, Mrs. F. J. Smith read the worship poem, and Mrs. G. O. Fallis led in the universal prayer for peace. The president announced that the W.A. has assumed responsibility for paying off a three hundred dollar note, with interest of twelve dollars, as its share in the compaign to wipe off the church debt of $1,050.00. The pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco; intimated that, with the W.A. taking over the note in question, the church is now entirely free of debt, this announcement having been made the previous Sunday.

After discussion, it was decided to pay off one hundred dollars and the interest on this note right away, and take out a new note for two hundred dollars, same to be paid off as soon as the money can be raised. The amount collected to date by the canvass which took the place of the usual fowl supper is $151.50, with more still to come in. The treasurer, Mrs. J. McKnight, reported an additional $4.85 to be paid in taxes on the parsonage, as the assessment had been increased this year, and a balance now on hand of $132.73.

A letter of appreciation of the fine service willingly and constantly rendered the church by the W.A. from the recording steward of the church, P. I. Bentley, was read by the secretary, Mrs. W. C. Fallis, as well as letters of appreciation for cards of sympathy sent bereaved members.

Conveners of tables for the Plunkett dinner, to be given at the church on Thursday, November 14, when a four-course meal will be served, were appointed: Mrs. J. H. McKnight and Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. F. J. Smith and Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. H. A. Fallis and Mrs. H. J. Armstrong. These will secure their own helpers, as will also the fourth couple, Mrs. W. A. O'Brien and Miss Josie Sutton. Tickets are to be sold for this dinner beforehand, and a number undertook this service, the amount cleared depending on the extent of the sale.

Some details in connection with the annual bazaar and afternoon tea to be held in the waiting-room on Saturday, December 7, were given attention, those in charge of the fancy work table to be Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Miss M. Duncan, Mrs. J. McKnight, and Mrs. Fred Smith; for the "country store," Miss Sutton, Mrs. W. E. Ball, and Mrs. Arthur Fallis; of the tea tables, Mrs. Stinson and Mrs. H. A. Fallis; other helpers with the supplies for the tables: Mrs. J. A. Brown, Mrs. W. C. Fallis, and Mrs. J. L. Byam.

The invitation of Mrs. H. R. Edmunds to hold the November meeting at her home was accepted with thanks, and decision made to send booklets issued by the War Service Committee of the United Church to each soldier belonging to the local church now on active service, and to send Christmas boxes to the two already overseas.

The other men, it was felt, would be at their respective homes for Christmas. Auditors of the W.A. books were selected, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong and Mrs. Ross Edmunds, and the meeting closed with a much-appreciated solo, "The Shepherd of Israel," by Mrs. H. W. Johnston, with Miss Duncan at the piano. The hostess served candy during the social hour following the Mizpah benediction in unison.

Chained Mother

Lockport, N.Y., Nov. 8 (AP)

GORDON CARPENTER, 34, Niagara Falls, N.Y., was sentenced to four months in jail Thursday for what Judge Raymond K. Knowles described as the "medieval practice" of chaining his 75-year-old mother.

Carpenter and his wife, Marcella, 31, pleaded guilty to a charge of "coercion and wilfully endangering the life and health" of Mrs. Irene Carpenter. Sentence was suspended on Mrs. Carpenter.

not meet on Monday, "Remembrance Day."

The Senate adjourned after the opening proceedings yesterday until Tuesday, when Senator L. A. David of Quebec and Senator Salter Hayden of Ontario will move the address in reply to the speech from the throne in the Upper Chamber.

Not Meet in January

In announcing his proposal of a Dominion-provincial conference, the Prime Minister informed the Commons that Parliament probably would stand adjourned throughout January, so that the conference might be arranged for some time about the middle of that month.

"It is the view of the government that adoption of the commission's recommendations is necessary to put our country in a position to pursue a policy which will achieve the maximum war effort and, at the same time, to lay a sound foundation for post-war reconstruction," Mr. King said in his letter to each provincial premier.

At the proposed conference the government would grasp the opportunity to place its views in this regard before the provinces and seek general discussion of the recommendations. The government believed no time should be lost in arranging such a conference, the prime minister wrote.

The Rowell - Sirois Commission was appointed in 1937 to investigate unsatisfactory Dominion-provincial relations and the war had only emphasized the necessity of a solution.

Under the present set-up, it was impossible to attain the maximum productive effort or distribute war costs fairly. Attention had also to be given to the future, so that thorough-going social, economic and financial adjustments could be made for the post-war period.

The Rowell-Sirois report resulted from a two-and-a-half year study of the confederation basis by a four-man commission, aided by a staff of outstanding experts in economics, finance and history.

In general it recommended that the Dominion should assume responsibility for relief for unemployed employables and for all provincial debt. In return, the provinces would withdraw from the personal and corporation income tax fields, as well as inheritance taxes. Through this tax transfer, it was felt, variable finance factors would be borne more equitably on the broader tax base of the Dominion.

The prime minister also tabled a file of orders-in-council passed during the adjournment of the last session from August to prorogation last Tuesday, and correspondence with Conservative House Leader Hanson on plans for opening parliament.

the shoulder and the right rear fender had come in contact with a maple tree. The automobile had then continued along the shoulder until it crashed broadside into a large tree. The machine was badly wrecked.

Regan was still unconscious when Traffic Officer McClure arrived but was unable to give an account of the accident. The car engine was cold and police believe that the runoff took place hours before O'Reilly noticed the car in the ditch. Probably other drivers had passed the scene without having their attention attracted by the wrecked machine.

Regan was removed by ambulance to St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from severe head injuries and his condition was regarded as serious by Dr. Herbert Young who attended him.

Merchant Demands Protection, Transient Traders Cutting In

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 8 (ENS). —Members of the Township Council heard a rather unusual complaint when they met for their meeting this month. It was the request of D. A. Sharpe of Hoards that something be done to prevent the selling of feeds in the townships by outsiders. As a taxpayer he felt he was paying for the privilege of carrying on the business himself while those from other parts who went from door to door for the sole purpose of selling paid nothing for the privilege. Though the council and presiding Reeve W. J. Ross were all in agreement that something should be done they found loopholes to every suggestion made either by one of their members or the compulainant. The matter was finally tabled with the decision that nothing much could be done about it.

A motion was passed authorizing the treasurer to pay a rebate to Mr. E. Sutton, whose dog had been killed, and the month report of the school attendance officer, G. W. Anderson, was received and filed.

The following accounts were passed; Phillip Sloggett, sheep killed, $56; Bell Telephone account, $3.07; town of Smith's Falls, relief account, General Hospital, Belleville, $14; H. Clarke, S.S. No. 3, $100; James Waters, weed inspector, $5.40; Counties Treasurer, charity, $106.75; W. J. Ross, selecting jurors, $4; T. J. Ketcheson, selecting jurors, $4; W. Stephens, selecting jurors, $4; Roofers Supply Co., supplies, $37.45; A. E. Burgis, supplies, $1.35; Powell Oil Co., gas and oil, $65.40; The Pedlar People, culverts, $102.71; J. Macoun, truck and labor, $66.83; Art Waters, labor, $3.45; Jesse Wright, labor, $20.28; Charles West, labor, $23.66; James Milne, labor, $13.90; T. Slush, gravel, 40c; D. H. Canadian Business Increases Twenty Per Cent In 9 Months

OTTAWA, Nov. 8 — (CP). — Productive operations of Canadian business showed an increase of almost one-fifth in the first nine months of this year, compared with the same period in 1939, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said yesterday.

The Bureau reported its index of the physical volume of business averaged 142 during the nine months compared with 119 in the first nine months of last year.

"Contracts placed for building of plants and for war supplies led to expansion directly in industries conected with the war, while indirectly, an accelerating influence resulted in a considerable expansion in industries supplying consumption goods," the report said.

Commodity prices averaged about 12 per cent. higher during the nine months of the present year. An appreciable advance during the last four months of 1939 resulted in a higher standing in the early part of 1940. The index averaged 82.6 aginst 73.8 last year.

The war had an adverse influence on security prices, the Bureau said. Dominion bonds declined sharply in the first nine months of the war but the drop was counteracted partially by an advance in subsequent months. The average index of capitalized bond yields was 137.5 against 158.7.

"A reorientation of external trade was made necessary by war developments on the continent of Europe but a considerable gain was reported in the total value of both exports and imports," the report said. Exports, exclusive of gold, were up 35 per cent and imports gained 49.2 per cent. Excess of exports over imports was $105,592,267, compared with $128,708,370 in the first nine months of 1939.

"The railway traffic movement has recently shown the influence of grain congestion but the gain in the first nine months of 1940 over the same period of the preceding year was more than 12 per cent," it continued. Cars loaded totalled 2,055,866 against 1,830,493.

"Consequently," the report added, "marked gains were shown in the gross revenue of the main railways. The gross revenue of the Canadian lines of the Canadian National Railways was $152,886,000, against $120,412,000, while the revenue of the Canadian Pacific Railway rose from $106,887,454 to $122,175,000."

The index of employment, based on the first 10 months of the year, was 121, against 112 in the same period of 1939.

Fluctuations in common stocks followed a different pattern. A moderate advance occurred during the first two months of the war and a slight recession followed during the next six. The attack on the low countries and France during May and June was reflected in a sharp decline in stock prices which has been only partially counterbalanced in recent months. The index of common stock prices averaged 86.5, against 99.6 last year, a decline of 13.2 per cent.

Index of manufacturing production rose from 112 to 141, a gain of 26 per cent.

Increased wartime demands for bacon resulted in a gain of nearly 50 per cent in inspected slaughterings of hogs.

Increased activity in the forestry industry was indicated by an increase of 25 per cent in newsprint production, from 2,058,899 to 2,573,605 tons, and a 13.2 per cent in the outward shipment of planks and boards which totalled 1,788,363,000 feet, compared with 1,579,885,000.

"The primary iron and steel industry was favored by the marked acceleration in production for war purposes," the report said. Output of steel ingots was 1,465,000 long tons, against 937,000 in the first nine months of last year, a gain of 73 per cent.

Automobile production, including trucks for military purposes, rose from 110,000 units to 155,000. Crude petroleum imports were nearly 14 per cent higher and crude rubber imports 39.6 per cent. Construction contracts awarded during the first nine months of 1940 showed a gain of 57 per cent over the same period last year and building permits issued in 58 municipalities were up 86.3 per cent.

Smart Operator Rallies Fire-Fighters

OTTERVILLE, Ont., Nov. 8—(CP) —Miss Maude Hussey, telephone operator, stepped into the breach here Thursday when the fire bell was out of action and help was needed to combat a roaring blaze in a warehouse.

By continuous calling on the telephone of all able-bodied men, all members of the Otterville Fire Department reached the scene in a few minutes. Later Miss Hussey called fire departments at Tillsonburg, Delhi and Woodstock. The result was that only the warehouse, operated by Irvine Ackland and Son, was destroyed, with estimated loss of $8,500, and the rest of the main street was saved. Village council had decided to build a new fire hall so the bell had been removed from the town hall tower.

AERIAL ATTACK

A. Baynes of Cedar Lodge on Cedar Lake claims his guests are deer hunting Royal Air Force style. Yesterday R. D. Thompson of London, who has been visiting the resort for the past eight years tried his hand at deer hunting. He had never seen a deer in the woods before. Watching the runway became tiresome, so Thompson climbed a big pine and fell asleep. When he awoke there was a nice doe just below him on the ground, and Thompson shot it. At least, that's the story as it came to us.

MEMORIAL FLOWERS

Some of the floral designs that were final tributes to the memory of Roland Denne were placed today on the city memorial in Central Park and on the Canadian Legion cenotaph. After consulting the heads of several institutions, other flowers were sent to the Sisters of the Precious Blood, the Children's Aid Society and the Sisters of Mount St. Joseph. These were all in addition to flowers that were placed on Mr. Denne's grave in the Little Lake Cemetery. Some of these flowers were received from out of town friends, and among those from local friends were designs from the municipal corporation of Peterborough, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board, Peterborough Utilities Commission and Little Lake Cemetery Board.

Motor Stalled As Driver Crossed Tracks

When his truck stalled on the Romaine Street-Monaghan Road crossing of the C.P.R. and was struck by the evening east bound C.P.R. passenger train Thursday night, Wheeler Windsor, driver for Archie Patterson, North Monaghan, had a miraculous escape from death.

After the locomotive of the train had struck the stalled truck, the motor vehicle was picked up and carried a distance of 240 feet before the train was brought to a halt. Windsor was thrown out or jumped out 190 feet from the crossing.

Dr. F. W. Leslie, a Toronto physician, was a passenger on the train and he rendered first aid to Windsor. The injured man was afterward taken to hospital by Constable C. J. McGillen in a police car. The train which was in charge of Conductor S. Cross, was not moving very fast at the time of the crash.

It is thought that the truck ran out of gasoline just as it reached the crossing. At all events, it was squarely on the track when the train came along.

An interesting talk on 'Clay Modelling' was given by Miss Yeo, 'Puppet Making' being included in the material presented. The president exhibited and explained projects on 'Woodcutting and Social Studies,' and Miss Rea completed the instructive program by a talk and demonstration on 'Making Movies, with science scrapbooks, and report cards."

A discussion of problems followed, one of the most helpful features of the meeting. The suggestion was adopted of having an exchange of Christmas concert material at the next meeting, also that each teacher bring some of the best books from the various school libraries, along this line.

The vote of thanks to the host and hostess, and the service of refreshments during the social hour, brought to a close an interesting evening.

Car Crashes Into Tree When Driver Falls Asleep

The car in which George Pearson, salesman, was fatally injured and Wilbert T. Regan, plumber, badly hurt is shown here as it was found early this morning in the ditch on Highway 28, 300 yards west of the Lindsay turn on the Chemong Road. The two men were returning from a trip to Fenelon Falls and it is thought that Pearson, who was driving, fell asleep at the wheel. Regan is in St. Joseph's Hospital with head injuries and a broken arm.

Melville Chapman, a soldier with the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers, is reported to have had a narrow escape from death a few days ago.

The Engineers were recruited in this city and left a few weeks ago for a military camp at Debert, Nova Scotia. It is believed the Engineers were moved in first to assist in the completion of the camp.

Chapman was getting a pail of water at a pump when he stepped on soft ground and sank quickly to his wait in quicksand. His shouts for help brought several comrades on the run, and he was pulled from the quagmire with a rope.

He is married and lives at 301 Bethune Street.

The late Mr. Constable came to the C.G.E. in October, 1909, and became foreman of the brass foundry, a position he held until his retirement in 1932. He was a capable, energetic worker, and a man who made a host of friends, particularly among the older men at the plant.

He was born in Maidstone, England, son of the late William Constable and Sarah Day, and he has lived in this city for the past 31 years.

He has been in poor health for the past three years.

Surviving is his widow, formerly Jennie Openshaw, 369 Bonaccord street; two daughters and two sons: Lillian Constable at home, Mrs. E. Mitchell, Mount Denis; William J. Constable of Peterborough, and Gordon Constable also of this city.

Three sisters and a brother also survive: Charles Constable, Toronto; Mrs. W. Yates, Toronto; Mrs. J. Mitchell, and Mrs. H. Openshaw, Toronto.

For several years before coming to Peterborough, Mr. Constable was employed at the foundry of Keith and Fitzsimmons in Toronto.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. from the Nisbett Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street, to Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr will officiate.

Rambling Reporter

ANOTHER ONE

Closely following the antics of his friend "Killer" Longhurst, Jim Wharry is reported to have fired on five deer, and to have missed them all. The really tragic part is that the deer were all together.

This morning the town buzzes with rumors, some claim that "buck-fever" is contagious, and that Mr. Wharry caught it from Stan, but others insist that this is completely impossible, and that Mr. Wharry was merely overcome by the sight of so many of the magnificent creatures at once.

Mr. Wharry's ability is seemingly above reproach, said Mr. Longhurst this morning, because "I distinctly saw him shoot at a deer, and, believe me, a porcupine fell out of a nearby tree. I don't mean to say that Jim hit the porky, but it did hear me call him by name, and I think it died from fright."

Milf. Hardill has been loud in his criticism of Mr. Longhurst's new name, and firmly contends that any man who needs 15 shots at one deer to kill it, is certainly not entitled to the exalted title, "Killer."—J.W.H.

Kiwanis Plan Charter Night

Plans have been laid to have Friday night, November 2, as charter night for the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, it was announced at the meeting of the club at the Empress Hotel to-day. It will be a ladies' night.

A motion picture entitled "Yesterday, To-day, and To-morrow" was shown at the meeting, and it dealt with the canning industry. The progress made from the time Napoleon offered a reward of 12,000 francs to the man discovering the best means for the preservation of food, to-day was depicted.

The struggle, the heartbreak, and the romance of the canning industry all combined to make the picture one of the most educational in its line. The fact that 50 or 60 cans a day were all that were expected from one tinsmith in England about 100 years ago, and today it is possible to produce 2,000 cans a minute in one plant on this continent, proved to be of much interest.

The effort of Pasteur was displayed, and his discovery in connection with bacteria, was one that made the present canning process possible. It was one that overcame many obstacles, the two chief of which were uncertainty of quality, and the restrictive market price occasioned by the lack of domestic market in America.

A war was responsible for the original development of the canning industry, and another war was responsible for its expansion into what is now one of the most important industries in the world.

Victoria Order Nursing Committee Is Appointed

Organization of a Peterborough chapter of the Victorian Order of Nurses advanced a penultimate step with the appointment of a provisional committee at a public meeting in the city council chamber last night.

Alderman Dutton was named as chairman, and Fred S. Potter treasurer, and those who were commissioned to assist in preparing for what was mentioned as an annual meeting were: Ralph Standish, Hurrel Dodds, Charles Elliott, John Bradshaw, F. J. Overend, Frank Burgess, S. Constable, George Groombridge, Vern Fiske, Kenneth Graham, John Dishart, Roy Dixon, Miss Rachael Young, Miss Elsie Bennett, Miss May Jory, Mrs. J. R. Corkery, Mrs. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, Mrs. G. K. Fraser.

A meeting of this committee will be held next Wednesday evening to consider arrangements for an early general meeting at which officers will be elected and plans laid out for the beginning of the V.O.N. service in Peterborough.

This initiative was endorsed by the meeting last night, and the methods of the Victorian Order of Nurses, finances, sphere of duties and other questions were answered by Miss Beatrice Creasy, Ottawa, field superintendent of the Order, and Dr. G. S. Cameron.

It is expected that at the outset one nurse of the V.O.N. will be engaged and the work of Miss Helen Anderson continued under the new auspice which will feature bedside nursing. The chapter's activities will be confined to the city in the beginning, but it is likely that North Monaghan township and the county as a whole will later be given an opportunity of availing their people of the advantages of the V.O.N.

The Peterborough Health Association will maintain its identity and interests, and it was generally believed last night that the aims of the citizens who have given a great deal of time and thought to questions of public health and nursing will be realized in the near future with the assistance of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Local Soldier Wounded Twice

One of the first Peterborough men to answer the call to the colors was Pte. Jack Irwin, who joined the Toronto Scottish last spring. He was 21 years old when he enlisted, and left for England on July 15th.

Since being in the Mother Country, Pte. Irwin has been wounded twice, being put in the hospital both times. The wounds were caused by bomb explosions, and the first one required six stitches to close it. On September 2nd, while helping to remove some women and children from some wrecked buildings, the soldier was struck in the eye by a piece of cement, and has been in the hospital since, according to the Examiner's information. Wand explained the buying of war stamps and certificates, and Mrs. Roberts told of the Missionary and Maintenace Rally to be held in Peterborough on November 17, with a banquet in George Street Church on November 18. Several letters of appreciation for flowers sent were read by Mrs. W. C. McGee, and thirteen letters of sympathy have been written during the month, she said. Mrs. W. H. Girven reported 57 calls for the Lock-Out committee, and J. Spencer 47 calls for the Sick and Visiting group. Miss L. Morrow told of 11 bouquets sent to the sick by the Flower committee, and Mrs. H. About Town with FLORA

You'll know folks at Levine's Dress Shop have been thinking of your personal flattery when you see their group of wool and crepe dresses designed to take you thru' the next few months with a completely self-assured feeling. For that important date I'd single out a little wool frock studded with silver nailheads in muted rose or blue, and pause to remind you that to pick off a wool dress now is to be glad later on—there's a market shortage of wools, you know. If you like black, but not too close to your face, you'll tumble for a sophisticated model with front draping in turquoise. In coats, there's everything in deftly molded lines and handsome furs that you could wish for—but it's wise to do your coat-shopping early—at 369 George street.

Furs are extraordinarily important this season, and your shop scout learned a very salutary lesson as she looked through the new collection at Hamilton's Fur Store, 186 Charlotte street. If you have a limited amount to expend on such an important part of your winter wardrobe as a fur coat, buy it in the best shop you know of—it will pay you in the long run. Quality and style are of paramount importance at Hamilton's, and you are sure of the ultimate in value at whatever price you pay. I noted particularly their smart Kolinsky dyed muskrats; their swagger caraculs with flaring backs; their more practical but equally newly cut Hudson seals. They tell me that the best skins are scarce, so make inquiries at once.

The busiest girls and women are those who know the wisdom of keeping healthy—they haven't the TIME to be ill, nor will they risk chance for business advancement by too many sick leaves. They make it a habit to drop in at the Mineral Fume Bath establishment, 220 Brock street, whenever they feel a bit run down, or a cold coming on (and how cold germs do plague us these days!). They know how the invigorating mineral fumes clear the system of excess waste and poisons; how easily a cold is completely discouraged, and how delightful relaxed is the massage treatment following the bath. For stubborn cases of arthritis, rheumatism, etc., a course of treatments—for which there are special rates—will do wonders. 'Phone 3157 for appointments.

A style note called out from the past and adopted to modern living is the new pompadour hair-do that you'll be trying soon — you simply can't look glamorous with last year's coiffure unvariated, altho' an even slight change under the expert hands of operators at Madame Merriam's Salon at 181 Charlotte street, can do wonders to establish that "1941" look. They know the coiffure to make the season's perched back hat most becoming to its wearer, and will plan a style for you employing a definite fashion slant, yet is practical and easily combed. Their skill at permanents, by the way, is too well known to need further mention, if I'm to believe what I hear. Open evenings...phone 4852.

Canadian Women Mark Club Work

LONDON, Nov. 7—(CP).—Organizations set up in London for the comfort and entertainment of Canadian troops are already acquiring a history.

The oldest of them, the Officers' Club, founded by Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of Canada's High Commissioner, celebrated one year of active service in October, when a midday patrol ate the 16,063rd lunch served at the club.

The surroundings are as quiet and homely as London's bomb-scarred west-end nowadays allows; the membership is free to all officers of Canadian services and prices are nominal—for instance, tea and cakes cost sixpence—while the service is maintained by Canadian women who give gladly of their time. As far as possible the meals are Canadian in style.

Name in the visitors' book are of men from all parts of Canada from the Arctic to the international boundary, and from all ranks—from acting sub-lieutenants of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve to air commodores and from generals to flight-lieutenants.

When first established by Mrs. Massey as what might be called a commissioned edition of the now famous Beaver Club, organi for the men of the ranks, t Officers' Club was housed in rooms made available by Percy Clews, European Manager of the Canadian National Railways. The club outgrew this accommodation, however, and transferred to quarters loaned by the Cunard Steamship Company.

ANOTHER ESPERANTO?

GENEVA—(CP).—Swiss philologists are seeking to halve "Matten English" recognized as an official language here. It is a polyglot language evolved by mercenary Swiss soldiers of the middle ages, and has traces of every tongue.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Canadian Women's Force Is Getting Ready For Anything

By MARIENNE ISAAC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 8. — (CP) — Thousands of young Canadian women, banded together in the Canadian Women's Service Force, are drilling and training to serve where the Dominion needs them most and, if the occasion arises, to defend Canada with their lives.

Sponsored by the Canadian Corps, an organization of First Great War veterans, the C.W.S.F. has grown swiftly until it has at least 5,000 members in the four provinces where it has set up offices. There are 2,000 in Toronto alone, 1,200 in British Columbia, 1,000 in Alberta and nearly 300 in Halifax.

"We are endeavoring to unite the organizations already formed across Canada, and our task will be made easier when we are officially recognized by the Department of National Defence," says Mrs. Winifred Richards, the commanding officer in Toronto. "We have every reason to hope that the recognition will come soon."

The C.W.S.F. is one of a number of women's organizations formed along similar lines, all with the basic principle to be ready for whatever the government asks. Two of the other large organizations are the Canadian Active Territorial Services and the Red Cross Transport Service, which has in its curriculum such things as map and compass reading, mechanics, and air raid precautions.

The movement will not end with the coming of peace. Drilling and classes will continue with a view to preparedness. Classes are now held in first aid, home nursing, A.R.P., telegraphy, wireless and motor transport.

Mrs. Richards, a slight figure in her officer's uniform—a duplicate of that worn by the Auxiliary Territorial Service in England—has a post ranking with colonel in the army and is addressed by privates as "Madam Commandant." She is the youngest ex-service woman in Canada, having served in the First Great War at the age of 15 in the Auxiliary Service Corps in England.

Members of the C.W.S.F. will be drilled in rifle practice under qualified military instructors. R.S.M. H. Dennison, Toronto instructor, says "the hardest thing for the girls' instructors to do is to exercise enough self-restrain in language."

The only unit of the C.W.S.F. which has received pay is the "Land Army." This consists of 150 girls who worked on farm all spring and summer. Their services were greatly in demand by farmers. The girls did everything from picking and grading apples to milking cows.

A strict medical examination is necessary before drill work is undertaken.

There is no punishment except suspension for serious infractions of regulations. Discipline squads patrol the streets. These squads consist of 12 girls from each battalion.

Each girl must enlist as a private and is entitled to enter an N.C.O.'s class only after sufficient training. Officers are picked from the N.C.O.'s class according to ability.

Uniforms are issued to all C.W.S.F. in due course. These uniforms are plain but smart two-piece khaki suits with a wide khaki belt and the letters C.W.S.F. on the shoulder. Privates wear forage caps and officers the usual peaked cap. Uniforms cost about $9.50 and each girl must pay for her own.

DOROTHY DIX

MOTHERS AS WELL AS WIVES ENTITLED TO ASSISTANCE.
Married Sons Should Help Their Parents When Latter Are in Need Should Be No Cause for Jealousy.

Dear Miss Dix—No man ever had kinder or more loving parents than I have. They made many sacrifices to rear me and give me an education. Now they are old and feeble, and I am making a good salary, but every time I give them any money my wife goes into a rage, abuses them and me for everthing she can think of, calls me all sorts of vile names, and for days our home will be almost unendurable. Should I become indifferent and inconsiderate toward those who have done everything for me in order to preserve my wife's peace of mind? Should I let them suffer for the necessities of life in order that she can have more money for fine clothes and going out to places of amusement? Should not a decent man spend upon his aged parents at least a fraction of what his wife would spend in giving one cocktail party? Because a man marries is he supposed to lose all love for his parents, all sense of responsibility toward them, never go to see them or give them a penny because his wife feels that she has a right to monopolize him and everything he makes? PHIL.

ANSWER. — Certainly not. A man's first duty is, of course, to his wife, but that does not do away with his obligations toward his parents, though many wives seem to think that it does and that their husbands should let their mothers starve, if necessary, in order to buy them fur coats and new cars.

Why Are Wives Jealous?

Men, as a rule, are far more generous, more considerate and more broadminded in their attitude towards their wives' families than women are towards their husbands'. A man does not expect his wife, for instance, to quit loving her mother and to stop going to see her or paying her any attention just because she has married him. But there is no siren, no vamp, no Other Woman of whom a wife can be so jealous as she is of her husband's mother, and none from whom she is so determined to separate him.

Very few men are unwilling for their wives to help their people if they need it, but most wives begrudge every penny their husbands give their people. Furthermore, there are a hundred men who take their dependent mothers-in-law into their homes and cheerfully support them, to one woman who makes her husband's mother welcome in her house.

But women seldom play the game that way. They feel that they own their husbands, body and soul and pocketbook, and they think that any attentions that their husbands pay to their families defrauds them of their just desserts. Many a man had to use as much chicanery and tell as many lies when he goes to see his mother as he would to keep a tryst with a Lady Love, and he can't slip her even a five-dollar bill without his wife making a scene that leaves him a wreck for days.

Of course, any man is a coward and a weakling who lets his wife dominate him so completely that she keeps him from helping his parents. But there is no price that a henpecked man won't pay for quiet at home.

WIVES SHOULD NOT BE PLAYGIRLS.

Dear Dorothy Dix,—I have been happily married for 20 years. Have two very fine children. My husband has been ideal. He is hard-working, industrious, and has given me all the luxuries of life. He has fine morals and has had no affairs with women.

I am considered attractive, and wherever we go the men make a big fuss over me. They tell me how pretty I am and, of course, this pleases me. Many men kiss me while dancing and on other occasions. I have seen nothing wrong in this as the kisses have meant nothing to me, but my husband gets furious. He tells me that a married woman has no right to permit men to kiss her, and says that when they do they think that I will probably lend myself to an affair with them.

He has asked me to refuse to allow other men to kiss or neck me. Says it makes him unhappy. I enjoy these little kisses. I think they keep me feeling young and that my husband is too narrow-minded and jealous in this regard. Shall I agree to his request? N.G.R.

ANSWER— Unless you want to find out some fine day that you have exhausted your husband's supply of patience and forbearance and that he has divorced you. The wonder is that he hasn't done it long ago. But don't try him too far. Evidently he is getting fed up on your conduct and, in the end, you know, even the humblest worm turns.

Apparently you have no real affection for your husband, or else you would not be so avid for the kisses your dancing partners bestow upon you. Nor would you get such a kick out of their phoney love-making.

But, even so, don't you think you would make a pretty poor bargain to swap off all the comforts and luxuries your husband gives you to say nothing of his love for the thrill of a few little affairs that tickle your vanity because they make you feel that you still have the power to attract men?

The woman philanderer is an even bigger fool than the man philanderer because with her the game is such a short one. In a little while she loses her beauty and her allure, and then it's all over and she has lost everything—the power to attract men, a husband who is disillusioned and contemptuour of her, and the respect of all who know her.

Your hour is about to strike. Beat the clock and get back home, Cinderella, before your glass slippers turn into brogues.

SILENCE OFTEN BEST POLICY.

Dear Dorothy Dix,—I am an unmarried mother with a beautiful 3-year-old daughter who is at present in a foster home where everyone loves her. I want her to know I am her real mother. When should she be told the circumstances and how should it be done? Is it the foster mother's duty or mine to tell her? TRICKY.

ANSWER. — If you have given the child away and she has been legally adopted, why do you want her to know anything about you? Why don't you just fade out of her life and let her foster mother tell her that she has been adopted and let it go at that? That is the way the matter is arranged in most cases, and the child never knows who or what her mother was.

Certainly it would bring no happiness to the child to know that she is illegitimate, and it would only upset her mentally and spiritually to have two mothers and be torn between them in affection and loyalty.

So my earnest advice to you is to do one of two things. Either give the little girl up entirely to her foster mother and never try to see her or have any communication with her again, or else take her away from the foster mother and keep her yourself and be her one and only mother.

But if you do that, don't try to tell her about her birth now while she is so young. Wait until she is old enough to understand and perhaps to have some sympathy for you and comprehension of the temptation that you were not strong enough to resist.

DOROTHY DIX.

I.O.D.E. Message To British Women

A resolution of sympathy to the women of the British Isles was forwarded to the Hon. Vincent Massey, High Commissioner for Canada, at Thursday's meeting of the National Executive Committee of the I.O.D.E., held in Toronto, with Mrs. W. B. Horkins presiding.

The message sends "greeting to you, the women of Britain, expressing our affectionate sympathy with you in this your hour of trial. We wish you to know that we realize that you strive in defence of our common freedom. We regard with awe and admiration your endurance, resource and heroism. You are inspiring those of other lands with a greater appreciation of the ideals and spiritual qualities which have given dignity to women." It adds assurance of deep concern and ever increasing desire to labor in our common cause until victory be won.

Enquiry Column

QUESTION: I enclose my favorite for Walnut Dainties which I hope may be found useful to others. It is very nice for afternoon teas or coffee suppers.

Walnut Dainteis
(Favorite Recipe of A.T.M.)

One-half cup butter, 1 cup flour. Rub these two together as for shortbread, pat in tin in one sheet and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until brown, then have ready mixed the following: 1¼ cup brown sugar, 1 cup crushed walnuts, 2 tablespons flour, ½ cup fine cocoanut, ½ teaspoon walnuts, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ cup fine cocoanut, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs. Beat the eggs, add sugar, then other ingredients. Place on shortbread and bake again until brown in moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr. When cool ice with any icing you prefer (or leave unfrosted, Ed. note.) —A.T.M.

ANSWER: Thank you for this tempting recipe—I tried it and left them unfrosted and think they were delicious.

QUESTION: I have a...gas range and find I cannot get off marks on cream enamel outside finish or black metal under lid—lining under the grids—latter mostly caused by steam from cooking pots, and first by drops spilled accidentally when serving on dishes. These marks seem to bake right into the finish leaving a dull spot o nthe high polish I have tried so many things: cleanser, soap and various cleaning fluids, but marks do not come off and spoil lovely surface look. I would be very grateful if you could help me with a suggestion please.—B. C.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

At one time we used to use a bleach powder for cleaning the inside white enamel surface of two bake dishes we had—the insert for silver pudding dishes—and this whitened them up nicely. But the porcelain top of a stove should be non-porous enough to resist food spotting. What is doubtless happening is that the enamel surface is porous enough to soak up food stains and when you apply cleaners they merely work on the outer surface never reaching the soaked undersurface. It is possible you might use commercial ether on them but this would merely palliative for as soon as another spot touches it would stain again—besides ether is dangerous to use—being highly inflammable and volatile. Stove must be turned off and cold if you try commercial ether—dob it on the spots with absorbent cotton and let it stand—it evaporates almost immediately.

The manufacturer of the stove should be notified of this defect, and in my opinion should be willing to rectify it by rebaking the enamel finish of your top or substituting it with a new one.

It's No Thrill On Home Fronts

SOUTHPORT, England, Nov. 8. — (CP).—"Women on the home front are doing a grand job in the face of difficulties," according to Mrs. Barbara Aryton Gould, addressing the National Conference of Labor women.

"There is no excitement staying at home wrestling with the problems of rationing," she said. "There is no thrill, but all the time these women are as vital in winning the war as the men who go out and destroy Nazis in the air. If the home front were to crack everything else would crack."

Three hundred delegates, with only three dissentients, carried a resolution on war and peace, stressing that only a commonwealth of nations could bring about a lasting peace.

Cosy Mitts Made From Old Socks

Much resourcefulness in the use of discarded woollen socks and stockings for warm mitts and toques to be sent to the needy of the British Isles is credited to member of the Women's Auxiliary to the Civic War Service Council. The women clip off worn toes and heels, line with a still older pair, and employing a few deft stitches, turn out cosy articles that will undoubtedly be welcomed with enthusiasm by victims of English air raids.

Color and gay stripes in the finished products are a cheerful note —made possible by the habit of most men to depart from conservatism in dress when it comes to socks —in fact, some mitts and toques are rendered quite Tyrolean in effect when finished off, as they often are, with harmonizing blanket stitching.

Most discarded socks can be used provided the leg is in good repair, although thin spots and tiny holes may be mended. Almost every housewife has a number of old socks and stockings tucked away in her "odds-and-ends" bag—now is the time to get rid of such moth-gatherers and contribute to the relief of suffering at the same time. A receptable has been placed in Zeller's Store on George street to receive such parcels, and an especially large supply is hoped for during the week-end by the committe in charge.

other furtively as people do who are after the same job.

It was a familiar scene to Lona, Day after day for the last eight months she had waited like this in countless such office rooms. Leaning against the painted wall, she looked about her listlessly. Now and then a frizzy-haired, gum-chewing personage with a pencil poised behind her ear would conduct one of the girls into the inner office, and the line would shift again in an unceasing effort to get nearest the door. An intermittent murmur of conversation stirred the air, jerky, commonplace comments upon the weather, the latest bank robbery, and the scarcity of work—the sort of talk in which strangers indulge when they are nervous and wish to appear cool.

Looking from one to the other, Lona found herself wondering what was really going on behind those tensed faces. Were they all as desperate, as panicky, as rudderless as she? Or were there some of them with homes—real homes—people who loved them, mothers and fathers? She winced at that and swallowing back a lump that rose in her throat, turned her face to the wall so the sudden tears in her eyes might not be noticed. "Daddy!" her heart had cried out in a desperate pang of loneliness. "Oh, daddy!"

The next minute she was feeling for her handkerchief and scolding herself roundly. There was no use in outbursts like this. She had learned that long ago in the terrible months when it seemed she could never, never get used to the way life was treating her. Time and again back in Bridgewater when she had been left to putter about in the old house alone, she had dropped the task she had been forcing herself to do, and had thrown herself on her bed in an agony of tears, the very fierceness of which, it seemed, must somehow break through the cloud of unhappiness that surrounded her.

They had been of no avail, those tears. It did no good to protest to a laughing fate. She couldn't stand it, she wouldn't stand it. There were things you HAD to stand, whether you were able to or not. She hadn't been long discovering that. And, because yielding to her grief had done no good, she had learned, somehow, to control it. Only sometimes, at moments like the present, it was hard, desperately hard, to be alone.

She was grateful and a little astonished, when the door of the inner office next swung open to see the beckoning hand of the frizzled blond point her way.

"Miss Ackerman?" the raspy voice flung at her, and before her hesitant nod was half completed. "You're to come right in, dearie!" she beamed.

"It's the boss's orders!" she flung over her shoulder, as a murmur of protest swept the room. "Can't help if you were here first."

Wondering, Lona edged her way through the line to the door. "Are you sure—" she began. She was almost the last applicant to arrive. All these others had been here before her. Surely there must be a mistake. . . . "Who's doing the hiring?" she managed to whisper to the blond, her heart sinking.

"Hardy," the girl flung back. "Lucky break for you. He knows you. Saw you through the door and ordered me to drag you in."

Lakefield Club Dominates First Tourney

HAVELOCK, Nov. 8—(ENS). — The opening tournament of the local badminton season was marked by keen competition last night, when the Lakefield Badminton Club as the initial visitors won nine of the 17 games from Havelock, in a lively round-robin session. Evidence of the closeness of play was the fact that although the home club lost in games, they were ahead in total points by 201 to 178.

The visitors held a decided edge in ladies' doubles, with four victories out of five games. In the men's division, Havelock held the advantage with three wins to Lakefield's two. In the mixed, the local badminteers took four games to the visitors' three.

Following the play, refreshments were served by the hostess club, and an invitation accepted by the latter clug to a return engagement in Lakefield on Monday, November 18. President Jack Ryan of the visitors spoke on behalf of his club, voicing their appreciation of the local hospitality, and D. F. Miller, head of the local group, replied.

The idea was broached during the evening of forming a badminton league this year, and drawing up a regular schedule. It was suggested that the clubs in Marmora, Hastings, Campbellford, in addition to Lakefield and Havelock be consulted in the matter, and if possible a meeting of the club presidents and team captains from the above centres assemble here at an appointed date to discuss the possibilities of such a plan, and if agreeable to arrange a suitable schedule.

Roughly it was believed last night that the league, if formed, could begin immediately after the new year, and continue for three months, January, February and March. The schedule would probably be drawn up to include one contest a week. On alternate weeks, each club would play away and then at home. Since the season would last about twelve weeks, this would make six at home and six away. Members of both clubs seemed to heartily approve of the league idea. The secretary is the Havelock group will notify the other clubs of this proposal and attempt to arrange a meeting in the near future.

Results of Play:

Ladies' Doubles.—Marian Comrie and Bessie Dunn of Lakefield defeated Gena McNeely and Muriel Quinn of Havelock, 15-7; Edythe Russell and Helen Covert of Havelack, defeated Thelma Madill and Isabel Millage of Lakefield, 15-4; Mary Trude and Lois Yale of Lakefield defeated Iva Smith and Mary Thomas of Havelock, 15-11; Bessie Dunn and Marian Comrie of Lakefield defeated Laura Wing and Gena McNeely of Havelock, 15-11; Isabel Millage and Mary Trude of Lakefield defeated Muriel Quinn and Laura Wing of Havelock, 15-9.

Men's Doubles.—Jack McLaughlin and Jim Covert of Havelock defeated Art Kindon and Lloyd Minshall of Lakefield, 15-8; George Tanner and Harry Stabler of Lakefield defeated D. F. Miller and Ernie Aboud of Havelock, 18-17; Jack McLaughlin and Jack Aboud of Havelock defeated Jack Ryan and Frank Munro of Lakefield, 15-7; Bert Haryett and Jim Covert of Havelock defeated Art Kindon and Harry Stabler of Lakefield, 15-7; Gena McNeely and D. F. Miller of Havelock defeated Marian Comrie and Lloyd Minshall of Lakefield, 18-17; Isabel Millage and George Tanner of Lakefield defeated Muriel Quinn and Ernie Aboud of Havelock, 15-2; Mary Trude and Jack Ryan of Lakefield defeated Laura Wing and Jack Aboud of Havelock, 15-10; Mary Thomas and Bert Haryett of Havelock defeated Lois Yale and Frank Munro of Lakefield, 15-8; Iva Smith and Ernie Aboud of Havelock defeated Thelma Madill and Frank Munro of Lakefield, 17-16.

Your Party Grand Fun With These New Games

"Jigsaw High Jinks" Breaks Ice

There's no stopping your party now! "Jigsaw High Jinks" starts things off with a bang and hilarity rules for the evening.

For this gay ice-breaker, write on large pieces of cardboard all sorts of crazy high jinks—"Kiss Two Blondes," "Do an Apache Dance," "Sing Duet in Opera Style." Then cut pieces in two, jigsaw fashion, and separate halves, making one pile for the girls to choose from, another pile for the boys.

On arriving, each guest draws a half-card, then searches for the one who holds the other half. When jigsaws are all matched, it is up to each couple to perform the stunt its card orders. Much laughter when shy Joan kisses two blond Apollos or when portly John goes wildly Apache!

Another lively game is "Shouting Proverbs." One guest as IT leaves the room while others pick a proverb, perhaps "Rolling Stones Gather No Moss." Allot one word to each group of players, who must shout this word when IT returns. From a weird medley of "No," "A," "Stone" and so on IT must guess the "Good-by."

And what thrills you can get with Oriental Fortunes! See our 32-page booklet for this and other exciting fortunes. Has stacks of stunts, games, ice-breakers, brain-teasers to keep the fun going from "Hello" to "Goodby."

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of PARTY GAMES FOR ALL OCCASIONS to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

MARGIN OF SAFETY

IF A MINIMUM rebid of the responder's suit is treated by the side as a weakness-shower and an effort to sign off, unless the original bidder has unusual strength, then he can afford to bid five-card and six-card suits in a much weaker hand than when such a bid shows substantial values. When this is being done, however, the original caller must act gingerly and not jump at once to game in the responder's suit unless he is prepared to find his partner with an irreducible minimum. Unless his own holding is quite strong, he should raise the bid just one level in order to find out whether his partner had a near minimum or a near-maximum.

	♠ 8 6 3 ♥ K J 9 7 3 ♦ K 6 2 ♣ 10 9
♠ A 10 7 ♥ 8 4 ♦ 10 9 7 5 ♣ A 8 5 3	W. N. E. S.	♠ J 4 ♥ Q 10 ♦ Q J 4 3 ♣ K J 7 4 2
	♠ K Q 9 5 2 ♥ A 6 5 2 ♦ A 8 ♣ Q 6

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass

Such a bid as North's here could show a hand with any number of playing tricks from slightly over three up to six or so. South had no way of knowing whether it was in the upper or lower register. A kibitzer behind him criticized him for not bidding 4-Hearts as soon as he heard the suit mentioned, but he knew better. He knew how weak his partner's hand might be, and he provided a margin of safety by raising to only three.

If North's hand had been about half a trick stronger, he would have gone to 4-Hearts. But as it was, he held only about three and a half probable playing tricks. Unless he had about four and a plus value, his correct action was to pass.

As the cards lay, there was no earthly chance to avoid the loss of two tricks in each of the black suits. So South was vindicated.

100 Off On Hunt

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 7 (ENS).—With well over one hundred hunting licenses being issued locally, making an all-time high in the number of local nimrods determined to shoot deer, a rather hard season for the fleeting animals is augured. More parties and larger groups than ever were organized for the hunt this year and both cars and trucks piled high with gear were requisitioned to carry the hunters into the north country and their favorite camp. From here some groups go as much as twenty miles north of St. Ola, while others stop at St. Ola, Little Mink Lake, a few miles north of Marmora, and some only as far as Warsaw. Up to Wednesday none had returned to report their success or lack of it.

W.M.S. Meeting Reveals Great Progress

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 8 — (ENS). — There was three hundred and forty-five dollars turned over to the branch treasurer during the three-quarter year period of St. John's W.M.S., according to the promising report presented to the members at their monthly meeting in St. John's Church on Tuesday. Thirty-nine members head this and the report of a special meeting of the Finance Committee presented, and as a result it was decided unanimously to increase the thankoffering rather than sponsor any particular entertainment as a means of raising money.

The group, led by the president, Mrs. E. C. Roberts, will be feted at the December meeting. The group had the highest average attendance for the year and the December luncheon meeting will be their reward.

This was incorporated in a motion made by Mrs. J. D. Mills and Mrs. A. G. Watson, and for it the leaders of group committees were named to arrange the affair to which the president urged all members to come.

It was announced the annual election of officers would also take place at the December meeting, and on motion of Mrs. W. H. Ashton and Mrs. Bland four ladies were appointed to the nominating committee—Mrs. A. L. Malcolm, Mrs. H. T. Free, Mrs. D. Stillman and Mrs. J. A. Mitchell.

After the report of the flower fund had been presented by Mrs. C. W. Palliser, who announced a balance on hand of $7.13, the president addressed the meeting briefly suggesting that all should make a strong effort to attend the missionary meeting here on November 13 when Dr. Endicott and Dr. Arnup, both of Toronto, would be the guest speakers.

"Bringing Christianity to Britain" was the subject of an address delivered by Mrs. A. L. Malcolm as principal feature of the program. She told members that the town of Chichester was the first town to have a Christian cathedral, and the first edifice there dated back to 52 B.C. Describing the building, the speaker pointed out that eight bells hung in its tower and the first organist was appointed during the reign of Henry VIII.

Other items on the program included a vocal solo by Mrs. A. G. Watson; Scripture readings and verse by Mrs. C. W. Turner; study book chapter, "The Stewardship of Life," divided under the headings, "Duty of Self-Development" by Mrs. A. J. Armour "Development of the Body," by Mrs. S. Twigg, "Why Should We Care for the Body?" by Mrs. W. Scott, "The Cyclical Development," Mrs. A. J. Armour, Part I. "Intellectual," Part II. "Emotional," Mrs. Scott; 3rd Devotional, "The Mastery of the Whole Self" by Mrs. Armour. Concluding number was a hymn.

Refugees Continue Singing After Bomb Hits Famous Old London Church

LONDON, Nov. 8 — (CP). — One of the most famous churches in London was hit by a high explosive bomb during a prolonged German air raid on the capital on Thursday.

(Censorship prevented identification of the building by name.)

Several hundred homeless persons usually take shelter in the church during raids and it was crowded with women and children who were singing "Annie Laurie" to a piano accompaniment when the bomb angled down, bursting with an explosion that rocked the crypt and filled it with smoke and dust.

The pianist stopped abruptly but then shouted quickly:

"It's only one of our own shells."

While ambulances rushed to the spot with sirens screaming he started to play again and the refugees went on singing.

A warden in the crypt of the bombed church said that afterwards the occupants of the shelter "went to sleep as though nothing had happened."

"The absence of panic was really remarkable," he said. "The people sang although their throats were parched with dust from the explosion.

"A little later one of the clergy came into the crypt, said a prayer, and cheered the occupants with a few quiet words."

A woman standing at a bus stop just outside the church was killed, but there were no casualties in the crypt itself.

All the stained glass windows in one side of the church were blown in or damaged and the wall was pitted with bomb fragments.

Pews were covered with dust and debris but the church appeared not to have been seriously damaged, officials said. The bomb fell just outside the door leading to the crypt.

A Canadian soldier blown off his feet while crossing the road was taken into the crypt by other soldiers who had taken shelter there. He quickly recovered.

Tunnel Cave-in Kills 5 Negroes

PITTSBURG, Nov. 8—(AP). — Five negro workmen were crushed to death today by the collapse of a nearby Stowe township traffic tunnel which they were repairing.

Eight men were in the tunnel at the time a section of the concrete roof fell but three—warned of danger by a "sudden loud, cracking" noise—escaped. One of three, William Peay, 30, was injured.

Bodies of the five were dug out of the debris five hours after the accident by rescuers working with steam shovels.

The tunnel, about 15 feet high and 800 feet long, runs through a hill connecting two communities. It was condemned 10 years ago but recently, in response to complaints, the county commissioners ordered it repaired.

Arrangements for the gathering were in charge of the social committee of which Miss Alta Moncrieff is convener. Games were enjoyed and refreshments were served.

Churchill Terms Re-election of Roosevelt 'Message of Good Cheer'

IN SPITE OF ALL THE BLOWS WE HAVE ENDURED WE HAVE NOT ABANDONED ONE JOT OF ANY OF OUR OBLIGATI ONS AND UNDERTAKINGS TOWARD ENSLAVED COUNTRI ES, CHURCHILL DECLARES

LONDON, Nov. 9—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill today described the re-election of President Roosevelt as "a message from across the ocean of great encouragement and good cheer."

Speaking at a luncheon, Mr. Churchill said "We offer our heartfelt congratulations to President Roosevelt, who has received an unprecedented mark of American confidence in being chosen for the third time to lead his mighty people forward."

"We shall now receive the support of the products of the gigantic munitions productions and the matchless workshops, furnaces and foundries of the American Union," he said.

"Our successful resistance and final victory have been proclaimed by all parties in America.

"But no one over here has been left in any doubt that beyond this strong material help and foundation of common interest there flows a tide of comprehension, sentiment and fierce passionate sympathy for our cause.

"We are straining every nerve to accelerate our production and I do not doubt that we shall succeed.

"The enemy is doing his utmost to cut us off from the vital supplies overseas.

"Therefore the maintenance of our sea-power is an absolute necessity to our victory. . .

"There is one small heroic country today to whom our thoughts go out in sympathy and admiration — Greece. To the valiant Greek people we send from

For Maximum Effort Great Personal Sacrifices Necessary

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—(CP).— Parliament to-day entered a long week-end adjournment and will get down to discussion of war issues next Tuesday afternoon with Conservative Leader Hanson leading off in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

The address was moved yesterday at a sitting less than two hours long when two young Liberal members warned that great personal sacrifices would be necessary if Canada were to exert maximm of war effort.

Brooke Claxton, young Montreal lawyer who defeated the veteran Conservative, Hon. C. H. Cahan, in St. Lawrence-St. George constituency last March, moved the address.

It was seconded by Rene Jutras, 27-year-old French-speaking mem-

OTTAWA, Nov. 9—(CP).—Distribution of the Memorial Cross to wives and mothers of men who lose their lives on active service will be automatic, it was learned today.

The Cross will be sent out by the Government as soon as a casualty is confirmed, without any application from the women. The Crosses are not available for distribution yet but orders have been placed with manufacturers and deliveries are expected soon.

The Cross is identical with the one issued after the first Great War. It is made of silver, and is suspended from a purple ribbon. Frank Collins Killed

Former Athlete Dies In Explosion

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 9 (CP)—Frank Collins, former Peterborough hockey star and baseball star, was killed today when an explosion occurred in a tank car he was filling at the Imperial Oil Company siding here.

He was alone at the time. There was no gasoline in the car as the pipe had not been turned in and there was no evidence of fire. The body was badly mangled.

Collins was a member of the Peterborough Senior O.H.A. squad that won the Senior O.H.A. title and he later went to Toronto to star with the National Sea Fleas. He played baseball with the Peterborough club in the Central Ontario Baseball League.

He has been a resident of Belleville for a year. He was single. Dr. J. J. Robertson, coroner, has ordered an inquest.

Harry Smith, employee of another oil firm on the adjoining property, witnessed the fatality and said Collins was thrown 100 feet from the car and he fell on an adjoining car and rolled to the ground. His clothes were ripped off his body and scattered over a radius of 200 feet.

Fuehrer Is Critical Of United States And Nation Production

MUNICH, Nov. 9.—(AP)— Nazis celebrated the 17th anniversary of their abortive beer hall putsch today in an atmosphere of seeming confidence whipped up by Hitler's assertion that Germany, "prepared for the future as never before," is "strong enough to meet any combination in the world."

Hitler spoke sarcastically of the United States as "the land of unlimited freedom," adding that "every immigrant must pass an unusually difficult examination before permission is given him to tread the sacred soil of democracy, although scarcely 10 persons to the square kilometre live there.

"As far as American production goes," he said with heavy sarcasm, "one cannot even represent it with astronomical figures.

Canadian Athlete Revives Two Children Thought Dead

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP).—Sub-Lt. Johnny Loaring of Windsor, Ont., outstanding Canadian athlete, was responsible for the reviving of two apparently lifeless children who had been passengers on a British liner torpedoed by a German submarine in mid-Atlantic last September, it was learned today.

Loaring enlisted in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve for special duty service last May after he completed his fourth year at University of Western Ontario at London. He said in a letter to his parents here that he was aboard a British destroyer when a message was received that the liner, carrying English war guests of Canada among its passengers, was sinking.

The destroyer located survivors who had been adrift in lifeboats 18 to 20 hours. Many were dead and dying of exposure. The number of survivors rescued gave the ship's doctor more than he could handle. Many suffered injuries besides exposure. Loaring, explaining he had taken up life-saving, volunteered to aid the physician. He was taken to five children, all apparently lifeless, with instructions to revive them if possible.

20 Nazis Downed

R.A.F. Losses Total 3 Pilots, 6 Aircraft

LONDON, Nov. 9 (CP)—German raids over the United Kingdom during the night today were reported to have caused less damage and casualties than on Thursday night and the raids, though strong at first, tapered off sharply after a short time and continued with reduced intensity some time after midnight.

The Nazi attacks, as usual, were concentrated mainly on London, where some casualties were reported. One bomb scored a direct hit on an air raid shelter.

The air ministry and ministry of home security reported: "Some persons were killed and injured and a number of buildings damaged, but both damage and casualties were less than on the previous night."

Wide areas of London shook with bomb explosions in the early hours of the raids and communities near the capital shared the attack. The raiders, operating singly for the most part, also were reported over other scattered sections.

Little Damage Done

The secondary raids, however, were described as "on a small scale" and "reports indicate that little damage and few casualties have been caused," the ministers' communique said.

It added that "one of our pilots reported as missing yesterday is now known to be safe. Our losses, therefore, were six aircraft and three pilots."

Against this loss the air ministry

Surrender Is Expected Italian Unit

Commanding General Of Famed Unit Is Already Captured

ATHENS, Nov. 9.—(AP).—An entire Italian division—perhaps 15,000 men—was reported in informed quarters to-day to have been trapped by Greece's defenders in the Pindus mountains and its capitulation was said to be only a matter of hours.

The troops were identified as Mussolini's famed Centaur division and it was said hundreds of the men, including the commanding general, had been taken prisoner.

Meanwhile, a new batch of 260 Italian prisoners arrived in Salonika. Thirty-one of these were Alpinists, with feathers in their caps. Troops of this type formerly were stationed on the French front.

Neutral observers took this as an indication that British and Greek naval action in the Adriatic was making it difficult for Italy to supply her Albanian troops.

There were consistent reports from Albania, even before the Fascist invasion of Greece, of a shortage of food there.

The Greek Red Cross received much-needed medical supplies when 19 trucks loaded with material arrived from the British Red Cross in Belgrade.

Buses, taxis and trucks for civilian use appeared on the streets for the first time today since transportation facilities were requisitioned at the start of the war.

A new decree called all officers 46 and 47 years of age for service and at the same time workers in several industries were assigned to making war materials. Those failing to report were subject to court martial.

An air alarm sounded in Salonika at 10.40 a.m. (4.40 a.m., EDT) today but no Italian planes were sighted over the city.

Industrial Targets In Italy Are Also Given Attention

LONDON, Nov. 9—(CP).—A stick of British bombs overshot its mark and hit the famous beer cellar where Hitler spoke at Munich last night and started a large fire, The Press Association said today.

The Air Ministry said Munich, as well as military objectives in Northern Italy, were raided.

Hit Beer Cellar

An Air Ministry announcement reported "military objectives" in the birthplace city of National Socialism were heavily attacked at the time Hitler was addressing a rally of the Nazi Old Guard, and the Press Association said one salvo of explosives missed the target and hit the beer cellar.

The British bombers flew more than 600 miles and reached Munich before 9 p.m. (4 p.m. E.D.T.), the Air Ministry said, and dropped bombs for more than an hour.

Railways, which run through the centre of the city, were particular objectives.

(The National Broadcasting Company in New York had been advised that Hitler would speak at the rally from 2:20 to 4 p.m. E.D.T. yesterday. The broadcast later was postponed to 4 p.m., then was cancelled).

The British planes were said to have arrived over Munich 14 minutes after Hitler was scheduled to begin speaking and to have remained more than an hour and a half dropping heavy calibre explosives.

Other Objectives

An aircraft factory at Turin and the Pirelli magneto works at Milan were said to have been bombed.

Targets in Germany and Nazi-occupied territory which the communique listed included oil refineries at Gelsenkirchen and Frankfurt, aircraft factories at Nuremberg and Amsterdam, freight yards at Hamm, Soest, Osnabruck, Duisberg, Rohrort, and the Hook of Holland, railway communications at Stuttgart, Mors, Saarbruecken, Mainz and Le Havre, and 18 German airdromes.

A German submarine base at Lorient on the Nazi-held coast also was reported bombed "with good results."

The Air Ministry announced the overnight attacks "on industrial targets in Italy and on communications and other objectives in Germany" after reports of alarms in Swiss cities gave the first hint that the R.A.F. might be striking across the Alps.

The London authority declared:

British Planes Bomb Turin

ROME, Nov. 9.—(AP).—The Italian High Command said to-day that British planes bombed Turin in Northern Italy and Cagliari in Sardinia last night.

(The Air Ministry in London already had announced raids were made on war industries in Northern Italy, but there was no immediate reference to Sardinia, Italian island possession which lies in the Mediterranean and immediately south of the French island of Corsica which Italy claimed before she entered the war but has not yet received.)

The High Command also asserted British aircraft bombed Tobruk and Derna in Libya.

(There was no immediate British confirmation that these places were raided.)

Outpost Doctor Wants To Return

OTTAWA, Nov. 9—(CP).—Dr. T. J. Orford of Markham has just returned from four years at the lonely outpost of Pangnirtung on Baffin Island, but already has has a hankering to get back to the Arctic.

The physician came south on furlough last month aboard the ice-breaker Nascopie, after serving since 1936 as medical officer at Pangnirtung for the Department of Mines and Resources.

Ordinarily his term shoud have ended in 1938, but 33-year-old Dr. Orford thinks "it's a good idea for a doctor to stay there longer."

"It takes time to win the confidence of the Eskimos," he says. "At first they're shy and almost distrustful, but after a while they regard the doctor as a sort of magician."

And once he's had a chance to study advances made by medical science in the past few years, he will be ready to go back. Officials in the Resources Department think his offer will be accepted.

American Freighter Hits Mine

First U. S. Boat Sunk By War Activity Since Outbreak

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 9.—(CP)—Naval Minister William Hughes announced today that the 5,883-ton United States freighter City of Rayville blew up and sank off Cape Otway, near Melbourne, last night, but said 37 members of the crew of 38 were saved.

Mr. Hughes said the sinking probably was caused by a mine.

(The City of Rayville was the first United States ship to be sunk by war activity since the outbreak of hostilities Sept. 3, 1939. The U.S. neutrality law bars American ships from belligerent ports but Australia has not been declared within the zone of conflict.)

Naval and fishing boats assisted in the rescue of the survivors, who were landed at a costal town. The missing man was identified as Third Engineer James Bryan, 22, of Norfolk, Va.

Second Ship In 24 Hours

Mr. Hghes previously had announced the sinking of an unidentified British freighter in Australian waters and said this also was due to mines. The Rayville thus was the second ship sunk within 24 hours. The Rayville's crew took to boats, which soon were sighted by fishing craft.

The explosion occurred while the American freighter was en route from Adelaide to Melbourne, about 10 miles off the coast, and the blast wrecked the forepart of the vessel and hurled wreckage and a portion of the lead cargo through the superstructure. The bridge was awash within five minutes.

Fragments of metal which fell into the Rayville's life boats after the explosion were turned over to mine experts for examination.

Saw Nothing Suspicious

Second Officer Green, who was on the bridge when the blast occurred, said:

"We saw nothing suspicious. After the explosion the ship dived by the head with incredible speed. There was no need to call the crew

US Maintains Labor Standards

Wages, Hours Of Work, Overtime Remain Unchanged

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(CP). — With roughly half the United States war material output pledged to Britain, the War Department today put down as a primary concern maintenance of wage and hour standards in its efforts to re-arm.

There must be no relaxation of these standards, the department declared, if the program is to move "effectively forward."

Referring directly to construction of thousands of army cantonments in preparation for expansion of the land forces, Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War, issued last night a declaration setting forth that general labor policy and calling for payment of overtime in factories where a longer than normal work week is necessary to production.

Get Half Output

The statement followed a series of defence developments which started with President Roosevelt's press conference disclosure that roughly half of the output of American war materials, including the latest type of big bombers, was being made available to Britain.

"If the sharing policy, which Mr. Roosevelt emphasized was but a rule-of-thumb standard, is applied strictly to current big bomber production, Britain may get about 40 of these formidable planes in the next few weeks. Authorities here believed that about 80 or more would be out of the factory by December.

In another development, the Priorities Board granted the British Purchasing Commission the right to buy 12,000 additional planes of various types in this country, bringing to 26,000 the number of military aircraft for which it has placed American orders.

Construction of these planes, the Board said, will be geared to production for United States forces "in such a way as to prevent interference with our own requirements." When delivery may be expected was

Jean Wood Wins Fraser Cup For Oratory

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 9—(ENS)—Two pupils from the same school were among the winners in the Township of Seymour oratorical finals held in the High School auditorium here on Friday evening, when a representative for the county finals was chosen. Chosen as winner of the first prize over 14 other contestants was Jean Wood of S.S. No. 3 Seymour, who was awarded the W. A. Fraser Cup presented to her by Mr. J. Kelly. Second and third place went to Glanna Brown of S.S. No. 10, who was awarded the Township of Seymour Cup by Deputy Reeve William Rowe; and Leita Kelly, another pupil of Mr. E. Maycock at S.S. 3 whom Mrs. Fred McCulloch presented the Women's Institute Cup. In addition to the three cups each contestant received two war savings stamps which School Inspector A. A. Martin of Brighton presented along with his congratulatory remarks, after announcing the judges' decision.

Each of the 15 contestants represented a prize winner from one of the school sections in the township and the complete list included Marilyn Forde, Fleming's School; Bill Curle, West's School; Anne Quinn, S.S. No. 3; Gordon Curle, West's School; Anne Hoey, S.S. No. 7; Marion Oddie S.S. 11; Marline Boudreau, S.S. 11, Burnbrae; Glenna Brown, S.S. 10, Trent River; Helen Hay, S.S. 10; Jean Wood, S.S. 3; Louis Waters, S.S. 12; Muriel Heagle, S.S. 7; Joyce Grills, S.S. 5; Leita Kelly, S.S. 3; Ruth Rich, S.S. 5.

Title of the winning speech by Jean Wood, "Two Beloved Britons," won the favor of Judges Lena Buchanan, Nellie Greenly, Beatrice Bragg, Donald Goodfellow, Helen McMullen, Grace Campbell and Dora Wilson, due partly to ease of delivery, clearness of enunciation, knowledge and preparation as well as composition. She began by saying, "Never before, perhaps, in the history of the British Empire has there been such an example of two people being so universally respected and loved by so many people in such a short time.

"As late as December, 1936, these two people were living a very quiet life, happy in each other's love and the love of their growing family. They were not given much publicity; not mentioned once to every hundred articles written about an older brother who had assumed an important position in his home land. But by mid-December, 1939, people began to talk about this family—to seek for some information about their lives, their characteristics and their actions. What was the reason for this? It was rumored that the older brother intended to marry very shortly and that the lady of his choice was not what the family and other friends had hoped he would choose for a wife. There were wild rumors that the man was determined to marry the woman he loved regardless of consequences. Events happened so quickly that before many knew, the older brother had gone away, leaving his shy younger brother to look after the affairs he had inherited from their kindly beloved father at his death.

"I said a few moments ago that I wanted to discuss their popularity in the light of recent events. Let us first consider the first few months of their reign. The hurried preparation for the Coronation which had been planned for Edward VIII. The many duties awaiting the new king in his new work—the retirement of Stanley Baldwin, the installation of Neville Chamberlain, the many troubles being caused in Europe by Hitler and his band of trouble-makers—all these occupied the attention of the new monarch during those first months.

"Then, who will forget the popularity and enthusiasm stirred up by the royal party's triumphant journey to the American continent in 1939, or the bond of friendship that already linked up Canada, the United States and Great Britain being cemented more firmly by the gracious manner of Their Majesties as they mixed with those of high and low estate. How often must the British authorities remember with grateful thanks in these last few war-torn months, that in no small measure did that royal visit help to join the two large English-speaking Empires in their present state of unity of purpose against lawlessness, banditry, murder, bloodshed and all the other atrocities with which we link the name of Adolf Hitler.

"And what of the King and Queen since the war began? Often it has been suggested that the Royal family go to Canada or some other haven of safety. But that is as far as the suggestion has ever gone. Hitler had hoped when he unleashed his air blitzkreig on London in late August, one of the first results would be removal of royalty and the government to some place of safety. But that is just one of the places where Hitler's plans have been going astray lately. Instead the King and Queen did not leave London. They travelled about each day to districts where the Hun bombs were doing the most damage. Here they brought cheer and comfort to the homeless.

"When Hitler and Goering saw what a boomerang their shelling of London had turned out to be, they ordered their aviators to bomb Buckingham Palace and the home of the Prime Minister. Surely this would drive those stubborn British out of their capital and pave the way for a quick and easy invasion. But here was boomerang number two. Doughty old Winston Churchill took a bite off a fresh cigar and shrugged in his most defiant manner and dared the Germans to try to invade England. The King and Queen continued to travel about bomb-scarred London in their usual comforting manner. No! Events were not going the way Hitler wanted them to go, and as George VI so aptly praised it the day war was declared, 'If the people of Briton put their trust in God as I place my trust in Him they will march on to the ultimate victory.'

"Yes, many circumstances are combining to point to the silver lining behind the war clouds over Briton; but certainly, one feature is the sterling example of leadership, devotion and bravery being shown each day under very trying conditions by our King and Queen. God Bless Them!"

Other items on the program during the evening included a piano duet by Jean Arnold and Bernice Wright; chorus by S.S. 5: Audrey Grills, Lorraine Grills, Helen Smith, Marilyn Haig, Ruth Haig, Joyce Grills, accompanied by Mr. Albert Hazel; chorus by S.S. 6; solo, Muriel Heagle, followed by a period of community singing led by Mr. Albert Hazel. Mr. E. Maycock and Mr. Arnold Bates.

City Teachers Meet In Convention

Democracy is not something to be taught so much as it is a way of life to be lived. This was the keynote of an address to the teachers at the annual teachers' convention. It was given by Margaret Green, the retiring president. Miss Green stressed the importance of democracy in education, and urged that teachers impress upon their charges the right "idea of democracy." Her term of office ends with the close of the session, and her address, it was agreed by all who heard it, was an excellent one.

The teachers were given a new insight by the speakers, and the consistent quality of the talks was spiced with what might truly be called modern ideals.

Rev. Dr. G. S. Easton of Trinity United Church, brought out the importance of right thinking in the child, and with a clever turn to the past, explained how easy it was for a person to acquire a new code of standards and values. Dr. Easton spoke of the sinking of the Titanic in 1912; the boat sank in four hours after striking an iceberg, and during the four hours, when the fate of the ship was apparent, the passengers underwent tremendous changes. One lady pleaded with those in charge to be allowed to go back to her cabin; when she returned, she had left all of her possessions, the ones usually thought of as being of value, and had in her hands three oranges.

Dr. Easton said that water and air are probably of most value in the physical world, but that there are values in the realm of character also, and the chief of these are honor and goodwill. He defined honor as being something that keeps us steady when others are not looking. Honor, however, is important only when accompanied by goodwill, and he said that "goodwill is the only contributing force in the world in building a new civilization," and that we must apply this principle to-day. It will save a world threatened with moral destruction. The speaker pointed to the opportunity that existed for each teacher to teach the boys and girls in Canada, and all over the world, to respect a true code of honor and goodwill.

Three Things Count.

R. F. Downey, Inspector of County Schools for Peterborough, spoke on "Making Better Citizens," and said that there are three factors of prime importance in the moulding of a better citizen; these are the teacher, the pupil, and the curriculum. The prime requisite for a teacher is personality, while effort is what counts on the part of the pupil, Mr. Downey said.

The importance of discipline was brought out forcefully, and the speaker advocated controlled freedom for the pupil. The teacher should impose certain reasonable restrictions if the pupil is expected to become a responsible citizen. Mr. Downey said that every child was born a citizen, but it is the task of the teacher to make him a better one.

L. J. Pettit of the staff of the Collegiate Institute, spoke on "Social Studies." He said he favors the encouragement of outside reading for the student, and pointed to the importance of this practice in the study of the world socially. The modern term "Social Studies" really is a combination of history, geography, and civics, the speaker said. He explained that advantage may be taken of the present trend of world affairs, in the classroom, and added that one of his classes was busy with the study of Greece at the time of the Italian invasion. The class, as a whole, were favored by this situation, and the results of their study at this time were perhaps more than usually pronounced.

Dr. J. A. Bannister, principal of the Peterborough Normal School, addressed the convention on the "Teaching of English." He said that "the love of good reading has been placed as a primary aim in English." There are many forms of English, and the present trend is toward the supplementary type of reading, and as leisure time has been increased, so has reading. The speaker urged the teachers to train students in utilising leisure time in the reading of good literature, and advocated good libraries for classrooms. Teachers should have a complete knowledge of these books and their contents, he said, and should display a sympathetic interest in what the pupil is reading.

New Musical Course.

Miss M. Cox, the supervisor of music in Peterborough Public Schools, outlined the new course of musical study to be embarked upon by the staffs of the schools. This system, Miss Cox explained, is the same as the one now in use in the Toronto schools, and is an extensive one, and has taken six years to develop. It has been tested, and its value has been undeniably established. It was given a trial in ten classes. The system includes different courses for the various grades.

The Inspector of Public Schools in Peterborough, K. S. Wightman, reported to the convention, handing down from the Provincial Department of Education, suggestions to the teachers. The Department has suggested school magazines, and has strongly advised that the teachers cultivate the desire on the part of the students to save money by buying War Savings Stamps regularly. The Department also suggested that the teachers observe Navy Week in the classrooms.

Alex Sollitt, Peterborough representative for the War Savings campaign, told of the many advantages of the program, and asked for the fullest co-operation on the part of the teaching body in Peterborough. Mr. Sollitt explained the different phases through which the campaign has passed, and outlined the plans for the future of the movement.

A delightful group of songs was sung by Isobel Weddell and another group by Margaret Westbye. Mrs. Wilson Craw accompanied both vocalists at the piano. The Grade Six choir of Prince of Wales School conducted by Miss E. M. Richardson, performed in a medley.

The meetings were held at Prince of Wales School on Thursday and on Friday morning. On Friday afternoon the session was held in the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School. Thursday morning was devoted to general business, and on Thursday afternoon the teachers convened in groups; each group represented its grade, and the problems immediate to the classroom were studied and discussed.

The officers chosen for the period 1940-1941 are as follows: F. H. Dearborn, president; Miss F. D. Walker, vice-president; and Clara G. Adams, secretary-treasurer.

Meanwhile an effort to aid Britain along financial lines was started at the Capitol by Senator William King (Dem-Utah) who introduced a bill to permit the United Kingdom to buy American farm products on credit, by modifying the Johnson Act which prohibits loans or credits to a nation in default of its first Great War debts.

In the labor policy statement the war department said that "the overwhelming mass of American workers are intensely patriotic and want to help defend their country."

"They want to cooperate and they are cooperating," the statement continued. "But cooperation works both ways. Labor standards as to wages, hours of work and overtime, among others, must be maintained if the defence program is to go effectively forward."

It was stressed, however, that the basic 40-hour work week schedule would not be allowed to obstruct production of essential war materials, since a longer week may be worked when necessary if overtime rates are paid. All arsenals and any airplane factories already are running at the six days a week and three eight-hour shifts a day with payment of time and one-half for overtime.

Church Supper Concludes Big Anniversary

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 9.—(ENS).—Bringing to a conclusion the celebration which marked the seventy-fifth anniversary of St. John's church here members gathered on Wednesday evening for a congregational supper and program which was enthusiastically attended. Though anniversaries are an annual event this year's was of special significance to St. John's in that it represented a lapse of three quarters of a century since the founding of the Methodist church in this town and the occasion was appropriately marked by the special services on Sunday when Rev. George A. Brown, M.A., B.D., D.D., of Chalmers church, Kingston, was the guest speaker for both morning and evening services.

Dr. Brown, who was a former pastor of St. Andrew's church here some twenty-three years ago, was welcomed by large congregations which attended both Sunday services for which special music was arranged by the organist and choirmaster, Chas. A. Howey, A.T.C.M., who enlisted the services of several local soloists, including Mrs. A. G. Watson, Miss Jean Tubbs, Sgt. Castle and G. W. Lucy. Anthems by the choir included "Rejoice Ye With Jerusalem" with Mrs. Harold Twigg as soloist and "O Light Eternal."

Close to three hundred attended the supper for which a splendid program was arranged by the committee in charge. Marking the anniversary was a huge birthday cake complete with 75 candles to which the honour of lighting went to Dr. H. O. Richardson one of the senior members of the board and for many years a member also of the choir. For the benefit of many to whom the story was new Mrs. George Hammond read a complete history of the church since its founding, giving many of the highlights of the struggles and sacrifices made by early members and telling also of the founding of the various organizations which now form such an important part in the life of the church.

Rev. G. N. Maxwell the present incumbent was chairman of the evening and he was joined on the platform by several members of the local ministry, including Rev. B. Simpson Black and Dr. C. S. Reddick and as well as Rev. Harold B. Neal of Renfrew, who preceded him as pastor. During the evening a number of congratulatory telegrams were read from Mrs. George Copeland, Toronto; Mrs. A. J. Strike, Bowmanville; Rev. A. R. Sanderson, Whitby; Mrs. Wesley Elliott, Port Perry; Flight Lieutenant Ernest Harston, R.C.A.F., Camp Borden; Rev. R. C. Tait, Chesterville;; Rev. C. F. MacIntosh, B.A., B.D., of Windsor.

At the conclusion of the supper Mr. George Lucy led in community singing for which Mrs. Chas. Howey provided the accompaniment and following this the program got under way with a piano duet by Messrs. Arnold Bates and Donald Bennett. A quintette comprising June Burgiss, Monica DeCarroll, Helen Richardson and D. Davey gave a group of three selections after which Rev. B. Simpson Black brought greetings from St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Adjutant Graham of the local Salvation Army Corps contributed a cornet solo and a quartette consisting of Dr. H. O. Richardson, Messrs. G. W. Lucy, H. M. Donald and H. Twigg continued with two selections.

Other items included a violin solo by Bruce Elmhirst and a few words of greeting from Rev. Harold B. Neal and Dr. C. S. Reddick. The evening concluded with the National Anthem and Benediction by Rev. Neal.

Dominion-Wide Unity For W.A.T.S. Now Sought By Corps Organizers

Travelling across Canada to seek to bring together on a co-operative basis all the women's auxiliary training services that have been springing up so fast since the outbreak of war, Mrs. M. R. Kennedy of Victoria, B.C., was in Peterborough this week for an executive meeting of the Peterborough Service Corps, held at the home of the Chief Commandant, Miss Florence Mitchell. Mrs. Kennedy, who was on her way to Ottawa, may return via Peterborough to address the regular meeting of the corps. She congratulated the executive on the progress of the corps in spite of the lack of proper quarters, and volunteered helpful suggestions and information. Mrs. Nation, commandant of one of the large corps in Vancouver, is travelling with Mrs. Kennedy.

One of the ten women who brought into being the first such training corps, the British Columbia Women's Service Force, a year before the outbreak of war, Mrs. Kennedy has won the co-operation of the Canadian Auxiliary Territorial Service for her plan. The British Columbia Force had 1,000 members when war came, training along the lines of the A.T.S. of Great Britain. Since then it has affiliated with the Canadian Women's Service Corps of Nova Scotia, the Alberta Women's Service Force, and the Peterborough Women's Service Corps.

Since Mrs. Kennedy, the B.C.'s chief, started out on a tour of Canada, she has won the co-operation also of the Winnipeg corps, headed by Mrs. Gloria Queen-Hughes, and the Montreal Volunteer Reserve Corps, headed by Major Sophie Elliott.

Mrs. Kennedy is young, slight, and has little use for rifle-tooting by women, adoption of military titles, or swanky uniforms. "Rifles are entirely unnecessary," she said. "We can drill smartly without them, and just as thoroughly. We are not the first line of defence. We're the second line of home defence, and our weapons are typewriters, kitchen and driving ability. I don't think it is a bit romantic, but I think it is something in which women can be exceedingly useful." The B.C. force members have been trained by officers from the permanent military authorities since the first, and 300 members have been used by the military authorities for the last three or four months in offices and other duties.

"What we want is amalgamation of policy," Mrs. Kennedy said. "If the women of Canada unite, perhaps qualified personnel will come when the government needs it. We all want to be of service, we all want government recognition, and from these trained corps of women there must be a respect for discipline and some ability that will be of value.

The B.C., Alberta, Nova Scotia and Peterborough defence forces, now all one organization, form the largest body of any in Canada, and their training is very much alike. The three others were patterned after the B.C. corps. The training includes army clerical work, divisional signalling, mechanized transport, map reading, first aid, home nursing, commissariat, A.R.P., and anti-gas drill.

Uniforms worn by B.C. corps members are a navy skirt, navy sweater and cardigan, and navy beret with the maple leaf insignia of the force on the side. Officers' uniforms are the same as members, except a jacket replaces the cardigan. Officers, who are called company commanders or departmental company commander, are addressed as "Miss" or "Mrs." without any frills of captains, majors or colonels. Members of the Peterborough Corps are not yet in uniform, although it is expected some form of uniform will later be acquired.

MONTREAL, Nov. 9 — (CP). — Release of preliminary storage figures covering Canada's nine principal cities brought a temporary advance in butter prices on the Canadian Commodity Exchange early this week, but demand slowed as the week progressed and spot closed with a gain of a quarter cent, while futures ended a quarter to three-eighths of a cent higher. The tobacco heiress said she would stay in her Honolulu home indefinitely.

Asked for comment about her husband's defeat for United States Senator in last Tuesday's election in New Jersey she said: "It's a great pity, for he worked so hard."

The O'Mally statement, made in an interview with the foreign minister, was not a formal protest requiring a formal answer, officials said, but demonstrated that the British government was cognizant of Nazi military activities" inside neutral Hungary."

ROME, Nov. 9 (AP)—The Rome newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia asserted today that a "tremendous air bombardment of England and its allies" will be launched as an immediate reprisal for the "killing of civilians" in British air raids on Italy.

"The Italian air reprisal on the positions of the English and their allies (which include Greece) will be quickest and really formidable."

Il Lavoro Fascista said "English and pro-English peoples including Greeks and Levantines" were among those upon whom the reprisals would be made.

Jesus Appoints the Twelve Men Who Will Assist Him

(ARMISTICE SUNDAY)

(By NEWMAN CAMPBELL.)

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for November 10 is Luke 6, the Golden Text being Luke 6, 31: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.")

The Sixth Chapter of St. Luke, which is the lesson for to-day, is a beautiful recital of Jesus' life on earth and His teachings. We see Him walking with His disciples, choosing the men who are to carry His message to the people after He is gone, healing the sick, teaching the multitudes, and answering the hypocritical leaders of the established church to whom observance of the letter of the law and custom were the real religion—not attitude of mind and Christian actions.

Walking through the wheat fields with His disciples on a Sabbath day, talking with them, certain of the Pharisees, always hoping to catch Him in some indiscretion by which they could arrest and bring Him before the authorities, called His attention to the fact that His companions were picking wheat or barley, rubbing them between their hands and eating the kernels. The Bible says they were picking the "corn," but corn as we know it in America was unknown in Jesus' day, and other cereals were then called corn. The Pharisees said this act was unlawful on the Sabbath. Rules for the observance of this day were very strict, you remember. But Jesus answered them that David, the very pillar of the church, when he and his followers were hungry, had gone so far as to eat the shew-bread from the temple, which was supposed to be eaten only by the priests. This quieted the Pharisees for the time.

Heals Withered Arm.

On another occasion, however, Jesus went to the synagogue on a Sabbath and taught. A man with a withered right arm came to Him to be healed, and the Pharisees watched to see what the Lord would do. Reading their thoughts, Jesus told the man to stand up in their midst, then He said to the Pharisees: "I will ask you one thing. Is it lawful on the Sabbath days to do good or to do evil? To save life or to destroy it?"

To the man He said, "Stretch forth thy hand." He did so, and it was made whole. It infuriated these priests to be so baffled by the man they refused to recognize as the Messiah. They were "maddened," the Bible says, and "communed with one another what they might do to Jesus."

After a night of prayer in the mountain, Jesus chose His twelve apostles, Simon, whom He also called Peter, and Andrew, his brother, James and John, Phillip and Bartholomew, Matthew and Thomas, James and Simon, Judas, brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, afterward the traitor.

With these men He came down to the plains and the multitude gathered close around Him, trying to touch the hem of His garment, for "went virture out of Him," and just to touch His garments healed them of their ills.

"And he lifted up His eyes on His disciples, and said, "Blessed be ye poor, for yours is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye that hunger now, for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now, for ye shall laugh," and so on to the end of the chapter.

Some are inclined to think that this is the same as the Sermon on the Mount, of Matthew 5 and 7, and others call this the Sermon on the Plains in distinction to the Sermon on the Mount. They are very similar in content, only differently worded, as might very well be when two different men repeat them at different times. For us laymen it is better not to argue about the matter, but to cherish in our hearts the precepts of our Saviour, and try to live acording to them.

Would End Troubles.

Do you realize that all the troubles of this very unhappy world would be over if men lived life as Christ asked? If, instead of hating our enemies, we tried to understand their difficulties, and to help them, if we prayed for them instead of cursing them?

"Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

"Judge not, and ye shall not be judged, condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned, forgive and ye shall be forgiven."

Hating the deeds of wickedness, but not hating the doers thereof. Isn't that one of the hardest things to do? Jesus' parable helps us to see how hating hinders us from helping. "Can the blind lead the blind? Shall they not both fall in the ditch?

"And why beholdest thou the mote in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thin own eye?...."first cast the beam out of thine own eye, and then shall thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye."

Let each one of us take the Golden Text as our rule of life and try to live up to it. "As ye would that men should do to you, do also to them likewise."

Jesus appoints the twelve

"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Luke 6:31.

Christ's Custom Was To Go To Synagogue On Sabbath

(By REV. E. R. JAMES)

JESUS came up to Nazareth, where He had been brought up; and as His custom was He went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day. St. Luke 4:16.

What a debt we owe to St. Luke, the good physician. He alone gives us this helpful word picture of Our Lord's return to His boyhood home. He is a real Man and is naturally attracted to His native village. Very probably He is visiting His Mother; sitting in His old place at meal time and sleeping in the same chamber. It is "the place where He had been brought up."

Do you remember the place where you had been brought up? The story is full of human interest. It is the Sabath day. With His Mother and a few disciples He attends the village synagogue; the place of worship which gripped the minds of devout Jews and kept them from straying from the faith of their fathers.

Then the scene in the synagogue. He is now a Prophet, a man sent from God. His name is upon the lips of multitudes. It was the custom when distinguished visitors attended the synagogue for the President to send an invitation to read the Scriptures and to give any message. We have the very words of the invitation: "Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people say on." Acts 12:15.

"As His custom was He went into the syngague on the Sabbath day." It is the Jewis Sabbath, beginning about six o'clock Friday evening and ending about the same time Saturday. He attends the Saturady morning worship. When you visited your boyhood home did you go to church that first Sunday morning? Did you desire to sit in the family pew and give thanks to God for all His mercies? The writer has a most vivid recollection of his disappointment in finding his parish church closed on the week day—the only day he was able to visit "the place where he had been brought up."

"He stood up to read." What a light this throws on the Jewish system of education for every boy no matter how poor. In this synagogue He learnt to read as a boy. When He became "a Son of the Law' he took His place among the men. It would be His privilege, as a promising young Man, to read the Scriptures in the ears of the people. How proud His Mother must have been. Now he is Prophet, a Man sent from God to reveal the mind of God to His people. He reads in the ears of the people the famous "Servant" passage from the prophet Isaiah, which puts the ministry of the Messiah, the Christ, in its most appealing aspect. There is a hush as He reads with deep emotion the passage which reveals the work of the Messiah, the Anointed of God. He Himself had made the great discovery at His baptism in the river Jordan that He is indeed the Messiah. So you will understand how "the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on Him." They had never heard such reading for He is reading about Himself "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me because He hath anointed Me to preach the Gospel to the poor." Then He, the Carpenter of Nazareth, makes the tremendous claim that this Scripture is fulfilled in Him. He reveals that the Christ is to be a "Servant" primarily. "Ye call Me Lord and Master and ye say well! for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet ye also ought to wash one another's feet.—St. John 13:13.

Helpfulness and service are the outstanding teaching of this passage. Then He poured out His soul in burning word. The people marvel "at the gracious words which proceeded out of His Mouth. Perhaps these are the very words His Mother used when telling the story later to St. Luke. Yet His gracious words fell on hard hearts. It was His duty and privilege as a Prophet to reveal to His people the mind of God—that the spiritual privileges given to the Jewish people were a trust for the benefit of the whole world.

This was very bitter teaching. A few Jewish spirits realized it. They were in the great minority. Quietly and courageously He develops the subject that Jehovah thinks of the people outside Israel. They cast Him out of the synagogue and would have killed Him if they could. It is an everlasting message that God's spiritual blessings are not for an individual nation only but for all the people.

God hath made of one blood all the nations of the earth.

UnionMissionary Conference To Be Held In George Street

A United Missionary Conference will be held in George Street church on Monday, November 18th at 4.30 p.m. There will be a supper meeting at 6.30 p.m. and a public meeting at 8 p.m.

In this conference all the United Church congregations in Peterborough county will take part, as it is organized by the Peterborough Presbytery.

Two of the most dynamic and outstanding missionary advocates of the United Church will take part in these meetings, Robert Baird McClure, M.B., F.R.C.S. (Edinburgh) about whom readers of the Examiner will receive full particulars next week, and Rev. Lester Burry, B.A. of Labrador.

Rev. W. B. Craw of Brantford writes words of appreciation of their visit to that city as follows:

"Just a word to thank you for your generosity in alloting Dr. McClure and Mr. Burry to our Lone Rally. We had fine meetings and they gave us a very great service. Both of them are outstanding in their own lives and we appreciated their visit to the full. I think it is a fine idea to have Mr. Burry come from Labrador in person, and reenthuse the church concerning his work there."

Tickets for the supper meeting have been distributed to key workers in the various congregations, and members are urged to procure them as soon as possible so that the ladies of George Street Church may know the number for which they are to cater.

Memory Hold the Door Is Book Now In Much Demand

One of the most widely read books in Canada at present is John Buchan's "Memory Hold the Door". There is a long waiting list of readers waiting for it in almost every public library, and one sees copies all around this city of Peterborough.

It is not an autobiography or a confession of Faith, though in a sense it is both of these in one. It is however rather a tale of impressions received during a strenuous, and outstanding life.

He tells of the impressions made by the quiet fields and woods of Fifeshire, and the hills of Tweedside and the Border Counties of Peebles, Lanark and Edinburgh. These early impressions never left him at any time through his life.

In the later chapters he tells of his experiences in the South African War and the Great War, and just a little of his life in Canada.

During his life Lord Tweedsmuir met most of the great men and women of Britain, and he gives acute and searching appreciations of their strong points, and their limitations.

Though not meant to be a religious book there is religion in almost every page, profound chapters on the Religion of Humanity; his account of his father's ministry; his closing pages on the value of religion to the world. It is a book eminently suitable for Remembrance Day. It will be reviewed in St. Andrew's Church on next Sunday night.

W. Rosborough Heads Y.P.S.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 9—(ENS).—Miss Winnifred Rosborough was re-elected president of the Young People's Society of the Lakefield Baptist Church at the first meeting held in the Sunday School Room on Tuesday evening. She opened the meeting with a hymn, followed by prayer offered by Mrs. M. Harvey and Scripture lesson read in unison. It was decided to have the meetings in the homes on Wednesday evenings.

Other members elected to office were: Vice-president, Miss Elva Sweeting; secretary, Miss Phyllis Darling; treasurer, Miss Doris Hart; organist, Alex. Nicholls; assistant, Mabel Hopkins; offering, Melville Nicholls.

Contests and the serving of lunch concluded the evening's program.

Hiawatha

The Hiawatha congregation appreciates the splendid service given in the church on Sunday evening by the Coldsprings Young People's Society.

Walter Loucks returned to Hiawatha last week from Beaverton, where he has spent the summer.

William Musgrave is confined to his bed with a severe cold.

A Remembrance Day service will be held in the church on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, standard time. Rev. Captain Fairful, Cobourg, will be the guest speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bigwin, Alderville, visited friends here on Sunday.

Percy Mathers and family, Keene, visited Mr. and Mrs. Russell Thompson.

Rev. G. Muray, Keene, preached at Hiawatha on Sunday evening. At the close of the service five members of the congregation were appointed on the Official Board. They are as follows: Russell Thompson, Chief George Paudash, Robert Cowie, Mrs. E. Loukes, and Mrs. D. Musgrave.

George Paudash and Clarence Hines of Kingston were home on leave over the week-end.

Alf. Crowe and Mr. and Mrs. C. Hines visited friends in Omemee on Sunday.

Fatally Burned

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 9—(CP).—Sadie Marie Herberts, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Herberts of Port Colborne, died in Welland County Hospital last night, the result of burns suffered Wednesday morning. A can containing gasoline which the girl was about to pour on a slow fire in the kitchen range in her home exploded and sprayed her with the flaming liquid.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon. She is survived by her parents, five sisters and one brother.

The Golden Rule (Armistice Sunday) ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 6.

On a Sabbath day, Jesus and His disciples went through a field of grain and the disciples picked the grain and, rubbing it in their hands, they ate the kernels.

Certain Pharisees came to Him and asked Him why he did that which was unlawful on the Sabbath, but Jesus told them that David, hungry, ate the shew bread in the temple.

Another Sabbath Jesus, teaching in the synagogue, healed a man's withered hand. The Pharisees again rebuked Him. "Is it lawful on the Sabbath to do good or evil?" Jesus asked them

Jesus stood in the plain surrounded by the multitude who sought to touch Him because "virtue went out of Him," and He taught them the Beatitudes. (GOLDEN TEXT—Luke 6:31)

A Ticklish Question

There are 1,700 citizens of United States residing in England (a few in Scotland). They have been connected with United States business concerns operating offices in England and elsewhere. Business has been so reduced for them through war conditions and bombing that they have decided to go home.

Application was made by Washington for safe passage for the liner Manhattan which would make the trip to carry them. Italy is reported to have had no objections, but said little, leaving the matter in the hands of Germany.

Germany's answer amounted to a flat refusal to consider the proposal. Right now Germany is conducting the most intensive U-boat campaign since the war started, and would give no assurance that the American liner could cross in safety.

The American exodus cannot be cared for in British ships as all available space for the next six months is booked. The only other route is by plane to Lisbon and that service is now much curtailed.

That raises what may be a mighty pertinent question. United States is not at war, and it has the right to operate a boat—or boats—to move its nationals from a war zone or elsewhere. In fact it is the duty of a government to exercise care of its own nationals wherever they may be placed. It is stated in despatches from London that Americans in England expect their government to see to it that they are granted safe transport to a home port.

There is speculation of course as to what the Germans have in mind by refusing the request of United States. Is it their intention to sink any and every ship regardless of its origin or cargo? That has been their plan and apparently they do not intend to depart from it. If that is the case the question comes fairly before Washington as a challenge from Germany because refusal to grant safe passage to the Manhattan is the equivalent of saying the vessel will be regarded as a target.

The incident shows clearly how close the war is drawing to United States. Washington asked for something which according to international law and practice it had a right to ask, and it had a right to anticipate a favorable reply. But Germany said no. It said United States nationals (subjects) could not be transported to their home land with any assurance that no attack would come from German vessels.

There will be no desire on the part of Britain to see the question pressed to a decision which would involve Washington in a decisive struggle with Berlin. Britain does not want United States in the war; it prefers to have its people busy at home turning out the implements of war for the British forces. President Roosevelt, before he gets started on his third term, has a difficult question dropped square on his doorstep.

It's More Serious Now

Apparently it is not possible to have a war effort in which all the people are united. There are some who have their minds turned in other directions and they are not concerned about the war. It is something about which other people can worry.

Malcolm McCutcheon of Brampton was going about his business in Toronto. At two in the afternoon on a street which was well filled with people, he stepped into his car, and at the same time another man slid in the seat beside him, revolver in hand. Another accomplice took the driver's seat, and a third was added in short order. They drove well out from the city and then tied the car owner up in the back seat after which they proceeded to rob a New Toronto drug store of $800. That amount of money was on the premises because the owner of the store cashed a number of pay cheques for men working at a factory not far away.

When the mugs were through using the car they left it with the owner and walked away with their $800. Perhaps there would be no sound justice in the claim that an act of violence and of robbing while armed is a greater offence in time of war than in time of peace. But we believe it is.

With young men all over the Dominion putting on the uniform and accepting army pay lower than that which they have been receiving, we can't sit still and think of armed robbery as we did when things were supposed to be normal. Those crack pots running around with guns in their pockets will eventually take the time and services of a whole group of people taking up their chase, and the country is not in the mood to develop any soft spots when it comes to measuring out terms for them.

Should Go Farther

An Order-in-Council passed at Ottawa is aimed at putting a stop to workers in war industry leaving one plant to go to another. In the future "persons, firms, corporations or their agents, when advertising, when writing, or otherwise appealing to the public are required to state that applications for employment will not be considered from those employed in the production of munitions, war equipment or supplies for the armed forces. The order also prohibits verbal solicitation of any person engaged in the manufacture of munitions, war equipment or supplies." There is a fine of $500 for firms guilty of enticing workers away from other firms engaged in war-time production.

Added to that is the explanation which says: "The Order-in-Council expressly provides that the measure is not intended to limit the individual rights of the workers." That, we believe, is going to require some explanation. If a firm advertises now that it has openings for tool makers for instance, it must state it will not receive an application from a tool maker who is engaged in another place where war orders are being processed. Even if the wages offered are higher the mechanic from the other plant cannot receive employment. If it does not mean that, then what does it mean? And if that is the way it works then it is limiting the individual rights of the workers.

It would have been better to make the frank statement that there is need for discipline, and that the production of war orders has to be placed ahead of all other considerations. If the Government is going to control the situation then it should also have a hand in regulating the wages which are being paid. If the old idea of a man being able to better his position financially by making a change is going to be discarded then we believe it should be accompanied by action which will make it certain he is not penalized.

So That's The Situation?

James H. R. Cromwell was for a few months United States Minister to Canada, and he was in this country during the time when public opinion regarding the war was not as definitely fixed as it is today. When Cromwell was in our land most of the people in United States believed it was just another European war in which their country was not going to participate, and in which they were not much interested.

Cromwell made an address in Toronto saying that the then Allies (Britain and France) must win the war, and officials in Washington told him he would be well advised to keep quiet. He was just a few months ahead of his time. What he said in his Canadian address is the accepted view in the States today.

Cromwell left Ottawa because he wanted to participate in politics at home. He ran as Democratic candidate for the Senate, but he failed. The latest announcement is that he is estranged from his wife, the former Doris Duke, who has been referred to more often than necessary as the richest woman in the world. Mr. Cromwell says he has not seen her since June 4, and that is more than five months. She wasn't around when he was running for office; if there could have been anything in the cheer and assistance which a man might derive from his wife's company and help—well, Cromwell had to do without it.

People in this country knew him only a short time, but they liked him. Now it has come out in the open that he is stricken with the plague which affects his country to an alarming extent—he is estranged from his wife; hasn't seen her for five months. Which causes one to wonder with what actual degree of enthusiasm she welcomed the task of coming to Canada as the wife of the U.S. Minister at Ottawa?

The Idea Is Spreading

Whether Canadians wish to continue the discussion or not, it is hardly possible that they can entirely evade the question of future relationships with United States. The "Union Now" idea is spreading, and a branch is being organized in Toronto.

The origin of the movement was in a book, "Union Now," written by Clarence K. Streit, a member of the staff of the New York Times, who had sufficient European background as a working journalist to enable him to read plainly the signs as he saw them written in European capitals.

His book was published before the war. It is correct to say Mr. Streit saw it coming, and as a preventive and defensive measure he advocated a union of the British Empire, United States, France, the Scandinavian and the Low Countries.

Mr. Streit did not want an alliance because he traced the history of alliances and found them to be things which would break under pressure. His aim was an out-and-out union; one postal system, one currency, a common citizenship—a union of the free so they might be kept free.

Before the collapse of France Prime Minister Churchill made an offer of union with the British Empire to that hard-pressed and badly betrayed country, but the offer was refused. France apparently thought that as she had gone down it would not be long before Britain would do the same thing. The fact that the offer was made to France as an emergency measure does not mean that it was to meet an emergency and nothing else. Our belief is that Churchill meant just what he said when he suggested union, and it would have been on a permanent basis. The British Prime Minister would probably hold the same view regarding union with United States.

It is passing strange that the movement should have had its origin in United States, and that it is not just a passing fancy is shown by the extent of the organization backing it which now has a membership of 2,000,000.

A few years ago any one making such a proposal would have been laughed out of court or looked upon with suspicion as being somewhat of a cross between an idle dreamer or a parlor traitor. He never would have received a fair and impartial hearing.

Today it is different. There is something in that phrase about "A Union of the Free" which challenges popular imagination. There is also that well-grounded belief that if the dictators are going into the business of shoving democracy into the sea then the one course left is for the democracies to pool their resources and their efforts to retain their freedom. Canadians did not raise the issue, but it is here now and we can't ignore it. It may call some day for a great decision. If by that path we can find peace and security then it is our belief that Canadians will gladly walk in that direction.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Those mail order catalogues are bright and interesting, but they never build anything locally.

Triplets born in New York on election day were named Wendy, Louise and Willkie, which leads us to suspect the parents are Republicans.

Italians have announced they are taking part in the bombing of London. If that is not an open invitation for the bombing of Rome, then we do not know what it means.

In three months the air and naval services of Canada purchased 4,256,000 gallons of gasoline. We mention that so the timid soul who feels rather flush when he buys five gallons may have an idea of what is going on around us.

Two German civilian prisoners escaped from a camp in the West, after which they were caught and given two years in penitentiary. A German prisoner of war could receive no more than 28 days' close confinement for that offence.

Halifax report says the Defence Department offered $150,000 for the provincial exhibition grounds, and the offer was refused. If the grounds are needed for war purposes what reason can be advanced for refusal?

JUST ONE FAULT

¶ My neighbor said that he grew tired at trying to keep his furnace fired, our system is no good; the bill he paid for coal was great, at it he fired his words of hate, said things that no man should.

¶ He's quite a tinker in his way, and monkies with it every day, a thinking sort of man; he sketched upon some papers then, and rather liked the looks of them, he found he had a plan.

¶ I mind quite well away last spring, he tried to tell me of the thing, and all that he had planned; it was too intricate for me, for there were things I could not see, nor could I understand.

¶ But in between he's worked away, add some new gadget every day, at last the thing was done; 'twould save him many scads he said, and keep him from going in the red, when colder days had come.

¶ He had a belt to feed the coal, and it popped in some tiny hole, a little at a time; he thought he had the thing just right, and found in this his chief delight, that it would save this spine.

¶ He called me in to view his scheme, the strangest thing I've ever seen, a dozen wheels would turn; I marvelled as it went along, and only one thing has gone wrong—the furnace will not burn.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

FROM time to time, in the gloomy and disappointing procession of mediocrities which is mankind, there lives a man whose life is, in its own way, perfect. Such a man was Edward John Trelawny, the friend of Shelley and Byron. Trelawny might serve as the very type of the Man of Action; aristocratic by birth and by nature, proud, resolute and ruthless, and yet blessed with an ability to appreciate a soul as unlike his own as that of Shelley, Trelawny is a man who compelled admiration in his own time and has become a legend since his death. For some time we have been content with his own account of his life, as contained in his books "The Adventures of a Younger Son," "Recollections of the Last Days of Shelley and Byron," and "Records of Shelley, Byron, and the Author." Some time ago H. J. Massingham published a memoir of Trelawny called "The Friend of Shelley" and now Miss Margaret Armstrong has written "Trelawny," an immensely popular book recently put out by Macmillans.

C & B

In a way Miss Armstrong has set herself an impossible task. No one can tell Trelawny's story better than himself. His vigorous prose and the sense of immediacy which he gives to his accounts of his adventures cannot be bettered. The best written parts of her book are those in which she quotes from her hero's own works. Miss Armstrong has nothing original to say about Trelawny; she does not pretend to make a psychological study of him, for which we may thank her, for any such attempt would be doomed to failure before it was begun. Nevertheless her book is an important and valuable addition to the Trelawny bibliography. Why is this so?

C & B

Miss Armstrong's book is valuable because it popularizes Trelawny. Until the present his own works have been available only in forbidding reprints of "English Classics," printed in small type and presenting a thoroughly unappetizing appearance. No one ever reads them except scholars or others who have a particular interest in the Romantic Period of our literature. The average university student who makes a special study of English does not read the books and may not even have heard of them. As far as the public, even the cultivated public, goes, Trelawny is unknown. Now Miss Armstrong has given us a book which anyone can read with pleasure about one of the most remarkable men of the last century. Scholars may regret popularization of this kind, but it is for the greatest good of the greatest number, and when done as successfully as this we have nothing but praise for it.

C & B

TRELAWNY'S earliest career was that of a pirate; he called himself a privateer, but like most of those sailing under that name some of his acts were simple piracy. He deserted from the British Navy, after having half-killed one of his superior officers, rescued and married the daughter of an Arab sheik, and became a sheik himself. Before he was twenty-five he had crammed more adventure into his life than any six ordinary men achieve in the full span of seventy years. His second career was made in Italy, where he was the intimate friend, and to some extent the confidant, of Percy Bysshe Shelley. It was Trelawny who found Shelley's body after the wreck of the "Ariel," and cremated it on the sands near Leghorn. The last phase of Trelawny's life of adventure was his expedition to Greece, with Byron, to assist in the freeing of that country from the domination of the Turks. Here too he had his fill of excitement, saw Byron die ingloriously at Missolonghi of fever, and returned to England to spend the rest of his life in recollection. He died in 1881 at the age of 89.

C & B

In her book Miss Armstrong has been guided almost entirely by Trelawny's personal prejudices; rarely is she critical of his judgments on people. Consequently Shelley appears in the story as a white-winged angel, which he certainly was not. Byron is shown as parsimonious, hard-hearted, and tawdry, which is only half the picture. Shelley's cruelty to his mistress, Mary Godwin, was the cruelty of the man who feigns impracticality in order to get his own way; his was the hypocritical tyranny of "innocence." Byron, in spite of his many faults, had his excellent qualities; he was continually torn between the pose of Don Juan and that of Childe Harold. But Trelawny saw Shelley as all good, and Byron as almost all bad, and Miss Armstrong, very wisely, has not tampered with his ideas.

C & B

The book is splendidly robust and picturesque, and gives the greatest pleasure to the reader. Miss Armstrong has not a good English style. She is apt to stoop to cheap effects now and again. But she has a very good sense of drama, and consequently she tells her story with dash and rapidity and the result is most satisfactory; many better stylists would have failed where she has succeeded. Those who have read Trelawny's own works will always remember three wonderful pictures: the first is the passage in which he describes the death of his Arab wife, Zela; the second is the account of the cremation of Shelley, when he plunged his hand into the fire and tore out the poet's heart; the last is that poignant moment when he uncovers the feet of the dead Byron and discovers the secret of the lameness which embittered the life of that brilliant and handsome man. As might be expected, these are the great moments of Miss Armstrong's book; those who have ready Trelawny in the original will greet them again with pleasure; those who have not have a great pleasure before them. "Trelawny" is a book for everyone.

• We Will Hear Much Of This Report

MORE will be heard on the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, contained in the weighty document presented to Parliament six months ago. It is referred to generally as the Sirois Report. If one is studious we have been told it would be possible to read and study it in a month. The Ottawa Journal has summed up in a way which seems fair and reasonable the outstanding points and arguments:

Early adoption of the Sirois Commission's recommendations is being urged upon the Government.

It may be well, therefore, to refresh memory of what the recommendations are about.

Chief advice of the Sirois report was in what it called Plan 1. Under this the Dominion would:

1. Take over all provincial debts.

2. Take over responsibility for all unemployed.

In return, the provinces would give up (a) the right to tax incomes (b) the right to tax corporations (c) the right to tax estates (succession duties).

Provincial subsidies would be abolished. As compensation the Dominion would substitute "National Adjustment Grants"; a plan under which provinces, unable to balance their budgets, would receive direct financial aid. The idea would be to enable each province to maintain its social services; to provide, in all Canada, fairly uniform living standards.

The annual cost of all this to the Dominion would be, it was estimated, $40,000,000 a year.

The Western Provinces, it is understood, want these recommendations adopted. Which is understandable. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are hard hit. They have heavy debts to service; are faced with a severe wheat problem; see their standard of living menaced. Mr. Bracken's coalition government, announced on Monday is believed to have its source in these problems. Mr. Bracken wants united Western demand for the Sirois recommendations.

The Maritime Provinces, it can be taken for granted, back up the West; under these recommendations they would have much to gain, could lose little. Quebec and British Columbia are said to be agreeable.

The stumbling block is Ontario. Ontario is better off than its neighbors; has sound credit; concentrated wealth; can carry on its social services. Not unnaturally—even though mistakenly—Ontario can say: "Why should we be penalized for others? Why should we give up our income tax and our corporation tax and our profitable succession duties just because others are failures?"

The answer is simple. It is that Ontario is not, never has been, and never will be, independent of its neighbors. It is not a self-contained, self-sufficient economic unit. If the other Canadian provinces cannot meet their obligations, Ontario's investors are hit. If the other provinces are too impoverished to buy goods, Ontario's producers are hit. Ontario, in short, can be no more isolated economically than she can be isolated politically. She is in the Confederation boat; must survive with it or sink with it.

And the other provinces, going on on they have been going, cannot meet their obligations—can't meet them, at any rate, and maintain fair living standards. Ten years of experience have shown their inability to cope with unemployment. Between 1929 and 1937 more than a billion dollars was spent on relief. Of that sum the provinces and the municipalities contributed less than one-third. Had the Western Provinces not borrowed from the Dominion their contribution would have been negligible.

When people speak of national income in Canada they think of it in terms of the Dominion as a whole; imagine that it is uniform. It is not uniform. There is a vast difference between incomes in the West and Maritime Provinces and incomes in Ontario and British Columbia. And a vast difference in social services; in living standards. More than that, those incomes are subject to severely varying consequences under fluctuations of the general national prosperity. If there be any who doubt this, let them read what the Sirois Commission found.

The Sirois report is not something that can—or should—be implemented by the stroke of a pen. Nor something that should be adopted arbitrarily. It demands examination; discussion. One thing, however, is certain. It is that if the recommendations of this report were necessary in peace they are much more necessary in war. The Dominion, in the coming years of war, will have its financial strength taxed desperately. For the fiscal year 1941-42 we are going to require, for war and ordinary services, more than $2,000 millions. To secure this money—which has to be secured—the Dominion must have priority rights upon the country's savings; must have the lion's share of all that taxation can yield. It is a question, simply, of concentrated, united effort upon the one vital goal.

There is something else. If this war goes on for two or three years, the Dominion Government, compelled to conserve exchange, must restrict imports from the United States; imports of luxuries, of fresh fruits and vegetables; and of gasoline. If, as is most probable, imports of gasoline are restricted, with consumption by private automobile users limited, what will be the result upon the gasoline tax of the provinces? Upon one of the main sources of their revenue? Ontario, no matter what it may feel about the Sirois report, must give thought to that.

The Sirois report, The Journal repeats, should not be adopted lightly; without thought and discussion. But it is a present challenge, and a serious one; something that cannot be evaded.

ABERHART AT IT AGAIN

Premier Aberhart has disapproved of the conduct or policy of Chief Justice Harvey, as chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Alberta, it was plainly his right and his duty to dismiss him and appoint some one else.

Where Mr. Aberhart was wrong was in removing a very valuable official from office for reasons which he will not divulge and dismissing him with less ceremony and dignity than he was accustomed to use when suspending an incorrigible high school boy for some overt offence.

Chief Justice Harvey carried on for twenty-three years, did more than anyone else in building up the University to its very high standard and controlled the finances under great difficulties.

Then at the end of that time, Mr. Aberhart wields the axe, without notice, without consultation or conference.—Calgary Albertan.

BRAVE WOMEN

[illegible] a story of two brave women from The Fergus News-Record:

Two of the bravest women in Canada live in Gravenhurst, according to a story in Alf Dass' paper last week. They were going home from church when they saw a cat acting peculiarly. One of them called to it and the cat responded. It turned out to be a skunk with its head caught in a salmon can. With soothing words and many tugs, the ladies removed the can from the head of the skunk. The action was appreciated by the skunk and even the ladies' gloves showed no trace of perfume.

THE REAL SCORE

One can imagine Hitler waving the real score in the air warfare in the face of Ribbentrop and exclaiming: "And you told me the British were decadent!" Of 2,463 planes which Germany lost between August 7 and October 31, 2,439 were shot down over Britain or around the British coasts, eleven over France, Denmark and the Low Countries, seven over Germany, twelve over the North Sea, three over Norway and eleven were brought down by British naval guns. During the same period Britain lost 733 planes over Britain or around its coasts but saved the pilots of 365 of them, while in British offensive operations and patrols 162 planes were lost — Kingston Whig-Standard.

SIGNAL PROBLEM

Detroit, with its stop and go signals "at innumerable levels," is considering uniformity at a cost of $350,000. Oddly enough, however, there is a possibility that the uniformity may take the form of signals hung high above the middle of the street. Installation of these is no longer legal in Ontario, although existing ones in that position are permitted to continue.—Toronto Star.

TRAVELS WITH TURTLE

WILLIAM H. STONE, the London correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, owns a pet turtle named Oscar. Oscar lived through the bombardment of the house in which Stoneman had his quarters. Last week, when the newspaper man was ready to return to America he placed Oscar in his pocket and flew to Lisbon. He purchased a basket of fruit to take aboard the Clipper, and hid the turtle in it, under the apples and grapes, which rose suspiciously every time Oscar turned over. That turtle made the flight successfully and now is in New York. The customs men made no objection to its entry here, especially since Ambassador Kennedy registered his approval. — Leonard Lyons, in New York Post.

Bartlett' broadcast said:

"As an experiment and as a precaution against increased bombing, the House of Commons yesterday met in what I can only call another place.

"That great and famous building, the House of Parliament by the Thames, is a very conspicuous target, and it might get knocked about. So we tried an alternative building.

"In this, I think and hope it's going to be very difficult, indeed, for Hitler or any other German to drive the Mother of Parliament into exile," he said.

A motion was passed that the clerk write the Ops Council as follows:

As the Post Office Department and the Department of Public Highways are both urging that township roads be kept open for winter travel as far as possible, and as the mail courier on Lindsay R. R. No. 5 has experienced considerable difficulty in times past along the Emily-Ops boundary north of Vincent O'Connell's farm because of accumulation of snow caused by the fence on the west side of the road; and as the Snow Roads and Fences Act, Chapter 291, R.S.O., Section 10, provides for Municipal Councils taking action to remedy such conditions, therefore the Emily Council requests the Ops Council to take steps to have the said fence taken down or otherwise disposed of to prevent an accumulation of snow which in time past has seriously interfered with the continuous operation of the said Lindsay R.R. No. 5.

A similar notice was ordered to be sent to Gilbert Franks about his fence from Frankhill School north as it also is a difficult road to keep open in the winter time.

Lowly Potato Eulogized By Speaker

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 9—(ENS). — "There is more nourishment in a dollar's worth of potatoes than in almost any other food," quoted Miss Eva Higgins in her paper on "Facts About Food Value of Potatoes."

"The lowly potato originated in Peru, and is now in use in nearly all countries of the world. It is a resource of many of the necessary mineral salts and particularly valuable for its content of potash and phosphate. There is sufficient calcium for the adult. There is also present vitamins B and C and a small amount of vitamin A. Potatoes are highly digestible as less than one half of one per cent is carbahydrates. They are best cooked in their jackets either steamed or baked.

Other papers included at the Lakefield Women's Institute in the Memorial Hall on Wednesday were two on Canadian industries, presented by Miss Margaret Sanderson and Mrs. N. S. Higgins, stressing the industries in Peterborough and Lakefield.

Asserting he was "strong for supplying England as much as we can," he added:—

"I find groups of different kinds pressing the administration and congress, for different kinds of reasons, to give help to Britain.

"To me, the question of giving help should be resolved on one point only—what's best for the United States.

"On that basis, I should favor continued aid because it serves as an insurance policy for our preparation."

NEW FACES WITH HOCKEY'S OLDEST TEAM, CANADIENS, THIS SEASON

JACK ADAMS

Another Gardiner, and a goaler, comes into the National Hockey league this season. The immortal Charlie "Chuck" Gardiner, brilliant back-stop who just before his tragic death reached the zenith of all hockey careers, and guarded the portals for a Stanley cup winner, was the last of that name to be a net-minder in the big time. The newcomer is Bert Gardiner, and he will wear the spangles of Montreal Canadiens as that ancient club, the oldest name in hockey, presents a reconstructed club with new faces and youth.

Gardiner, a sensational young goalkeeper, was purchased by Canadiens from New York Rangers. He was born in Saskatoon, joined the Rangers at Winnipeg in the fall of 1935 and was sent to their farm club in Philadelphia, where he has starred ever since. He replaced Davie Kerr in Rangers' hard fought championship series against the the Boston Bruins in the spring of 1939. Though new to the majors, Gardiner put up brilliant defensives. He came to Canadiens in exchange for goalkeeper Claude Bourque and a substantial sum in cash. Gardiner was picked for three years in succession the all star goalkeeper of the Canadian-American League.

ELMER LACH

The 27-year-old Gardiner played senior amateur hockey with the Saskatoon Elites before joining the New York Rangers' chain with the amateur New York Crescents, now the Rovers. He played seven games with Rangers that would have been enough to gain him a regular berth on almost any other N.H.L. team. All of them were against Boston, and six were in the playoffs against Boston two years ago when Kerr was injured in the first game.

In the six games, the powerful Bruins managed to put only a total of 12 pucks behind Gardiner. Three of them went into overtime and it took 10.38 minutes of overtime in the final game in a best-of-seven series before Boston gained a 2-1 decision to capture the round.

It's reconstruction year for the lone surviving original club which was in the field when the National Hockey association was founded late in 1909. Youth and new faces, of which Gardiner's is one, marks the preliminary preparation of the Montreal team, for the 1940-41 campaign, under the leadership of Frank Patrick and Dick Irvin.

The club made few purchases. One of these was Gardiner, and another was Erwin "Murph" Chamberlain, a forward, bought from Toronto Maple Leafs. He is an aggressive centre-ice performer. Mostly, youngsters who starred in amateur ranks are being recruited to re-build the great old club from the very bottom.

One of the newcomers is Elmer Lach, an amateur from Moose Jaw, Sask. The 22-year-old Lach played with Moose Jaw Millers last season. He was impresive in Canadien workouts. Coach Dick Irvin, in commenting on the signing of Lach, predicted that he would score "at least 10 goals for us this season."

An important capture made by Canadiens is Joe Benoit, one of the stars of Trail Smoke Eaters former amateur champions of Canada. He is a right wing, and a right hand shot weighing 165 pounds, 5 feet 9 inches in height, Benoit is regarded by all expert observers as practically certain to make good in the major league. He is very shifty inside and is an accurate shooter and a high scorer.

He joins Canadiens after his second trial. He was in Montreal last fall for a tryout but declined to remain.

Another newcomer is Jack Adams, who played with Vancouver Lions of the Pacific coast league last season. Coach Dick Irvin has been well satisfied with the work of the 20-year-old Adams, who has been playing on the same line with Lach. He scored 12 goals for Vancouver last season, and had 12 assists.

Canadiens made a move toward improving their defence when they signed another amateur star, Tony Graboski, a player of Polish descent, one of two brothers who starred last season in senior Canadian amateur hockey. Tony was with Sydney Millionaires, and is a big rangy chap who can play either forward or defence, but prefers the latter. He was something of a sensation in the club's pre-season games.

By FRED D. CRAIG

A rousing meeting is hoped for on Monday night when the Peterborough Hockey Club will gather in the Chamber of Commerce at 7.30 o'clock to discuss the coming season and make plans for training and other details in connection with the campaign. Just what is on the agenda for the meeting has not been given out but it may be that among other things here will be a discussion as to the possibility of floating juvenile hockey here. The movement among younger players is spreading rapidly and the time has arrived when we in Peterborough will have to take stock of the situation and build up our hockey machine in line with the modern trend. It is recognized that unless there is more encouragement, more opportunities for organized hockey and more coaching of the right kind, Peterborough, so far as home material is concerned is going to fall so far behind the parade that not even the faintest strains of the band music up front will be heard.

* * * * * *

Possible grouping of the Peterborough intermediate squad will undoubtedly be one of the subjects discussed Monday. In this connection sports editor Bill Walshe of the Kingston Whig-Standard says "If Belleville and Kingston both get strong clubs for intermediate hockey efforts will likely be made to revive the old grouping with Peterborough but although the Petes would be an attraction in local play the distance to the Liftlock City makes it an expensive proposition. Kingston's logical, geographical grouping is to the east both for intermediate and junior hockey as well as baseball and other sports but previously most of the playoffs have been to the west which forced long trips to Oshawa, Toronto and even further. A grouping with teams at Brockville, Smiths Falls, Carleton Place, Perth and even Ottawa is more convenient for Kingston."

Meanwhile down in Belleville Columnist Ken Colling comes to bat with the announcement that the Quinte town has at least three brand new hockey players hanging up their hats in Belleville hallways these days. After referring to the rumor that the veteran Sandy Burrows is the head man in the rejuvenated Belleville hockey setup as not very authentic, Mister Colling adds the following dope of local interest: "From what information we can gather the Reliance Aircraft Company, a new industrial firm located in Belleville, is paramount interested in the sponsoring of an intermediate hockey club in our fair city. One thing is certain, there are at least three new hockey players residing in Belleville today. New uniforms, gold and scarlet in color, have been purchased by "Speedy" St. Louis and Ken Watt, who are the prime movers of the intermediate hockey picture here. Incidentally the new Belleville hockey sweaters will resemble somewhat the color and pattern of the Shell softball jerseys."

The Original Razzle-Dazzlers

The amount of space that has been given to the football exploits of Dr. Jack Maynard since his sudden death the other day may be a bit mystifying to younger football fans. The older enthusiasts will understand. They know that the great Varsity team of 30 years ago on which Maynard was a shinging light represented an epoch in Canadian football. The Toronto students of that period were the razzle-dazzle hipper-dipper boys of their generation. Forward passing had not come into the game but the Varsity backfield used a long lateral in its place to telling advantage. It was nothing unusual to see a student safety man catch a punt behind his own line, pull the tacklers to him and then with apparently reckless abandon cut loose with a lateral pass half way across the field to a teammate who would get away for a long gain. That was take-a-chance stuff but Varsity made it look easy.

But their real weapon of offense was a lightning-like extend that would shoot around the opposing line with the speed of a Spitfire. There was no interference to get them into the clear but Maynard, Gall and company didn't need any. The ball travelled from one to the other so fast and the ball carrier was moving at such a clip that it was the toughest job in the world to stop the play from making big gains. Our own Pete Campbell who sparked the Varsity team from the quarterback position played a big part in those swift thrusts. He could get into full speed with one step and start the extend on its way. If the enemy line spread to stop the end run Campbell would cut back and go through himself. Nothing faster has been seen in Canadian football than the way those boys carried the mail. Working at the tempo at which they moved and given the advantage of modern interference it is difficult to imagine the size of the scores they would have piled up.

It looks very much as if the Winnipeg Blue Bombers will be crowned Western champions again before suppertime today. The Peggers won the first game of the Western finals a week ago by beating the Calgary Bronks on their own grounds and with the second game staged for Winnipeg this afternoon the Bombers look good enough for a repeat performance and another championship. This is especially so in view of the fact that the Bronks will be lacking the services of two of their best plungers, Ed. Rorvig and Paul Rowe, a useful kicking half, Charley Harrison and a sturdy linesman Chuck Millman. The latter is playing hockey with the Calgary Stampeders in Saskatoon, Rowe is tied up in the Air Force, Rorvig away on a business trip and Harrison is out with an injured knee. It looks like curtains for the Calgary gang.

The Week-End Program

Three games are scheduled in the National Hockey League over the week-end with Detroit Red Wings meeting the Leafs in Toronto tonight for the only Saturday night fixture. The Chicago Black Hawks visit the Canadiens and the New York Rangers play at Detroit Sunday night. The chief interest in the Leaf-Detroit fixture is in the light it may throw upon the strength of Jack Adams' Detroit club. It has been recognized that Rangers, Bruins and Leafs, as powerful at least as last season, would make most of the running in the N.H.L. and there have been hopes that some of the weaker sisters including the Red Wings would pick up enough strength to make them contenders. Otherwise the race would be a two-section affair. Tonight should help to settle the question of whether or not Detroit will be up there, although it is too early to be definite in that connection.

The Oshawa G-Men are finding it heavy going in the senior O.H.A. group so far and last night they dropped their second game in a row, this time losing to the Hamilton Dofascos in Hamilton. The final count was 8 to 3, but Hamilton reports say that Oshawa had a much greater percentage of the play than the figures indicate. They were beaten time after time by uncanny stops by Jack Eley the former Brandon boy who is guarding the Hamilton nets this season. The Oshawa club will do better as the season advances. They were thrown together in a hurry and had ot start playing before they were in shape either as individuals or as a team. There is plenty of ability packed into the outfit and no one will be pushing them around later on.

There's gold in them thar golf clubs, stranger. At least Ben Hogan, Texas-born professional golfer has found that true this season. Mister Hogan whose club is White Plains, N.Y., has finished in the money in every one of the 22 tournaments in which he has competed in 1940 and if that is not a model of consistency it will do until one comes along. Hogan, has kept plugging along without once allowing his game to go to pieces and as a result he is the leading money-winner among United States golfers and is in the lead in points for the Vardon trophy as well. The White Plains pro has his shots under such control that he has earned himself $9,655 in prize money. His lead in the Vardon trophy competition is 27 points over Sam Snead and he can cinch the trophy by finishing among the first five in the $10,000 Miami open.

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat. After telling him her father is in the penitentiary for murder, Lona learns the stranger's name is Jim Claridge. He obtains a hotel room for her and promises to call her the next day. In view of her past experiences, Lona wonders about Jim, decides she can trust him. Looking for work, Lona is surprised when a former employer, who had later dismissed her, receives her in his office in response to an "ad."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER SIX

STANDING before the desk at which Melvin Hardy sat, Lona felt a shiver begin to chase itself down her spine, and she checked it with an effort. She shouldn't have come here, she thought, striving to meet unconcernedly the beady eyes that brought flooding back memories of that last trying week at Ardmore's. She should have crossed the Allison Trust from her list of possibilities the moment she recalled Hardy's connection with it.

Straightening her shoulders she waited, conscious that he was looking her over from head to foot, taking in her worn suit, her frayed gloves and battered hat with an insolent stare that made her want to turn and run.

Then he smiled and his smile was even worse than his stare.

"I'm glad to see you again, Miss Ackerman," he said, in the low-pitched, curiously well-modulated voice that was his one attraction. "Sit down," he invited.

"I was wondering what had become of you," he went on, when Lona did not answer. "Don't tell me you haven't had any work since you ah—left Ardmore's." He was examining her clothes again, and Lona felt herself flush.

"I'm afraid I haven't," she said. "And I didn't know you would be hiring here or I wouldn't have come."

The words slipped out before she realized what she was saying. At the look which sprang to his eyes she wished she could recall them.

"But my dear girl!" he exclaimed. His tone hurt. "Surely you don't think there was anything personal in my having to lay you off! I thought I explained at the time that it was only a matter of—ah—expediency. You are a very good worker. I thought you—understood." He narrowed his beady eyes.

"I understood, of course," Lona brought out. How could she help understanding, something within her longed to cry out. "But I naturally felt hurt." She groped for words. "I'd been at Ardmore's five years, and Mr. Ardmore knew—my father—"

She hesitated, and Hardy leaned forward, suddenly. "There was a letter in Ardmore's files about your father, Miss Ackerman," he said, slowly. "I read it, and I'm very sorry." He reached out and touched her hand lightly. "A thing like that is a—a tough break for a girl like you. That's why I called you in when I recognized you out there in the office. I thought, perhaps, you would allow me to—help you in some way. This job, now, it's not what you had at Ardmore's, of course. Times have changed. But it's pretty decent pay, and if you want it, I think it can be arranged."

He paused, and Lona felt a sudden bewildering flash of doubt. He really sounded friendly. Had she been wrong after all? Had she misjudged.

"Do you mean you're offering me work? She could scarcely bring out the words. Work!"

Melvin Hardy smiled then, the smooth, insinuating personal sort of smile she had always hated in him. He glanced at his watch.

"Suppose you wait and go to lunch with me, and we'll—talk it over," he proposed evenly, his beady eyes fastened on hers.

For a moment Lona just sat looking at him. The letdown after her brief instant of hope was almost too much. "I'm afraid you'll have to count me out," she man-

Mrs. A. Anderson Equals High Score

Mrs. Alex Anderson put on a fine display of bowling last night at Duffus Alleys when she went after and equalled the 352 single which was made by Mary Sisson of the Westclox Office last Wednesday. Bowling in the Brinton League Mrs. Anderson totalled 658 for her three games.

Remember When—

The British government, 18 years ago today, disallowed a boxing bout between Joe Beckett and Battling Siki, negro fighter, scheduled for Dec. 7, 1922. Similar action had been taken 11 years earlier when Jack Johnson was barred from fighting Bombardier Wells. In the late 1920s, however, Larry Gains, Toronto negro, campaigned in England and won the empire heavyweight title.

Trio Of Horses Bought Year Ago For $20,000 Not Been Beaten

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP).—John P. Cuneo, the big printing press and farming man from Libertyville, Ill., gave his trainer a $20,000 bankroll a year and a half ago, and told him to buy some show horses in England.

The trainer, Jack Sullivan, who's been around the horse show business in the United States a long time but still has a brogue, brought back three satin-coated steppers.

Just how wisely he spent the money is evidenced at the current National Horse Show—the 55th—where not one of the three has been beaten yet. And Sullivan—in between stories about "the two Irishmen, remember?"—tells you the trio is now worth 2½ times the original $20,000 investment.

Won 4 Blue Ribbons.

During the first two days of the week-long show, Wensleydale Wildfire, the member of the trio given the last ballyhoo, has won four blue ribbons—taking one each time he has walked into the ring. Wensleydale Pilot, sensation of last year's show, won in his only appearance so far. And Knockvicar Dominio, entered in two events, both times paired with "Wildfire" in harness competition, was on top at the finish both times.

This gave Cuneo's Hathorn Farms stable a total of five blue ribbons, three in individual events and two in harness pairs. This total was second for the two days of the show only to the Glenholme Farm of Adrian Van Sinderen of Washington, Conn., which has collected eight. Glenholme has yet to send a loser into the ring.

Most unusual development of the show is the performance of the saddle horse, Sweet Campelnelle. This little lady is a three-year-old dappled gold mare with white mane and tail. This is like saying she's carrying a black cat and a busted mirror in her saddle bags, because three-year-olds rarely do much in big league show competition, and dappled golds, with white manes and tails, even more rarely. Yet, her owner and trainer, R. T. McCready of Sweickley, Pa., has sent his story book horse into the ring twice, and each time, she trotted out with the championship.

(By the Canadian Press.)

Tackling Conn Smythe's Leafs in Toronto on a Saturday night is a tough assignment at any time in the National Hockey League. Taking on New York Rangers the following night is just piling on the agony.

So no matter how you figure it, Detroit's Red Wings are in distinct danger of having their wings partially clipped at Toronto and Detroit this week-end. But Jack Adams and his right-hand bower, Ebenezer (Ebbie) Goodfellow aren't pessimistic.

For that matter neither is Dick Irvin whose surprising Canadiens play Paul Thompson's Chicago Black Hawks in Montreal Sunday night in the other game of the week-end schedule. The Habitants' tie game with Boston in the season's opener instilled a lot of cheer in their supporters.

The revamped Red Wings should be at least an even bet to split points with the weakened Leafs, who will be without Bob Davidson tonight. Didn't the Detroiters beat New York Americans in their first start a week ago while the Smythemen were losing to Lester Patrick's inimitable Rangers?

And didn't the Americans come right back to edge the highly-rated Black Hawks right in Chicago Thursday? All of which adds up to the impression Adams and Goodfellow drew a winning first hand in their pre-season shuffling.

Davidson's knee gave out in last Monday's practice and the rugged left-winger has been unable to skate since. The equally durable Nick Metz is expected to take his place alongside Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon.

Billy (the kid) Taylor and Don Metz, two of last year's Leaf rookies, may possibly get into the game against the Red Wings. They missed the Rangers' contest.

Canadiens are expecting a bitter tussle with the Black Hawks, who failed utterly before the largest crowd ever to attend an opening game in the windy city. The game should go a long way in determining just how good the Habitants are.

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 9 — (ENS) —Local hunters have been successful the first week. Francis Ruttan secured a 150-pound buck while hunting in the vicinity of Oak Lake on Thursday with Thomas and Melville Wight.

Clarence Revoir brought back a deer from Beaver Creek district, while Frank Garneau secured a good-sized deer on Thursday when he spent the day in the vicinity of Dan Wood's residence.

The many friends of Jimmie Umphrey, who is confined n Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, following an appendix operation, will be pleased to know that his condition is improving daily. His mother, Mrs. R. W. Umphrey, and son Teddy visited him on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wood and Mrs. M. E. Knox of Picton, were visitors at Peterborough on Thursday.

Clifford Dunn and Carmen Alley have returned from their thirty-day training period at Peterborough.

Messrs. Jefferson, Cross, and Brown have returned to Toronto after a few weeks in camp up the Trent shore duck shooting.

Master Bobbie Thain of Peterborough spent the week-end with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Thain.

HAMILTON, MARLBOROS AND SAILORS WIN SENIOR O.H.A. GAMES

Oshawa G-Men Downed 8-3 By Hamilton

HAMILTON, Nov. 9.—Hamilton Dofascos thrilled 2,500 home town fans at the Barton street ice house in their first home game of the O.H.A. senor schedule by defeating Oshawa's G-men by a score of 8-3 and in so doing stamped themselves as the club to beat for O.H.A. honors this season.

The Brady-Fritz-Shillington line was the shining light of the evening's performance, being responsible for seven of Hamilton's total of eight markers, the odd goal coming from the stick of Turner on a pass from Leo Lamoureux, last year's defense star of the Cornwall Fylers.

However, a large portion of credit for the victory should go to Jack Eley, ex-Brandon, Manitoba, goal tender, who stopped shots from the sticks of the G-men from every conceivable angle, even when the visiting players had beaten the Hamilton defense completely.

Brady, the slender left winger, scored on a solo rush in the third period only to have the goal disallowed. His performance throughout the piece and that of Fritz, the bespectacled centre ice man were positive dreams of polish and speed, while other Hamilton players who looked mighty good were Woodward, Turner and Marshall.

Cooper, Chappelle, Edmison and Barnes—the latter opening the scoring on a solo attempt at 2:38 of the first period—were the standouts for the losers, while Thompson's stick handling was also a feature.

Sailors Win 3-1.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 9—(Special)—London Streamliners, making their home bow in O.H.A. senior company, dropped a rough, hard-fought hockey game here last night to the Port Colborne Sailors, by a score of 3 to 1.

A crowd of 2,500 watched the two teams finish the first period tied 1-1. Goal-getters were Earl Laroche for the winners and Ilo Marzo for London.

Tempers ran high all through the second period when six penalties were handed out. Neither team scored in this hectic frame and the goalies had a fairly easy time with the players forgetting the puck while they plied the hickory. Doug Runians had to go off for repairs caused by a deep cut on his nose.

Port Colborne took the lead after four minutes of play in the last period when Art Thompson drilled a shoulder high shot past Radiff, London goalie. Play got rough once more as London pressed hard, trying to get the tying counter. Leo Sargent, Sailors' goalie, kicked the puck out from every angle near the close of the game and was easily one of the stars for the winners. Chunky Roy Swanson, Port Colborne defenceman, grabbed the Sailors' third goal on a pretty solo dash down centre ice.

Find The Winner

A glance at this picture of the field leaving the stretch turn at Bay Meadows would certainly not lead one to believe that Vegas Justice, shown second from the rail, came on to win, but that's just what happened as the leader here, Lady Starlight, on the rail, and Penwipe, third from rail, both tired.

Soccer Elevens Play Despite Nazi Air Raids

LONDON, Nov. 9 (CP)—British football, competing against German air raids as a Saturday afternoon attraction, is bearing up stubbornly in the most trying times it has ever known.

Forced by war contingencies to run its leagues on a goal average basis rather than on the usual "two points for a victory, one for a draw" system, the Football Association, of which the Earl of Athlone, Canada's Governor-General, is president, has seen gate receipts dwindle because of what the press calls lack of "the real competitive spirit."

Change in the system of compiling standings was made because it was believed games might have to be cancelled and because lack of transportation facilities made a full schedule impossible.

After eight weeks of play, however, only a few games have been cancelled and sports writers generally have taken the goal-average system over the coals, claiming the standings give little indication of the true merits of the teams.

Penalized for Winning

Arsenal, current leaders of the South Regional section, had a 5.000 average Oct. 12 before their match with Tottenham. They won the game 3-2 and their average fell to 4.000. The next week they beat Northampton 5-4 and dropped another point in the averages. Had they played two scoreless draws their average would have remained at 5.000, so they actually were penalized for winning.

"Surely," wrote G. Wagstaffe Simmons in The Sporting Life, "it need not be emphasized that there is something wrong with a system of reckoning that punishes clubs if they win, but permits them to retain their average if no goals are scored."

Despite the criticism, the Football Association decided to retain the system for the second half of the season, starting after the new year and continuing until the first week in May.

But to conciliate those who believe wins and losses are more important than goals, the association arranged for a knock-out cup competition. It will begin after Christmas and run until May 3 when the final will be played.

Competition has been keen in both the Southern and Northern halves of the English League and there wasn't an unbeaten team after eight weeks' play.

Arsenal, with seven victories in eight games, has been the pick of the Southern half, while Manchester City, with five victories, two draws and a loss and a goal average of 3.600, has kept in front in the north.

Senators Plan Night Baseball

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—Reluctantly keeping up with the times, Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, Friday gave in to night baseball and announced that the Senators would play seven home games under the arcs next season.

When night baseball was first proposed for the major leagues, Grifith, who has spent more than fifty years in the game, was its most vigorous opponent.

First one club and then another installed lights, and each time Griffith shook his white head.

But as the box office receipts began to pour in he had to take notice.

He came forward with the novel suggestion that if the major leagues were going to embrace night ball they embrace it wholeheartedly.

"I suggest," he said, "that we play all of the games, except Saturday and Sunday, at night during June, July and August.

His associates in the American League would not consent to this, but Griffith believes the American League, as well as the National, will some day come to this.

Edward J. Eynon Jr., secretary of the Senators, said the club would spend approximately $130,000 on lighting Griffith Stadium.

One of the things believed to have led Griffith to consent to night games was the recent fate of his ball club.

Last season the Senators finished seventh, their worst campaign in several years. The attendance, however, was better than the year before.

Saints Beaten In Breakaway In Last Minute

GARDEN CITY ARENA, St. Catharines, Nov. 9 — (Special). — Victims of a breakaway from a Saints' power play, Johnny Inglis, with but fifty seconds to go, Toronto Marlboros scored their initial victory of the young season here last night, and St. Kitts' Saints sustained their second straight defeat at 4-3.

The winning counter came with Eddie King serving a penalty for Shamlock, who was injured. Saints had pressed furiously around the Mortimer cage, Rossini scoring at 19.00 only to have the goal called back for entering the crease. The rival squads were very evenly matched in play on the night, matching goals alternately, with both preceding periods being deadlooked at 1-1 and 2-2. That carried on through the third, with Dukes taking the lead in the last period, thus forcing the Garden City Blueshirts to come from behind and battle uphill for the squaring counter.

Dukes dressed only twelve men again, but they produced a stubborn type of battle that gave their defence a chnce to show to good advantage, particularly Davidson, who was tagged with two penalties but was a bulwark on their rear wall.

Inglis was their best man up in front, with Imlach and Ezeard showing well. The work of the ex-Sudbury line for Saints was excellent, Rosy Rossini getting two of their three goals on passes from Centre Hasle. Dukes drew two penalties to one for Saints in the opener, but no power plays of either side produced goals there, nor in the second, where each had two men benched.

Saints' best chances came in the dying minutes, when Imlach and Shamlock were gated together and the homesters sent out four forwards, who penned Davidson, Drummond, and Inglis in for nearly three minutes.

Play roughened considerably in the last chapter, with five penalized, as elbows were carried high and sticks waving. A crowd of 2,200 included the pipe band of the Argyll-Sutherland Scots and 300 of their regiment from Niagara Camp.

Canadian Jockey Boots Home Three Winners

SALEM, N.H., Nov. 9—Canadians occupied the spotlight at Rockingham Park Friday afternoon when Harry Meynell, talented apprentice jockey from Brantford, booted in three winners, and Wise Will, owned by H. Dirks of Hamilton, accounted for the feature race, a test at one mile and a sixteenth.

The popular Meynell, who is 16 years of age and rides at 97 pounds, is under contract to Arthur J. Halliwell, prominent Toronto racehorse owner.

Meynell's record for the day showed two "thirds" on top of his triple-winning effort. He booted home S. Farfield's Druco Syska, a $19 for $2 shot in the fifth race and came right back to guide Wise Will to a length win over Sneaky Henry in the sixth. He completed the triple in the eighth, scoring by four and a half lengths on Mrs. A. Samson's Cordate, a better than 5-to-1 hazard.

In the feature Wise Will closed with a rush to win going away. He crossed the finish line a good length in front of Sneaky Henry, which defeated Ghostflyer a short nose for the place. Franco Saxon was just a head back in fourth place with White Hot trailing the field. Second choice to Franco Saxon, Wise Will returned $7 for a $2 investment.

Surprises were the order of the day at Rockingham. The highest daily double payoff of the meet was hung when Zacatea won the first and Bit O' Green accounted for the second. They returned $1,172.60 in the $2 duet wager.

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

Associated Press Sport Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP).—Joe Louis vs. Al McCoy made the fourth sports page in one Boston paper and the third in another....Detroit Tigers have given Coach Bing Miller the good will portfolio and assigned him to the winter banquet circuit....Larry Macphail's Dodger contract will net him about $50,000 per, including bonuses.

To-day's Guest Star.

Arch Ward, Chicago Tribune: "Bill Terry says he is going ivory hunting, which must give Lefty O'Doul a chuckle....O'Doul first tried to sell Terry on Joe DiMaggio....No deal....Then Domnic DiMaggio....No deal....Then Ted Williams....No deal."

Max Baer will sing no less than three numbers in his forthcoming musical....Jimmy Foxx swears he'll not catch another game—for the Red Sox or any other team. Says it would lop at least two years off his baseball life....Did you read about that Atlanta golfer shooting a 180-yard ace on the fly? He cut loose with a 9-3 iron and the ball landed fairly in the cup without touching the surrounding turf.

As for Louis vs. McCoy, it's a darned good thing Sinclair Lewis got "it can't happen here" off the press first.

Mrs. P. Darling Entertains Lakefield WMS

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 8.—(ENS)—The activities of the church are in many instances becoming also the social activities of its members, in numerous cases their only social life. What a fine tribute it is to any church, that has an organization like the Women's Missionary Society that enables its members and adherents to meet together for a period of Bible study and missionary endeavor followed by a social cup of tea in the friendly atmosphere of a comfortable home. Such were the impressions gained when the W.M.S. of the Lakefield United Church met Tuesday afternoon for the November meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. P. H. Darling. A large attendance honored her invitation and every one said, "What a happy afternoon." All clapped heartily in response to the motion, moved by Mrs. George Hendren and seconded by Mrs. J. Knox, thanking Mrs. Darling for her hospitality.

The program was well planned and enthusiastically presented, the committee in charge being Mrs. C. S. Tanner, Mrs. James Hendren and Mrs. E. Orr, with Mrs Hendren in the chair. The theme was "The Pilgrim Way," proving that Christianity is not a way of talking, it is a way of walking.

The scripture lesson was read and explained by Mrs. (Dr.) T. E. Renwick. She also read an article on hindrances. "Hindrances are God's messengers to bring out capacity. We should esteem them as proof of God's confidence in us."

During the devotional period, prayers were offered by Mrs. C. S. Tanner, Mrs. E. Orr, Mrs. W. J. Charton and Mrs. William Whetung, with the offertory prayer by Mrs. James Hendren. A pleasing vocal duet was given by Mrs. Dora MacMillan and Mrs. Mae Hamblin.

A few interesting remarks were given by Mrs. Hendren on the life of Sir Wilfred Grenfell. "When this great benefactor first secured his medical degree, his ambition was to make money. However an inner voice compelled him to change his mind and he decided to do as much good as he could. His eleventh commandment was "keep smiling."

The study book, "Couriers of the Cross in China" was ably reviewed by Mrs. Elmer Milburn. She described graphically, the outstanding features of the life of the late Miss Minnie Shipley, "A pilgrim of Honan." Born in Ontario, she was appointed to Honan, China, as an evangelistic missionary at the beginning of the Great War. She arduously applied herself to learning the Chinese language and was soon making contracts for Christ in rural areas, where she became greatly respected and loved. She braved the hardship of primitive means of travel in the isolated regions, also the hardship of food and lodging. She issued a primer in phonetic script to facilitate reading among the masses. While still young with her work unfinished, she contracted typhus fever and died July 30, 1939.

Mrs. Milburn also reviewed the life of Rev. W. B. Djang, M.A., B.D. He is spoken of as "Theology in the service of suffering," for his outstanding work in looking after his wounded countrymen as train loads of them pass from the frontier to the hospitals in the rear. He boards the train as it takes water at a station and he and his voluntary helpers work swiftly and expertly, to give what relief they can. He is also a professor and civic administrator. He is one of China's most promising sons.

He called upon members to be loyad to Canadian ideals, building on them the solid foundations of Canadianism. Loyalty he named as one of thet primary prerequisites of citizenship. Mr. Stephens' address was the principal feature of the meeting, whose program was in charge of Miss June Burgis, citizenship convener. Mrs. Ruth Holmes and Miss Helen Nicholson assisted with the devotional period.

In view of next Monday being a holiday the regular meeting for that week was suspended. The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday at the home of the president, Mrs. D. Rutherford, who conducted the devotional exercises. She gave a fine paper on the great commission of Christ to give the Gospel to the whole world. She stressed the necessity of obeying his command by prayer, service and contributions.

Mrs. John McKague gave an interesting paper regarding the Home Mission work of the church and the necessity of helping it.

A much appreciated vocal duet was given by Mrs. Karl Huggins and Mrs. Fred Wood.

The meeting closed with Lord's Prayer in unison.

CANADA'S WAR LEADERS

By KEN CLARK, C.P. Staff Writer

(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press.)

The Director of Naval Personnel of the Royal Canadian Navy, Capt. Harold Taylor Wood Grant, submits to interviews as duty. He has the Navy's distaste for getting its name in the paper, but not for the same reason.

Explaining his attitude on the first point (Navy's distaste) he says with good Haligonian roundness (the R's are slightly anglicized), "I don't think the general public realize how valuable information on the movement of ships is to the enemy."

"I saw an article the other day describing convoys and it actually gave the distance between the ships moving in convoy," he added. "That would be interesting to a submarine commander firing his torpedoes."

On the second matter Capt. Grant has a kind of combination British-Canadian aversion to getting into the public prints.

The office where he works, arranging to take on more men, train them, figuring how many, when, where, and who goes where to do what, is a typical R.C.N. office operating with an informal efficiency not to be found in other services.

When Capt. Grant's telephone rings, somebody answers on the other side of a thin partition and then if it is the D.N.P. himself who is wanted the person on the other side gives a couple of lusty bangs on the shuddering partition. If the D.N.P. doesn't answer immediately the other side lets go with two or three more terrific wallops.

"D.N.P." answers Capt. Grant. "Why, no sir," he says. "I think we should stamp on that. Either we should do it ourselves or let them do the whole thing."

Turning back to his interviewer, the D.N.P. says, "I think the best way to do your piece would be simply to put down what ships I've served in and let it go at that."

Served in North.

This Capt. Grant is a slim, dark wiry man. He was born in Halifax in March, 1899, the son of Hon. MacCallum Grant, former Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia.

When the last war started he entered the Royal Canadian Naval College at Halifax. At 16 he was serving in the Leviathan, flagship of the famous "Hookie" Browning on the North America and West Indies station. Six months he was there and then went to the North Sea where he served on various cruisers. He "saw action" convoying ships to Norway.

"Saw action," he explained, merely meant being fired on with torpedoes. There was some further action in destroyers and active fighting in the Baltic, later on against the Bolsheviki.

It was very cold on that station, he said. His ship was based at Borjka in what then was Finland. But the cold was really the thing. They got out just before the Gulf of Finland froze up.

In 1920 Capt. Grant was a sub-lieutenant on the Canadian cruiser Aurora. There was a kind of a rebirth of the Canadian Navy at that time.

Capt. Grant thinks they tried to go too fast. "It was no use putting the cart before the horse," he said. "I don't mind saying, and it's a pretty general opinion, that you can't commission a seagoing ship unless you have the personnel and the dockyards and the drydocks to dock her in.

"There's no sense in starting to build a colossal navy if you haven't got the shore facilities. You can put all sorts of ruddy things afloat, but you must have trained personnel and the necessary training establishments."

With Royal Navy.

After a year in the Aurora, Capt. Grant spent two years in H.M.S. Ramillies, a battleship of the Royal Navy. He later specialized in navigation in H.M.S. Dryad at Portsmouth.

He was promoted lieutenant in 1922 and later spent a couple of years on the west coast in destroyers. In 1927 he returned to battleships, the Queen Elizabeth and the Warspite and was assistant master of the Fleet under Admiral Sir Roger Keyes. Master of the Fleet, he is careful to explain, merely means that you are a navigating officer.

In 1928 he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant commander and next year served as staff officer at Halifax. In 1931 he was navigating officer in the Saguenay and after that spent a couple of years ashore at Halifax as first lieutenant at the barracks.

Then he moved to Ottawa as assistant director of naval intelligence and plans. He was promoted commander in 1935 and was named director of naval reserves.

After spending the next year at the Naval Staff College at Greenwich, England, he was present at the final big naval review before the war. This was the time that the British Broadcasting Corporation's announcer from the foretop of the flagship Nelson, made the famous remark concerning "the whole Fleet's lit up."

In 1938 Capt. Grant commanded the Skeena. Last year his escort met Empress of Australia carrying Their Majesties of Newfoundland, and escorted them to Quebec. In June the captain had the honor of embarking the King and Queen aboard his own ship and carrying them from Tormentine to Charlottetown and thence back to Pictou, N.S.

Having arrived at this point in the interview, Capt. Grant was interrupted by the entrance of Rear-Admiral Percy Nelles.

Rear-Admiral: "Not at all. I'll just write something here and Capt. Grant will look at it and say yes or no."

(Silence while the Admiral scribbled and passed the pad to the captain.)

Captain: "No, sir." Exit Admiral.

Capt. Grant thinks it is too bad the Naval College at Halifax was closed after the First Great War. He says "it is not easy to build a college with a tradition like the Royal Military College for example, which is known both for learning and sports. The youngsters always look to their seniors. If you have to establish a new college starting from zero it's uphill work.

"Of course since we must always co-operate with the British Navy, it's essential that our men should have some time in the Royal Navy. Our men have to know the tactics of the battleship and the submarine —every branch of the service.

"A man commanding a destroyer has to know what the other men in the Fleet are thinking."

Capt. Grant used to play rugger. He says all Canadian Navy men play football, hockey, tennis, golf, squash and everything except cricket. He is also fond of shooting and fishing. He is married and has three children, one separate and a pair of twins.

Capt. Grant says: "We are a continental people like the people in the United States and we don't realize the importance of the merchant marine. We don't understand the really tremendous part they are playing in the war."

That is a Navy tribute.

LINDSAY, Nov. 9. — Bears are in the spotlight just now, but probably the most bare-faced bear talked of is prowling in the wooded precincts of Grand Island, betimes swimming the channels of Balsam Lake to Rosedale and Long Point. A recently organized hunt with a bear-hunting dog which seldom misses its quarry, has failed.

This elusive bear, which, it is recalled, confronted Charles Austin in the bush on the island, and appropriated his lunch kit before it beat a retreat, was also seen in company with a herd of cattle, watering in the lake, Rev. Dr. Davies of Toronto, a summer resident of Rosedale, is the authority for this story. People on the mainland report hearing bear calls sent and answered from various directions.

At the present time, a moose is feeding with stock on the Burtchaell Ranch, near Coboconk. Residents from Fenelon Falls motored out last Sunday, November 3, and took pictures of the animal which disappeared into the bush when the cameras clicked. They managed to get close enough to note its beautiful dark brown coat shading to light tan at the neck.

Bodoglio In Albania

A Reuters News Agency despatch from Athens said last night that, according to rumors reaching the Greek capital, the Italian commander in Albania has been replaced by Marshal Badoglio, Chief of the Italian General Staff.

Italian communiques have not indicated thus far in the Greek-Italian conflict who is in charge of operations in Albania.

Marshal Badoglio distinguished himself in the Ethiopian campaign, where there was a switch in the Italian command early in the war. General Emilio de Bono, veteran Italian campaigner, was recalled at that time and Badoglio was placed in charge, leading Il Duce's troops in victory against the poorly armed armies of Emperor Haile Selassie.

P.E.I. Liberals Increase Lead

CHARLOTTETOWN, Nov. 9. — (CP).—Premier Thane A. Campbell's lopsided majority in the Prince Edward Island Legislature was swelled to-day by the addition of two Liberals in by-elections, giving him all but three of the 30 seats in the House.

To the ranks of the Government party were added A. W. Matheson of Charlottetown, councilman, and George Kitson, of Hampshire, assemblyman. In electing them yesterday, voters of the 2nd Queen's District turned back two Conservatives in straight party fights.

Matheson, a lawyer, polled 1,142 votes against 1,108 for R. R. Bell, another Charlottetown lawyer. Kitson defeated Philip Matheson of Oyster Bay Bridge, 1,637 to 1,439. Both the assembly candidates are farmers.

Barrett Chute New Hydro Site

TORONTO, Nov. 9 — (CP). — Armed with a go-ahead order from the Ontario Government, officials of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission began laying plans to-day for developments on the Madawaska River, main tributary of the Ottawa River, and in the Albany River area, which will cost an estimated $12,000,000.

The developments were ordered at a Cabinet meeting yesterday and include diversion of water from the Albany River system into Lake Superior and construction of a 54,000 horse-power plant on the Madawaska.

The northern diversion, known commonly as the Ogoki diversion, involves transfer of 4,000 cubic feet of water a second from the Albany system which flows into James Bay to Lake Nipigon and the Nipigon River which flows into Lake Superior. The project is being undertaken to implement the recent Canadian-United States St. Lawrence River power agreement under which the United States allowed Ontario 5,000 additional cubic feet a second for the Niagara plant provided the Ogoki diversion was undertaken.

Dr. Thomas Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, said the Madawaska projects calls for a power plant at Barrett Chute, 30 miles west of the Ottawa River, and a storage dam at Bark Lake. Plans for that region, he added, involve an ultimate development of eight sites in the river for a total estimated 200,00 horse-power.

Mistaken Identity

AS SOON AS Joseph Bezak, 19, gets his name back he's going to join the army. Rejected because of a dental defect, he spent $50 on his teeth and returned to the recruiting office to find that "Joseph Bezak" already had enlisted. A 18-year-old chum borrowed Joe's name because he was under age.

Man-Made Pacts Useless Speaker Claims

ROSENEATH, Nov. 9 — (ENS).—A report of the area convention held at Belleville on October 3 presented by Mrs. Charles Sandercock, and two papers, one on "Canadianization" by Miss Jessie Johnson and one on "Peace" by Mrs. A. Nill were the principal features at the regular meeting of the W.I. on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Sandercock brought the highlights of the session to the meeting and expressed her pleasure for the privilege of attending the convention.

Speaking of "Canadianization" as the moulding of the incoming population to Canadian ideals, Miss Johnson advocated that this be done through the Government, the press and radio, in addition to individual effort.

Mrs. Nill, speaking on "Educating for Peace," stressed the co-operation of all denominations that the younger generation may receive a definite spiritual education that will keep pace with their intellectual growth. Speaking of man-made pacts as useless unless they spring from the heart of God-fearing nations, she questioned "until every denomination co-operates, until every child is reached and trained, is there much hope for world peace and security." This was followed by the singing of "There'll Always Be An England."

The meeting was held in the Town Hall, with Mrs. E. and Mrs. Charles A. Sandercock as hostesses. Mrs. L. Tucker, president, was in the chair. A roll call "What I am thankful for" summed up the responses in thankfulness for the privilege of living in Canada and of being a British citizen.

It was decided, on motion, that the White Gifts in December will be applied to needy cases at home.

A rally of officers in West Northumberland was announced to be held in Cobourg on November 12, with morning and afternoon sessions.

Mrs. Leslie Sherwin gave a resume of current events.

Mrs. Clarence Down presided over the program period when piano solos were played by Miss Doreen Nichol and Mrs. B. Thackeray. A duet was sung by Mrs. G. Spears and Mrs. C. Thackeray. A reading, "Let Us Be More Neighborly," by Mrs. E. Timlin; Doris Spears recited "Remembrance"; the convener read "Chips on the Shoulder," and a contest arranged by Mrs. G. Spears concluded this period.

Two minutes of silence was observed, and the president read a poem appropriate to Remembrance Day. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting, and refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. A. Hugh and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Worth, Port Hope, spent a few days this week with the former's son, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hugh.

WHEN YOUR LIVER ACTS UP ... YOUR SPIRITS GO DOWN

A liver that fails to secrete all the bile it should may be the cause of much of the misery of temporary constipation. It is important therefore that the laxative you take also helps stimulate sufficient bile flow to act on intestinal waste. This is why Beechams Pills are increasingly favored as a laxative. By helping stimulate bile flow, this purely vegetable compound helps drive away the headachy, tired feeling that comes from faulty elimination. Buy Beechams Pills at your druggist's—10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

COURT CONTINUING

Mr. Justice MacKay's assize court at Belleville was adjourned on Friday until Tuesday morning when it will begin its third week of sitting.

CLOSE CITY OFFICES

Before leaving for Ketchecum Lake Friday afternoon for a few days of hunting in the northern part of the county, Mayor Hamilton said that the city hall offices would be closed on Remembrance Day.

PLANTS MORE TREES

Alderman Stocker told his associates in the council the other night that two consignments of trees had arrived here within the last week or 10 days and were promptly planted.

NO GARBAGE COLLECTION

Owing to having to make repairs to the city incinerator on Monday there will be no collection of garbage that day it was announced at the city hall at noon today.

GETTING READY

A report from a reliable source this morning revealed that W. T. Regan, well known plumber who was seriously injured in a car accident on the Lindsay highway, is better. He regained consciousness this morning and showed definite signs of improvement.

AN OLD NOTE

A client of the Bank of Montreal turned in an ancient bank note on Friday which has no present day value as currency. It might be of interest to a collector. It is a confederate bank note, dated 1864, and drawn on the Allegany County Bank in Maryland. The bill is for $10 and the material in the bill is silk.

BICYCLIST HIT.

Mrs. J. Sadler reported to the police that while driving east on Hunter street Friday afternoon a man on a bicycle who had also been riding east, turned south at the George street intersection and ran in front of her car. The bicycle was hit and the rider knocked off, but was apparently unhurt, Mrs. Sadler reported.

FRIENDLY HOUR

The Friendly Hour Group of the Y.M.C.A. will commence its Sunday evening services tomorrow evening after church service in the "Y" Auditorium, at 8:30 o'clock. Two special features will be vocal and piano solos by Miss Mona Gibson and Miss Frances Wells. All young people are cordially invited to these weekly services where folks like to sing their old favorites.

CASE DISMISSED

When a local young man who had been charged with vagrancy appeared in police court this morning wearing the battle dress of the Canadian Active Service Force, Chief Constable Newhall stated that no evidence would be offered and the case was dismissed. Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., congratulated the young man and his brother, who was also in uniform, expressing a hope that they would be a credit to the Canadian army.

WIRES GOT CROSSED

Either some city official has got muddled or else the Board of Works has adopted a new style in sidewalk building. On Clifton street, workmen are building a concrete sidewalk. The walk angles somewhat because the street lines have just been corrected and the sidewalk is adorned with a Hydro pole which the concrete completely encircles. In other words if anyone was walking along the sidewalk in the dark, they would smack into the pole head on.

VALUABLE DOG KILLED

Miss Christine Carlisle's valuable spaniel Duke was killed on Charlotte street Friday night when it ran out into the road and was hit by an automobile driven by T. J. Ryan, 364 Brock street. Mr. Ryan tried to avoid hitting the dog but it went under the wheels of the car.

COMPLAINS OF SPEED

"Something should be done to stop the fast driving on George street north of Parkhill Road," a citizen of that section said to the Examiner last night. "Just as a sample of how dangerous the street is there have been four dogs and a squirrel run over in one block in the past week."

DON'T SEND FRUIT

Perishable articles should not be included in packages destined for men of the C.A.S.F. overseas. Postmaster Lacheur said today, oranges, grapes and apples have been arriving in the Old Country with the fruit decayed. Other packages contained broken glass jars of jam and other such products spoiling the other contents of these parcels and damaging other mail by the sticky substance. The Canadian Postal Corps salvaged and forwarded to the addressees whatever contents were not totally ruined. The public is also reminded that packages to Great Britain and Iceland are limited to 11 pounds, and the postal rate is 12c a pound.

Let's Go

Oh, yes, they are going. But where? To the way of life or death? To purity or sin? To clean lips or blasphemy? To honesty or cards and the pool table? To the good things of life or to the beverage room? Where you go, they'll follow. These precious boys and girls are worth "a heap of living." Why not say "Let's go to the House of God?"

Ottawa Pleased With Showing Of Highlanders

The Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders evidently made a fine impression upon their arrival in Ottawa the other day. "They marched magnificently," The Ottawa Journal's story said. "The fine physique of many of the men was commented upon time and again along the line of route."

"A thin drizzle of rain was falling and only a few onlookers were on hand to welcome Ottawa's latest military arrivals. The Highlanders themselves were in the highest spirits. Pipers at the head of the column played "Bonnie Dundee," and soon the troops in column of threes were marching down Isabella street to the Driveway. The fine physique of many of them was commented upon time and again along the line of route.

The Stormonts have been under canvas at Kingston for some time. Wednesday night they were in comfortable buildings at Lansdowne Park, that is, those who were not on sentry go.

Remarkable History

The unit which has taken over quarters from The Governor General's Foot Guards has a remarkable history. The chronicle of the regiment may be said to have begun in 1784 when the disbanded officers and other ranks of the 84th (The Royal Highland Emigrant Regiment), the 1st Battalion (King's Own Regiment of New York), "Sir John Johnson's Greens", and the Corps of Butler's Rangers settled in the couties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, followed in 1804 by 600 disbanded officers and other ranks of the Glengarry Fencibles of Scotland.

Colonel Hicks-Lyne Wednesday night emphasized that the Stormonts today were a composite unit. Headquarters and Headquarters Company consisted of personnel from the Peterborough Rangers; No. 1 Company was formed from the Princess of Wales' Own Regiment, Kingston; No. 2 Brockville Rifles; Nos. 3 and 4 Companies, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders (Cornwall).

Among Officers

Among the officers are Lieuts. A. A. and J. M. McMartin, who have shot big game in Africa; Major Don Lewis, a King's Counsel and a former mayor of Brockville; Lieut. Barrie Fraser, paymaster, formerly a sergeant at the district depot here. The medical officer, Lieut. W. H. Rose, joined the battalion as a platoon officer, but when the O.C. discovered he had given up a lucrative practice as a heart specialist in Potsdam, N.Y., he made him medical officer. According to press accounts his fees totalled $20,000 a year.

There are three brothers serving as privates in the 1st Battalion. They are F. H. and J. Running, who come from Leeds County. A fourth brother is serving with an anti-tank regiment. Corporal Earl Murphy, known to all as 'Murph,"' is an alderman of Kingston.

Some stranding full-blooded Indians from Hiawatha Reserve are with the Highland unit. They are Privates G. R. Paudash, whose father was a sniper in the 21st Battalion; W. C. Musgrave and G. Cowie.

Proud of Pipers

The colonel is proud of his nine pipers. They have practically all piped under fire. Pipe Sergeant Lorne MacGillivray served as a piper in the 16th Scottish under Colonel Cy Peck V.C.

Among those who welcomed the battalion to Ottawa were Colonel L. P. Sherwood, commandant of the area; Major R. Taylor; Captain R. A. Fraser, of his staff; Lieut. Colonel G. D. Gillie, M.C., former OC of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, N.P.A.M., and Captain Craig McLaughlin, district depot.

Colonel Sherwood was much impressed with the soldierly bearing and discipline of the new battalion. Officers and non-commissioned officers knew their jobs and the men worked hard to get everything ship-shape.

The other ranks in the unit wear balmorals and battle dress. For walking out they are permitted to wear a Glengarry which in their case is diced green, white and red. Officers wear the diced Glengarry but are changing to the balmoral soon.

Officers of Battalion

Officers of the 1st Battalion follow: Lieut. Colonel R. T. E. Hicks-Lyue, M.C., Peterborough, officer commanding; Major James Turnbull, Peterborough, second in command; Lieut. Graeme Falkner, Peterborough, adjutant; Lieut. V. S. J. Richmond, assistant adjutant; Lieut. Max Clarke, intelligence officer, Peterborough; Lieut. Barrie Fraser, paymaster; Captain the Rev. R. T. F. Brain, chaplain, Peterborough; Lieut. W. H. Rose, medical officer; Lieut A F Meiklejohn, signalling officer; Lt. James Gillespie, Peterborough, transport officer.

Headquarters Company: Captain C. A. Beattie, Lieuts H. Willis, Peterborough; A. A. and J. B McMartin, R Allin, Peterborough; A Hamilton, Peterborough; K. N. Kingston, Peterborough.

No. 2 Company: Major D. Lewis, Captain G. Armstrong, Peterborough; Lieuts. J. P. MacNaughton, E. W. Whelpton, R. E. Morden, A. Stewart.

No. 3 Company: Major A. R. Mcnab, Peterborough; Captain E. Hull, Lieuts, N. Gemmell, Peterborough; A. A. Constable, H. Cardwell, Wallace Point; M. Irvin.

No. 4 Company: Major H. Mason, Peterborough, Captain Robert Gray, Lieut. L. Foster, Peterborough.

Colonel Hicks-Lyne and a number of his officers were guests of Major Gordon F. Armstrong, M.C., and officers of the Veterans' Guard at dinner shortly after their arrival on Wednesday night.

With Engineers

Albert E. Hillier, former employee of the C.G.E. Company, and coach of the C.G.E. girls' softball team is now at Delbert, Nova Scotia with the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers. He is married and has two children. Three brothers are serving with the Imperial Army in England

Elk Killed By Poacher

One of the twenty odd elk placed in the game reserve north of Peterborough last winter has been killed. Some hunter was on reserve territory the first of the week, for on Wednesday Stanley Windsor, game overseer in Apsley, found one of the animals dead about one quarter mile inside the reserve, on Jack's Lake, Redman's Bay.

Talking to the Examiner this morning, Charlie Kingan, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association, pointed to the value of the animals alive, and then to the frightful waste of meat in this case. The elk is, of course, too heavy for one man or even several men to carry, and as a result it was allowed to spoil in the woods. The 500 pounds of meat at least was wasted, as each animal is considered to be of at least $1,000 value as a tourist attractor.

The poacher is not likely to be undetected for long, because the bullet that killed the animal has been sent to Toronto where an expert in ballistics will examine it. When the type of gun used in firing the shot is discovered, it will not be hard to check with the registration cards for guns, and when they have been examined, the gun responsible for the shot, if it is found, will be easily identified.

Two Local Soldiers Dodge Bombs Fall Into Creek Walking Home

M. D. Lucano, 616 Aylmer Street, recently received a letter from his son, Private Michael D. Lucano, somewhere in England with the C.A.S.F., recounting some of his experiences on a trip into the northern part of England on leave.

"We left camp at 9.30 in the morning and arrived at Sunderland about 7.30 at night. Everywhere we went people were saying, "Look at the Canadian boys," and they certainly made us welcome, and would stop and talk to us. We had about twenty youngsters around us, wanting us to tell them Indian stories. Went to a roller skating rink one afternoon, and met a lot of girls. They had seen only one other Canadian, and he was from the Black Watch Regiment. Went to Durham, where they have artificial ice, and we were right at home. Met a girl from Port Arthur.

Had some English beer in a pub with Joe Youdell's uncle. Back here last night, things got rather hot. Jack O'Leary, you know him, from the Quaker Oats, and I got out of bed for a while. Jerry was dropping bombs around about, and I thought the barracks were going to cave in. Coming home from the trip we had to change trains and we went along the station platform waiting for the train to pull in. When it did come, somebody opened one of the doors and Joe got hit, and was knocked cold. I thought he was finished for a while, but he is coming along fine. It certainly gave him an awful bang. I am sending you a picture of a girl I met. We think a lot of each other, so don't be surprised some day.... While I was in London catching a train a girl said to me there couldn't be a God if we lost this war, and she's not very far wrong. Those Germans are rotten, machine-gunning people in the streets, and killing babies in mothers' arms....The Jerrys came close again yesterday. He dropped three eggs one right after the other, and you should have seen me go, but it was all over quickly. They fell on the other side of the camp. We had a few bombs dropped the other night and one this morning. It didn't feel extra good so close. Another chap and I coming back to camp last night decided to take a short cut. It was foggy and raining, and we didn't know where we were going. We were walking along talking, and all at once we fell into a creek. I haven't laughed so much in a long time as I did when we were getting out, soaking wet....You'd be surprised to see how the people can stand up under the bombing around here....Be sure and buy one of the nicest tombstones you can afford for Mum. This is one place where a fellow often wishes for his mother... I am sending you a picture of a group of Peterborough boys, twenty-one of us, and when we get the papers from home we couldn't help thinking about the wrist watches the Mayor and the council have been giving to fellows in later units. We know we didn't join up in our own town, but still we're here. Don't forget cigarettes if you are sending anything, because I am always glad to get some."

Nicholls Hospital Golden Jubilee

The fiftieth anniversary of Nicholls Hospital was commemorated at a large banquet and bridge of the Nicholls Hospital Alumnae in the Empress Hotel os Friday night, at which nurses from such outside points as Hamilton, Toronto, Pickering, Lindsay and Woodstock were noticed proudly wearing the corsage knotted with purple and gold that signified their Alma Mater. The oldest graduate in the city, Miss Fanny Dixon, was an honored guest, and told of the training school of fifty years ago, when four nurses were considered an adequate staff. Of the efficient medical staff in charge at that time, she said, Dr. W. D. Scott of this city is the only living member. A birthday cake centred the head table, which was draped with streamers of purple and gold, and lit with matching tapers. Miss Florence Vickers, Reg. N., president of the Alumnae, presided and extended a formal welcome,

The guest speaker, Dr. J. Harold Couch, who spent his boyhood days in Peterborugh, being "rescued from drowning in the Otonabee; going to Central Public School, and driving the family crazy by practising for the Collegiate bugle band," was presented by Miss Alma O. Dobbin. Dr. Couch, now connected with the Toronto General Hospital, is one of the five Canadian men appointed to the Committee of World Federated Democracies, and suggested in no uncertain terms that being prepared to serve the country is not enough. He defined "Democracy" as being "of the people, by the people, and for the people,' and declared, "If you are not taking part actively in the welfare of your community, you are not doing your share to carry out 'by the people' in the definition of democracy."

Ills of World Never Greater,

The ills of the world have probably never been greater than right now, Dr. Couch said as he referred to Germany as "suffering from cancer." He described Nazism as an insidious, slimy growth which, like cancer, is destroying the very fibre of the nation. "Germany thrives at the expense of the country," he declared. "Individuals mean nothing; the state means everything," and prescribed a radical operation as its only remaining hope. "Italy is suffering from a complaint somewhat similar," he said, but predicted that a hemorrhage might arise and reduce Italy to complete infancy. France Dr. Couch spoke of as a disappointment to us all, a "nation suffering from a degenerate disease, but a nation which might come back if taken away from its night clubs and returned to the soil."

"Democracies, including Canada, are also ill," believes Dr. Couch. "We have lost the fiery spirit that made possible the founding of the United States, and of Canada from Great Britain." He warned that invasion of Canada is not impossible, and quoted Churchill's words "Everything I was taught to think could never happen, has happened."

Since Hitlers secret weapon is his psychological approach, "Our strategy is to destroy the enemy from within," Dr. Couch suggests emphatically that we fight back with a knowledge of psychology, and that the fear and panic aroused by such strategy be replaced with the emotion of angar. "Nothing can down the British civilian population if it is sufficiently angry," he declared.

Dr. Couch believes that the day of the small nation is passing, and outlined a plan for the fusion of the English thinking people of the world. "We are between two ages," said the speaker, "one dying, one coming to birth—all of you have a part in nursing the nation back to health."

..Tribute to Alumnae,

Mrs. E. M. Leeson, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, paid tribute to the Alumnae, and referred to the cordial relations which have existed between the Association and the hospital for the past 19 years, and of the ever-present willingness of its nurses to go out on cases for half-pay when needy patients required their services. A toast to the King was proposed by Miss Vickers; Mrs. Leeson proposed a toast to the absent nurses; Miss Dixon to the training school, and a moment of silence revered the memory of deceased members. Gifts to Miss Nixon on behalf of the Alumnae in appreciation of her interest in the Association, and to Mrs. Eva Breckenridge, past president, as a token of gratitude for her three efficient years of presidency, were presented to Miss Mary Armstrong. Miss Mary Baker expressed thanks to the speaker, to Mrs. H. A. Mitchell, who was heard in two delightful solos, and to Mrs. W. J. Gordon, who was at the piano.

Following a brief executive meeting, bridge was played in the upstairs drawing room.

Air Raids Made Men Work Like Mad, So Trucks Come Fast For Canadians

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—(CP—R. R. Lane of Cornwall told yesterday how he and five Canadian experts in mass production of motor vehicles organized production of army trucks for the Canadian forces in an idle small-car factory in a city in Southern England.

Lane was in England for eight months as chief inspector for Canadian mechanization. The party sailed from an Eastern Canadian port last March 1 and returned six weeks ago.

When they arrived in England, the Canadians found the plant's equipment was not heavy enough for their purposes and the entire plant had to be re-tooled. Production finally began May 14.

The factory was in a port city, not a manufacturing centre, and Lane said trouble was encountered getting skilled labor.

Lane said the factory was located in an area which was raided longer and more heavily than any other part of England, but instead of lowering the workmen's morale, the raids made them "work like madmen," and production increased.

Before the Canadians left, he said, an inspection system was set up and competent English workmen were turning out vehicles on schedule.

Rambling Reporters

THEY FOUND IT

In less than 45 minutes this morning, George street saw three wedding groups. All went well until one of the couples and their attendants stopped to be photographed.

Scarmbling out of the car, the group hustled up the stairs to what they thought was the photographer's studio. For a few minutes all was quiet, and then Russ Kitchen, brother of the groom peered around the corner of the door, and then shouted back upstairs, "Hey, we're in the wrong place." They had ran right up the stairs to a real estate agent's office.

One passerby was heard to say, 'it's a good thing that wasn't an insurance office, because if it was they'd never have gotten out."

The lovely bride was Peggy Primeau, and the groom Nelson Kitchen.—J. W. H.

Mrs. Alex. Murphy Passes In Ottawa

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—(CP).— Mrs. Alex Murphy, of 378 Stewart street, Peterborough, mother of Mrs. O. D. Skelton, wife of the Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, died at the Skelton home here Friday after an illness of two months.

Mrs. Murphy was the last living of a family of ten, six sons and four daughters of John Halliday and Catherine McNab of Springtown in the township of Bagot, Renfrew. William Halliday, a resident of Ottawa for many years, who died in 1925, was one of her brothers.

Her paternal grandfather was John Halliday of the Scotch Line, Perth, the first school teacher in that section of Ontario. He was sent out by the government with the Scottish immigrants of 1816. Her maternal grandfather was Duncan McNab (Auchessan), who when Chief McNab made his settlement headquarters at Arnprior settled on the lot later known as McNab's Grove.

Mrs. Murphy was educated at the public school, Springtown, and the old grammar school of Pakenham, from which she graduated in the year of Confederation, with the certificate locally referred to as the old First. Under the new school law of 1871 these certificates were called in, and Jennie Halliday was the only teacher in Carleton county passing the examination then demanded by the Council of Public Instruction.

She married Alexander Murphy in 1874 and they lived in Antrim, Fitzroy, until his death in 1916. After this she and her daughter Edith moved successively to Arthur and Omemee and in 1921 to Peterborough, which has been Mrs. Murphy's home ever since. She was visiting with her daughter, Mrs. O. K. Skelton, when her last illness came.

Three of Mrs. Murphy's children grew to maturity: Isabel, the wife of O. D. Skelton, Rockcliffe, Dr. H. H. Murphy of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, Victoria, B.C., and Edith Alexandra, who at her death two years ago was the head of the English Department in Peterborough Collegiate.

For a brief motor trip, the bride wore a Persian lamb-trimmed black coat over her blue ensemble. Mr. and Mrs. Slipp will live in Toronto.

Children Learn New Method of Music Education

An idea of the delight with which children study the construction and playing of simple, primitive instruments, thus acquiring a basic knowledge of the main instruments comprising an orchestra, was given members of the Women's Art Association Friday afternoon when they heard Mrs. Eric Jordan tell enthusiastically of her classes in "Melody and Rhythm for your Child and Mine."

The scheme originated in New York a few years ago, Mrs. Jordan explained, and so successful has it become that many centres both here and abroad have enlarged upon the idea, which makes children more than piano-conscious. Many who fare poorly as pianists or violinists reveal a love for the pipes or marimba, showing a desire to further their interests in this direction, she said.

"Whether or not the child continues with his study, a real education is developed in musical history and appreciation," remarked Mrs. Jordan as she proceeded to outline a brief history of early instrument making, and from the work of some of her pupils show how the ideas of the ancient races are utilized in the formation of instruments.

From ordinary nail kegs and cheese boxes covered with parchment, a metal waste basket, cookie tins and cereal boxes had emerged fine-tone drums, man's most primitive instrument, and under the creative hands of the youngsters themselves articles had become of value from an artistic as well as musical point of view. Brilliant Indian designs and colored raffia were used for the decorative note, created and painted by the children themselves, who range in age from six to eight years. Indian rain rattles filled with rice and corn could combine with drums to bring forth an intoxicating rhythm that caught listeners swaying. A three-note marimba and Japanese fiddle, the latter from a cigar box, had to be tuned by the young students.

"The appreciation of good music by every stratus of society has made phenominal strides during the past two decades," Mrs. Jordan told members. "This progress is due in part to the formation of many great orchestras, and the wide and varied selection of their repertoires, but it is generally conceded that the radio has been the greatest stimulant for this rapid growth. No longer do famous conductors direct their genius for a limited few, but rather to an eager listening world suspended in the tiny microphone above their heads."

Mrs. Jordan believes that if the average music lover knew more of the history of the various instruments themselves and their limitations, they would have a greater understanding of the scope and craftmanship of the masters. "Despite the growing tendency of musical appreciation, few of us, while listening to a famous orchestra, stop to think of the tremendous evolution in musical instruments themselves which makes a great symphony possible," she said.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, president of the Association, presented the speaker, who comes from Toronto. The studio meeting was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. A style show and exhibit of Canadian homespuns will be conducted by Miss Joan Hall on November 22nd.

The Stars Say . . .

For Sunday, November 10

Sunday's horoscope presages some rather peculiar or strange circumstances which may be exciting as well as intriguing and may be baneful or propitious according to the strategy with which they are manipulated. The mind may run into wierd channels and if obsessed by erratic notions, some treacherous contacts may be made. Shun questionable and suspicious persons and ideas. Brilliant thinking and literary output should be highly profitable.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which peculiar or intriguing predicaments may have to be unraveled by sound sense and great precaution against being ensnared by tricky, illicit and nefarious schemes. Delusion and bewilderment should give way to the sound creative urges of a stimulated mind.

A child born on this day should have a splendid mental equipment fitting it for outstanding professional or business success. But there are lures of a queer, tricky and pernicious nature to be kept in subjection. It will be impressionable and given to great subtlety and idiosyncracies.

For Monday, November 11

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of great activity and probably much excitement with the energies and mentality quickened to high tension. All the faculties directed toward important programs should culminate in brilliant performance, with results of enduring success. Matters in connection with groups, fraternities, public, political or diplomatic bodies should flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a constructive and highly lucrative year, with their own brilliant acuities pitched to the heights of genius or spectacular performance at its source. The danger lies in an over-enthusiastic, optimistic or extravagant urge to "plunge" or overdo. Curb runaway forces and faculties. Take time to think before leaping into extremes.

A child born on this day may have remarkable intellectual faculties, backed up by great energy, initiative and ingenuity. Such qualities are likely to be exaggerated, high pressured into extravagance and dangerous extremes.

Blemish Proved Way to Success

NEW YORK N.ov. 9. — (CP) — Lydia O'Leary was born with a scarlet birthmark, which almost covered the left side of her face. In high school years she hid in dark corners till everybody else had gone to class and no one could stare at her as she scuttled through the halls.

After she was graduated, weeks of trudging New York streets failed to yield the job she sought as department store stylist. Finally one personnel manager told her the truth: "We can't hire you because of your face.

The confidence she had built up crashed after that and Lydia O'Leary hid in her room, painting bridge prizes an decorations for her living. Then one day she dropped her brush on an iris design, blotched it with dark paint and had to cover it with light paint. The thought struck her: "I can cover my birthmark!"

Using the knowledge of chemistry and art which she had gleaned from her school courses, she experimented feverishly for months and emerged with a cream which coats her mark and which, she says, doesn't crack or rub off. She made a waterproof version for swimming.

Later she had the satisfaction of getting—and keeping—a job in the same department store which had turned her down. Now she manufactures the cream in New York and makes her living as a result of her blemish.

TREAT YOUR HUSBAND AS IF YOU FEAR LOOSING HIM

Too Many Wives Take Their Men for Granted, Never Considering That They Want to Be Loved and Cared for.

Some one once said: "Treat your friend as if he might some day be your enemy." If I could give one tip more valuable than any other to brides, I would copycat the cynic's advice and say: Treat your husband as if you were in perpetual danger of losing him. If they listen to me, they would save themselves a lot of grief, and keep out of the multitude of heartbroken women who are searching frantically around for the husbands they have lost or mislaid somewhere along the matrimonial journey, and whom they suspect some other woman of having purloined from them. Also, it would greatly lessen my labors because it would automatically do away with the necessity of my having to write: "No, I don't know of any way of blowing dead ashes into a flame again." "No, there is no patent nostrum you can slip into a husband's coffee that would cure him of having wandering feet after he once acquired them," to the thousands upon thousands of wives who ask how they can reawaken their husbands' love and make themselves glamorous again in their eyes.

The trouble with wives in dealing with their husbands is that they lock the stable door after the horse is stolen, and then it is too late. They could have kept their husbands in love with them and eating out of their hands if they had taken the trouble to look after them in the first place, but they didn't.

They loafed on their jobs, and after their Toms and Dicks and Harrys have jumped the fence and wandered into green fields and pastures newer, they have no conjure by which they can lure them back again into their own corrals.

Don't Be Too Sure

So I should like to say to the little bride: Don't be too sure of your husband's love. Don't delude yourself into thinking it is something you can't lose, no matter how little care you take of it. Don't think that because you are John's dream girl now he is always going to see you clothed in romance. Don't think that you are not going to have to make any effort to keep the husband that you have struggled so hard to win.

Men's fancies are slippery things, daughter, and because your husband is in love with you on your wedding day is no sign he will still be in love with you 10 years later.

Because he sees you trailing clouds of glory after you during courtship don't think he won't give you a cold and appraising look over after marriage. Don't think you can sit down on the do-nothing stool and do nothing to retain his effections and he will go on burning incense before you.

Keeping her husband in love with her and glad he married her and thinking she is the ONLY woman, is a life sentence at hard labor for any woman to tackle, but it can be done. Whereas resurrecting a dead love and trying to breathe the breath of life into it again is a miracle beyond any woman's power to perform.

So, daughter, forestall disaster by throwing out lifelines. Be so charming to your husband he will never fall out of love with you. Be such an interesting companion he will never have to seek other women for society.

Keep Him Home

Keep him nailed to his own fireside by making that the pleasantest place in the world. Be a lover. Give him the flattery at home that will make that of other women sound flat and thin. Don't let the children put your husband's nose out of joint! Be more wife than mother.

Don't wait until after it is too late to get out your little box of tricks. Don't think that by buying a pink negligee and having her hair waved a woman can blot out from her husband's mind the picture of her sitting across the breakfast table from him in a slovenly house gown and curlers that he has had to look at every morning for years and years.

Don't wait until your husband has turned to his wise and understanding secretary for the sympathy he craves to show him appreciation and enter into all of his hopes and plans. Don't boss your husband and criticize and and nag him and belittle him and expect him to still love you and admire you.

In a word, treat your husband from the very day the clergyman turns him over to you, as you would if you saw the shadow of some marauding female falling across your doorstep.

No husband can be stolen unless he wants to be stolen. Hence, a wife's only defense against the Other Woman lies in keeping her husband thinking she is the ONLY woman.

Margaret Primeau Is Wed To Nelson Kitchen

A charming late autumn wedding took place in Immaculate Conception Church at nine o'clock this (Saturday) morning, when Margaret Primeau, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Primeau and the late John Primeau, and Nelson Kitchen, son of Mr. John Kitchen and the late Mrs Kitchen, were united in marriage by Father J. Walsh. Wedding music was played by Miss Bernice Flynn.

Mr. Jack Primeau gave his sister in marriage. She wore a gown of white embossed marquisette, with Peter Pan collar and leg-o'-mutton sleeves, the bouffant skirt falling gracefully from a slim-fitting waistline. Her net veil fell to her shoulders from a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses and fern. Miss Dorothy Primeau was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing a pastel pink frock designed with slim taffeta bodice and very full skirt of embroidered net. A large flat bow finished the waistline at the back, and she wore a matching hat, and carried a sheaf of pink roses. Mr. Russell Kitchen was his brother's groomsman.

The bridal couple left for Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a beige wool frock under a black topcoat, with black accessories. They will live at 474 Rogers Street on their return.

What! They Want No Pudding?

DARWIN, Australia, Nov. 9.—(CP)—Soldiers at Darwin are receiving from southern comforts organizations many gifts which are useless in a tropical climate.

Consignments to them include woollen scarves, balaclava helmets, and plum puddings.

"Such gifts cannot be used by soldiers who, when working in humid temperatures, wear nothing more than shorts and shoes," the authorties point out.

Their officers consider that apart from presents of cigarettes and tobacco, cases of fresh fruit would serve a far more useful purpose.

Already the commission has turned $6,000.00 over to the town and with the final payment of $3,000.00 which the treasurer has now been authorized to pay the Utilities will have contributed a total of $8,000.00 during the current year towards the reduction of this town's tax rate.

The monthly statement presented by Manager P. C. Denyes showed increases in every department with domestic light leading the way with a net increase on the year to the end of October of $951.73. Commercial light also took a jump, registering a gain of over $528.00 while power and miscellaneous light with increases of $289.25 and $206.40 respectively made a net increase in the light department alone of $1,976.14. With an increase from the water department of another $281.00 total revenues were upped $2,257.94 above 1939.

Only sour note wos the matter of arrears and in order to facilitate book-keeping Mayor Long and Commissioner Davidson sponsored a motion to write off a number of "dead accounts." All members were in agreement with the idea of cutting off the service where accounts were in arrears and to prove that the Commission doesn't forget Chairman Benor related that a former resident who had left town owing a light bill had recently returned and was told that they would have to pay up before being given service again. It was pointed out that arrears were down close to five hundred dollars.

Mayor Long reported on the recent Utilities Convention in Kingston attended by himself and Chairmon Benor as guests of the Public Utilities in that city. Regarded by the Mayor as one of the highlights of the trip was a visit to the recently completed Aluminum Company outside the city. Campbellford's Mayor had the distinction of being one of the first visitors ever permitted to tour the plant.

"Britain Will Survive"—Padereswski

"Britain will survive. But if Britain dies so does America," Jan Ignace Paderewski, greatest of all pianists and one-time president of Poland, told members of the press who were on hand to greet him as he arrived in New York as a refugee on his 80th birthday. On hand to greet Paderewski was Anthony Biddle, U.S. ambassador to Poland.

aged to say finally, and got to her feet. "I—have a luncheon date."

In spite of all she could do her shoulders slumped as she turned toward the door. It was the street for her again, of course. If he had meant to be square, and give her the job, there would have been nothing to "talk over." He would have hired her without further ado.

At the door she turned and with an effort flung back her head.

"I don't think I'd care to work for you, anyhow, Mr. Hardy," she threw at him.

He was on his feet in an instant. With one quick stride he had cleared the desk and was beside her. At sight of his face she cringed and fumbled for the door.

"You little fool!" he ground out, whirling her about to face him. "Did you really think I'd have a girl like you around this office? Don't you think I know all about you? Why be so high and mighty? There's such a thing as a blacklist, you know. And a convict's daughter would certainly stand at the top of the list!"

His leering face was close to hers. He started to smile again, and Lona's anger burst all bonds.

"You filthy beast!" she cried, and shaking off his hand from her arm, she slapped him straight across his stubbly cheek.

Before the blow he recoiled, and his hand went to his face, where a fresh red welt showed. Lona saw fury leap into his eyes.

"Of all the devils—" he almost spat at her. Pulling away from him, her seeking hand found the doorknob. Flinging the door open, she went though, shutting it in his face with a satisfying bang.

For a moment she stood there, her face burning, her breath coming in angry gasps. Over the room, still filled with its quota of hopeful applicants, a hush fell. A sudden hush filled with wondering faces turned her way. Then, from over in the corner by the door, a snicker arose, and spread.

Flinging her head high, Lona edged through them and gained the corridor. With that snicker sounding in her ears she even managed a little smile.

Once outside, her shoulders slumped again, and the tears she had been holding back had their way. The dirty beast! The brute! Why hadn't she picked up something from the desk and hurled it at him? Why hadn't she beat and slapped and kicked and bit until his dirty face was a pulp. . . . A convict's daughter, he had called her. Over and over that phrase rung in her ears until she could have covered them with her hands and ran screaming, to shut out the sound. A convict's daughter. Like acid the charge seemed to burn into her very soul. The cruelty of it, the terrible cruelty!

Stepping from the elevator, she almost ran from the building and struck out blindly up the street, without knowing or caring where she was going. Gone were the high head and the determination with which she had set out only an hour ago. What was the use, something within her was beginning to cry out. What was the use of further striving? There was no job for her. She was crazy to wear herself out hunting. If she did find anything, it would only be temporary. Sooner or later someone would find out about her, and then—a convict's daughter.

At the first corner she paused, and pulling from her purse the list of want ads she had so carefully prepared, she tore it to bits with vicious fingers, and scattered the fragments. With dull eyes she watched the wind catch at them and send them swirling out into the traffic, and a sob shook her as she turned slowly and made for the store where she had checked her suitcase.

She had an impulse to recover it, and then hunt up a railroad station, and go as far as what was left of Jim Claridge's money would take her. Perhaps somewhere, anywhere, away from this ruthless city.

Oh, but there was no use even in that. Everywhere it would be the same. No matter where she went she would still be a convict's daughter. Men were all alike.

Even Jim Claridge! He'd been good to her last night. Why had he, she cried out, in sudden revulsion. Why hadn't he left her there in the park? Nobody could have been as kind as he seemed without a purpose. She saw that now. He probably was only a little more subtle than the rest.

She recalled the white look that had flitted across his face when she had told him about—told him that she was a convict's daughter. And then he had laughed. Yes, he was as bad as the rest. Why hadn't she seen it? He had lulled her suspicions by playing fairy godfather last night. But tonight, if she met him, he, too, would be expecting his pay. They all wanted to be paid, these men! If they gave favors, they expected them back.

Well, she wouldn't see him tonight. She wouldn't give him a chance to turn nasty on her. And she wouldn't hunt for a job any more, either. She'd get her suitcase, find a boarding house somewhere, and then just sit there until her money—Jim Claridge's money, for which she wasn't going to pay, gave out. After that . . . . who cared what happened after that! The park again, probably, or—there always was one way left.

Mussolini Fails In Courting Of Moslem Faith

(By JOHN A. STEVENSON.)

The outcome of the fateful struggle now in progress for the control of the Mediterranean may well depend upon the attitude of Islam, by which is meant the Arabic communities, professing the Moslem faith, who are setled on its southern and eastern shores and in the southwestern corner of Asia. With these communities the French, thanks to the liberality of their outlook upon the color bar, have long enjoyed greater popularity than any othr nation and among them the capitulation of France has created an unfortunate impression that the victory of the Axis powers is inevitable and may not be a calamity for themselves. However, the British have acquired a reputation for just dealing and religious tolerance and as a result have many warm sympathizers and active partisans in this area. But they have also to reckon with a substantial volume of definitely anti-British sentiment; Nationalist extremists in Egypt, like their compeers in Ireland, cannot forgive the long British military occupation of their country, Arabs in Palestine and Syria resent what they regard as the persistent favoritism shown to the Jews in Britain's administration of its mandate over Palestine and certain powerful chiefs in Arabia proper have special grievances of their own.

Italy's Propaganda Campaign

Now the exploitation and enlargement of this anti-British sentiment has been an objective sedulously pursued by the Italians ever since their wanton assault upon Ethiopia strained their relations with Britain and since they entered the war, they have kept their propaganda machine at furious activity, supplementing a barrage of broadcasts and pamphlets in the Arabic tongue with the underground work of Fascist agents well supplied with money for purposes of naked bribery. The theme upon which the Italian propagandists ring the changes is that Britain, long the perfidious oppressor of Islam, is now a decadent power with her final doom approaching and that the Arab race should hitch its wagon to the rising star of Italy a youthfully dynamic and magnanimous nation. Mussolini, always a lover of the theatrical, has lent his undoubted gifts as a showman to this campaign and in March, 1937, he was the central figure at an impressive ceremony in Libya, when, mounted on a white charger, he was solemnly invested with the title of "Protector of Islam" and was presented with "The Sword of Islam" (paid for in Italian funds) by a mounted delegation of 200 Libyan chieftains.

Arabs Recall Brutalities.

But this dramatic performance did not avail to make the Arab population of Libya forget the ruthless brutality with which Marshal Graziani had suppressed a native revolt in Cyrenaica, which is part of Libya, between 1922 and 1929. Leaders of the revolt when captured were taken up in plane and dropped into the Mediterranean, thousands of their followers were killed in battle or summarily executed, hundreds of villages were sacked and burned and their surviving inhabitants herded under miserable conditions into internment camps. The population of Cyrenaica was in these seven years actually reduced from 1,300,000 to 600,00 and this terrible demonstration of the blessings of Italian rule burnt itself deep into the Arab mind and its memory remains a great obstacle to the success of the Italian campaign of propaganda. And the resentment of the whole Moslem world at the effrontery of a Christian in posing as the protector of Islam was pungently voiced by Sheik Mustafa El Maraghi, rector of the great Moslem University in Cairo, who said "The real protector of Islam is Allah and it is not proper to ask the protection of an infidel whose only intention is to use the devoted sons of Allah for his own purposes."

The Drive on Egypt

The said rector is a staunch friend of Britain and his great influence with young King Farouk of Egypt may be very useful to us when the Italian army in Libya delivers its real assault upon the British forces arrayed against it. The Italians think, that if they could penetrate to the banks of the Nile, they could then count upon the co-operation of a well organized "fifth column" of active sympathizers. The Italian community in Egypt, some 60,000 in number, has been mobilized in Fascist cells and although under British pressure the Egyptian Government recently took steps to curb their overt machinations, their underground work goes merrily on. Moreover, they can count upon the help of an extremist native organization called Young Egypt led by one Ahmed Hussein, which has been wrecking Jewish and Greek shops in Cairo and Alexandria and of the sympathy of certain upper-class elements, who were either educated in Italy or felt themselves slighted by British officials and army officers. But fortunately the small traders, who are a large element in the Italian colony in Egypt, have by their greedy ways antagonized the Egyptian peasantry and the mass of the Egyptian people, seeing the fate of Ethiopia, have no illusions about what will happen to them, if their country becomes an Italian protectorate. But at the same time it is essential that Britain should do nothing to impair whatever fund of good-will she has among the Arab peoples and the necessity for its conservation explain why British policy is now taking more consideration of the Arab case in Palestine and why there is being maintained a firm front to the constitutional demands of the Indian Congress Party.

Jewish Refugees Must Not Return To Belgium

BERLIN, Nov. 9—(AP).—A far-reaching law against Jews has been decreed in Belgium by Gen. Von Von Falkenhausen, commander of the Nazi army of occupation, it was reported today.

The chief points of the decree, according to the Dienst Aus Deutschland, are as follows:—

1. Jews who fled from Belgium during the German invasion will not be allowed to return. Local officials must register all Jews over 15 years old.

2. Jewish enterprises, clubs, institutes and other group, as well as factories, land, forest and property belonging to Jews, must be registered by May 1, 1941.

3. Hotels and restaurants owned or operated by Jews must display a sign outside in Flemish, German and Walloon dialect, reading "Jewish business," effective Nov. 30.

4. Jews will not be alowed after Dec. 31 to hold public office. Jewish civil service employees will be pensioned.

It was said that affairs of religious organizations would not be affected by the new rules.

Nazis Writing Lying Letters

OTTAWA, Nov. 9.—(CP).—Young Nazis in Canadian internment camps delight in trying to annoy or irritate authorities by writing "Great Germany" on the outside of letters to their home folks, censorship authorities said to-day.

Another trick is to write letters home which are merely one long complaint, giving the most fantastic stories of life in a Canadian camp.

Under international arrangement, however, the representative of a neutral Government has the right to inspect internment camps in the Dominion at any time he chooses to see that rules governing prisoners of war are carried out. Germany's representative in Canada is the Consul-General of Switzerland.

Under international law prisoners of war are allowed one letter and one card (minimum) a week. In Canada the prisoners are allowed two letters and a card.

Special "letter-cards" are given them under which is printed "prisoner of war mail" and the postage is free for all countries.

London Bombed Why Not Rome Shaw Enquires

LONDON, Nov. 9—(CP).—Bernard Shaw, octogenarian wit and playwright, joined in the "bomb Rome" chorus Friday.

He told the Daily Mirror: "I should not weep if Rome were bombed. London, with its monuments and works of art, good and bad, has been bombed. Why not Rome?"

"Of course this bombing of London or Berlin or Rome is just senseless," Shaw added. "If the idea the Germans have in mind is to exterminate Britain's population it will take 470 years to do so at the present rate. It will take us even longer to exterminate the Germans.

"But, admitting that war is the only way we have at present of settling disputes between nations, there is no reason why Rome shouldn't have it.

"If only people weren't being killed and we could select places to be bombed, I would welcome a German attack on London. They are knocking down a good many things we ought to have knocked down ourselves many years ago.

"I should hate them to bomb Westminster Abbey, but I should be happy for them to bomb some monuments in it."

Then Shaw added:

"The same applies to the House of Commons and its members."

"I am a Grocer"—

"It is my business to give the people of this community the very best in food values, prompt service and courteous treatment. The selection of merchandise that goes on my shelves has a lot to do with my success, so I buy good products that are put up in accordance with well known standards of quality, weight and measure. Buying and selling on the basis of these standards protects my customers and my business.

"I know from experience that good newspaper advertising is the best way to tell people the news of my store. In my opinion, newspaper advertising is not only the most effective way for me to advertise, it is also the safest way. When I spend money in newspaper advertising I make my investment on the basis of verified circulation figures and values that are as well known and important in advertising as the standards of weight and quality that I use in my own business."

THE information which the grocer refers to is found in reports issued by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. This is a national, cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. The work of the Bureau is to furnish advertisers with verified facts about the circulation of its publisher members.

The Bureau has a staff of skilled auditors who pay an annual visit to every publisher member and make a careful audit of the circulation records. Then, for the guidance of buyers of advertising space, the Bureau issues reports based on these audits.

These reports tell how much circulation a paper has, where this circulation goes, how it was obtained and many other facts. When advertising is bought on the basis of such information it becomes an investment in known values.

How Can We Stop R.A.F. If Axis Unable To Stop Them? Swiss Ask

BERNE, Nov. 9—(AP).—Switzerland had an uneasy night of air alarms last night, and at the same time Italy—once full of compliments for this little federation—loosed a violent press and radio campaign against the Swiss.

Twice before midnight the air sirens sounded over Berne and other cities in Western Switzerland. The first alarm came before the nation's lights went out at 10 p.m. under the army's new blackout orders.

But in Italy, where only a day ago the press complimented the Swiss for this blackout order, certain newspapers and radio broadcasts were turned in sudden fury against the Swiss, who were described as "a people of hotel boys, cashbox keepers and chocolate makers."

The press attacks were limited to a number of less important Italian papers—but they did not pull their punches.

"We will place the name of Switzerland—which for months has allowed air violations by enemy aircraft—side by side with that of our detested enemy," said an article in the Popolo di Brescia, written by a former Italian Vice-Consul to Zurich.

Answering Axis attacks on the Swiss for "permitting" Royal Air Force raiders to go unpunished for violations of Swiss territory, some Swiss papers pointed out that British planes which are over German-occupied territory at least three hours are over Switzerland on a half an hour.

If the Axis cannot stop British night raids, they argue, how can the Swiss be blamed?

Fine Spider-Web Doilies You Can Quickly Weave

Your Loom a Cardboard Circle

What a welcome gift a set of these dainty spider-web doilies would be! Or imagine how pretty they'd look on your own table.

You can quickly weave a set, using crochet cotton and home-made "looms," just circles you cut from heavy cardboard.

Around the edge of the loom for the larger doilies cut 16 evenly spaced notches. Paste an end of the thread to centre, then wind thread across loom, around through two adjacent notches and back across loom through two opposite notches.

Continue in this way until thread is wound through every notch. Now you've set up your warp and are ready to weave. Bring cotton to centre, thread through a needle and start weaving in a circle. Work toward edge, passing the needle under each warp thread and making a loop around it as in diagram.

In a jiffy you finish your delicate "web" and, of course, the small doilies are no trick. Cut only 8 notches on their little loom.

Other items you can as easily weave are a lovely evening purse of soutache braid, a smart pillow top of stockings. Our 32-page booklet gives complete directions for these and many other inexpensive items, among them pretty scarves, place mats, belts, afghans, knitting bags.

Send 15 cents in coin or stamps for your copy of HOW TO WEAVE USEFUL NOVELTIES to The Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BLAME ONLY YOURSELF

MANY players are prone to blame their own hard luck for what occurs to them—not only hard luck in the way that opposing cards are located, but in the way that the opponents played the cards. How often we hear someone say, in effect, "If he hadn't made that lead against me, I would have made my contract." Perhaps he could have made his contract anyway, by a bit more astuteness.

Let's take what happened about this contract at several duplicate tables. At one West made the worst spade lead of all, the K. South won with the A, led a heart to East's A, took the next spade when East underled the Q, then ran all the rest of the tricks, counting a successful diamond finesse, and so made three overtricks. At another table it was the same except that, after East won with his heart A, he cashed the spade Q before leading to South, who therefore made only two overtricks.

At a third table West led the spade 8, the Q losing to the A. South sent a heart to the A and East returned a spade. West getting two tricks but blocking the suit, so that South made one overtrick.

At a fourth table West led the spade 10, the best lead. The Q covered and lost to the A. When East won then with the heart A, he led his spade 5 to the J and K, and West returned the 8 to the 9, giving East a chance to run enough spade tricks to set the contract.

Poor South was downcast about being the only player who encountered that defense. But it was his own fault. When East returned the spade 5, he might have played low. West could have won that trick with the 8 or K. If with the latter, he would then have had to present South a trick with the J, and if he won it with the 8, his K would have blocked the suit and South therefore would have made his contract plus an overtrick. But suppose East had held the K and returned that 5 anyway? Then South's play would have been the J. That raises the question of how likely East would have been to do that with such a holding. Your guess is as good as anyone's else.

Oratory Honors Go To Zion Pupil

MILLBROOK, Nov. 9—(ENS). — The public speaking contest for Millbrook and South Cavan drew a large and appreciative audience to the Town Hall on Wednesday at 8 p.m., ex-Warden Percy Stinson, representing the local school board, occupying the chair.

Thelda Hubbeard of Zion School, Miss Gladys Williamson teacher, won first place her theme, handled in good voice and with an entire absence of prompting, being "The History of the Flag." There had been no entries for the North Cavan contest, which should have been held at Ida on October 21, but one pupil, John Tinney, R. A. Sutton teacher, entered Wednesday evening, his subject being: "Health, the most important object of my life." This boy, being the sole entrant from North Cavan, will receive a prize for first standing.

The pupils of the several schools in the territory covered by Millbrook and South Cavan, under their musical supervisor, Homer Oulette, sang a number of times during the program, and also led in the opening number "O Canada," and the singsong which followed the chairman's words of welcome.

Hope Douglas did remarkably well with her presentation of "A Well-known present day statesman, Winston Churchill," this pupil coming from Whitfield's School, Miss H. Thompson, teacher. The four pupils who had won first and second standing in the recent elimination contest at the Millbrook public school, out of 21 contestants, competed again on Wednesday evening; the list including: Conrad Stinson, "How I helped the Red Cross"; Gertrude Forsyth, "What the Red Cross stands for"; John Hicks, "The History of the Flag"; and June Miller, "The progress made by agriculture in the last fifty years."

Theldo Hubbeard will compete once more in the county elimination contest at Millbrook on Friday, November 8, at 8 p.m., when the chair will be taken by the president of the Durham County Ratepayers' and Trustees' Association, W. J. F. Rickard, of Bowmanville. The judges on Wednesday evening were the staff of the local Continuation school: Miss Flora E. Morgan, Miss Shirley Buckingham, and Miss E. Berry, and reported a difficult task in reaching their decision as all contestants had made an exceptionally high mark under the various headings of the score cards.

A regrettable feature was the fact that prizes were not on hand to be presented, but this will be done at the county competition on Friday evening. The lack of interest, apparently, made the number of contestants small, and it is hoped the teachers and parents will co-operate in overcoming this handicap before another year's competition takes place.

Both speakers recalled the epic of Dunkirk as an example and inspiration to Canadians. At Dunkirk Britain had attempted and performed the impossible, said Mr. Jutras.

Mr. Hanson complimented the mover and seconder and asked permission to move adjournment of the debate. He said he had hoped to make his contribution yesterday but other events intervened and left him unprepared.

Before the address was taken up, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, answering questions in a voice hoarse and unnatural because of slight throat infection, told the House he would table next Tuesday correspondence between Canada and the United States on recent St. Lawrence river negotiations.

Mr. Hanson also asked the Prime Minister if he cared to make any comment on yesterday's report from Washington that President Roosevelt had promised half the American output of planes and munitions would go to Canada and Great Britain.

"May I say to my honorable friend that what he has just read is the first intimation I have had of any report of the kind," Mr. King replied.

Mr. Claxton moved the time-honored motion—that the following address be presented to the Governor-General:—

"May it please Your Excellency: We, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the House of Commons of Canada in Parliament assembled, beg leave to offer our humble thanks to Your Excellency for the gracious speech which Your Excellency has addressed to both Houses of Parliament."

Next to Great Britain, Mr. Claxton said, "Canada is the strongest power facing the enemy to-day." He referred to the 200,000 men" who had answered the call to service but stressed the need for trained men and women in production capacities.

"Priorities must be established," he said, referring to the production demands on Canada. We are already training many workers; we shall have to train more.

"We might start in now with 100,000 additional men and an additional 100,000 women and find a year from now that we had not trained half enough."

Mr. Claxton said the time was coming when the Government would have to indicate to the people the extent of their duty in the war effort. He was sure nothing more would be needed.

"While we supported national participation (in the war) we are only beginning to translate national sentiment into personal action," he said.

"Few of us have yet begun to give up things we like, still less things we need.

"Unless we also tighten our belts our effort will fall short of what is necessary to stop the Nazis. We must consume less, save more and steadily invest in War Savings Certificates and War Loans."

Mr. Claxton urged the government to spend not less than $1,000,000 a year on attracting tourists, and placed great hope in the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference on the Sirois report.

Mr. Jutras urged the government to consider the plight of 3,000,000 farm residents and 2,000,000 more whose prosperity depended upon that of the farm producers.

Around him as he spoke behind closed doors in the Lowenbraeu beer cellar were leaders of the party and survivors of both the 1923 putsch and the bomb explosion which rocked Buergerbrau Hall a year ago only a short time after Hitler had left. He made no mention of that incident last night.

Be No Compromise

The Fuehrer rejected all thought of compromise in the war and declared:

"I imagine that I am not only the hardest man which the German nation has had for decades, perhaps centuries, but in addition I possess the greatest authority.

"I have no munitions shares in my possession, I earn nothing from this war . . . these international criminals are at the same time the greatest munitions profiteers there are. The factories belong to them. They make the business. They are the same people we had earlier in Germany."

(In New York the National Broadcasting Company said its Berlin office reported cancellation of the broadcast was ordered by Hitler personally.)

He threatened Britain with intensified air and submarine warfare and declared: "We will see who is blockaded in a few months: we or the others."

The anniversary today has been designated as a "work day," and ceremony was dispensed with so that Germans may concentrate on the war effort.

Steak and Onions In Demand, M.P.'s Eat Too Fast, Says Chef

By GLADYS ARNOLD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 9 (CP)—Canada's parliamentarians are hearty beefeaters. Chef Louis Martin of the parliamentary restaurant and cafeteria says they like substantial meals without too many frills.

"A thick, juicy steak, rare and with plenty of onions, that's what they like best," Chef Martin told The Canadian Press today. But he shook his head over the speed with which the nation's legislators tuck away their food.

They want their service fast. Then they eat fast and according to the chef they think while the eat. In Louis' opinion that isn't good for the digestion but in spite of that only a few of them are on diets.

Reopening of parliament meant the ordering of hundreds of pounds of meat and vegetables, and hundreds of loaves of bread for the big kitchens on the sixth floor of centre block of the parliament buildings.

The restaurant caters to tastes that vary depending on the section of the country that patrons come from.

Seasonal nature of the work of parliamentary catering would make staff training difficult were the restaurant not so popular. For years now the staff, though hired only during the session, have been watching the papers for the announcement of parliament's opening date. Then they simply show up at the restaurant before opening day.

They put on their uniforms and go back to work. Some have been coming back for 17 years, from all over the country. One waitress wrote this year she would leave a permanent job to come, if only for a month or two.

Chef Louis, who prepared all the food for the receptions at Rideau Hall during the royal visit in 1939, is proud of the fact his father was the personal chef of King Edward VII and chef in the home of Lord Curzeon and the Duke of Richmond.

Marilyn Ford Wins In Public Speaking

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 9. — (ENS)—Seven pupils competed in the oratorical contest held at Flemmings School, U.S.S. 12 on Wednesday evening when a large number of parents and friends were present to learn who would represent the school at the township finals to be held in Campbellford on Friday evening. There were five girls entered in the contest and two of them, Marilyn Forde and Lois Waters, were selected to speak in Campbellford. Marilyn, who was awarded first place, spoke on "The Black Diamond that Comes to Life," and Lois described the work of the "Honey Bee." The judges, Miss Frances Lynch, Miss Jean Tubbs and Mr. Angus Todd, awarded third place to George Forde, who chose "Cocoa" as his topic while the other four speakers, Ruth Waters, Julia McConnell, Jack Lewis, Dorothy Fleming and Phylis Dunk were not told their standing.

Mr. Arnold Bates, teacher at Flemming's School, was chairman of the programme which began with a chorus of "O Canada" and included recitations by Jean Fisher, Florence Brown, Harold Johnson, Mary Lewis, and a one act play entitled "The Magic Candlestick."

Each speaker was presented with a cash award comprising the two dollars contributed for the purpose by the Women's Institute Branch plus an equal amount raised by a silver collection during the evening which meant each received something over seventy cents. Another interesting feature of the evening was the presentation of books and narcissus bulbs by Mr. Bates to the three winners of the school's agricultural scrap book contest—Everett Brown, Lois Waters and Donald Lewis.

British bombers also flew 1,300 miles to attack industrial areas in northern Italy and so far as is known at present returned to their base without loss.

Completed Address.

MUNICH, Nov. 9.— (AP).—Informed German sources admitted to-day that British bombs fell on Munich last night "some time after" Hitler had addressed his Nazi party comrades in a speech commemorating the 17th anniversary of the abortive beer cellar putsch in 1923.

They claimed that Hitler had completed his address in which he declared that Germany is "prepared for the future as never before," and "strong enough to meet any combination in the world" before the Royal Air Force raiders arrived.

The Berlin sources said Munich citizens were forced to take shelter in their cellars during the raid.

(The British press and the British Broadcasting Corporation earlier had declared that R. A. F. raids forced cancellation of the broadcast.)

British Rejoice

The British public was pubilant over an air ministry announcement that Munich was bombed last night during the time Hitler was making a speech in commemoration of his abortive beer cellar putsch in 1923.

The public already had been told the speech was cancelled, presumably because of the proximinity of that a German plan to broadcast Royal Air Force raiders. It is usual for German radio stations to get off the air at the time British raiders are expected, so that the R.A.F. pilots cannot use the station's signals as navigation beams.

The speech itself, regarded as the usual Nazi wind-bag stuff, received secondary treatment in the morning press which gave first play to President Roosevelt's announcement that Britain would get half the output of the United States defence industries.

attacking Greek mountain troops were credited today with throwing the Italian invasion machine into reverse along the whole 100-mile Greek-Albanian frontier fighting line.

The high command reported the Greek gains were greatest on central battlefront, where part of the bow the Italians bent in the Greek front line was straightened out, and in the deepening Greek wedge into Albania around encircled Koritza.

The Greeks were said to have captured more hills around the strategic Italian base at Koritza, possibly in preparation for a final onslaught against strong Fascist forces reported cut off in the fortified city.

(Reports from Yugoslavia said the Greeks were encountering fierce resistance in the Koritza sector, but had made some gains in a drive at Seba Gora, mountain village to the northeast.

Five officers, including the Commanding General of Mussolini's Centaur Division, were reported last night to have been captured in Greek mountain ambushes in the northern wilds of the Pindus mountains.

Italians cut off and taken prisoner there were said to have brought to 2,500 the number of Fascist troops captured in 13 days of fighting.

Toward the Ionian Coast, where the artillery - supported Italian drive at Ioannina forced the defenders back earlier in the week, some of the lost ground was reported regained by the Greeks.

Airmen Not So Active

Last night's high command communique noted a let-up in Italian air attacks and said "enemy aviation activity was unimportant" yesterday with only one village bombed.

(A Rome radio broadcast seeking to excuse the slowness of the Italian invasion, attributed it to Fascist "generosity" and added: "Greece recently has been given time to come to her senses.")

Britain Makes Ready

Fierce Struggle Is Being Forecast By British Leaders

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(CP Cable.)—Britain is sending to the Near East every man, gun, tank and plane that can be spared from the defense of this country in anticipation that it will develop this winter into a major theatre of war.

An informed source said Britain would strike at the Axis in the Near East at the earliest possible moment, but meanwhile it would be necessary to build up forces and equipment to hold Egypt at all costs.

Fierce Struggle.

"We are now at the beginning of what will be a fierce, protracted struggle in the Middle East," a military source declared. Britain, he continued, has four primary objectives in this area:

1. To reinforce land and air forces to the limit of industrial production and shipping facilities.

2. To hold Egypt at all costs because of the strategic importance of Suez and Alexandria as a naval base for the eastern end of the Mediterranean.

Heavy Blows Struck At Axis Targets By British Bombers

LONDON, Nov. 11 — (CP). — British bomber pilots, battling ice and storms, struck blows at the Axis last night "from the Baltic to the Bay of Biscay," the Air Ministry reported to-day.

Their assignments sent them as far as the once free city of Danzig, their deepest thrust across Germany, it said.

The great Krupp armament works in Germany, the Fokker airplane plant in German-held Holland, Nazi ports and air bases, docks, shipping and industrial centres were bombed in extensive operations, the statement said.

Targets named in it included oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, Bremen, Krupps works at Emden, Mannheim, Dresden, the Fokker factory at Amsterdam, shipping at Kiel and at the Rhine River port of Duisberg; railroad junctions at Danzig, Desau, Munster, Mannheim, and Dresden; the "invasion ports" of L'Orient, Cherbourg, Le Havre, Dunkirk, and Flushing, and 14 air bases.

The raids on the Channel coast, it said, followed Sunday daylight bombardments of shipping in the German-held French harbors of Calais and Boulogne.

Five Planes Lost.

Five British planes, it acknowledged, have not returned. The forays were carried out by the bomber command despite "severe electrical storms and icing conditions," the Ministry said.

This was the first British raid on Danzig, in the one-time Polish Corridor and now one of Germany's easternmost cities.

Authoritative sources said the flight of more than 1,400 miles round trip, was the longest yet undertaken by the R.A.F. across Germany and German-occupied territory.

That distance was measured by the shortest line from the East Anglian coast, the nearest British jumping off place. It meant twice crossing the North Sea and flying out and back over the Netherlands and Northern Germany, crossing

Germans Endeavor To Break Up Armistice Services

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(CP)— The Royal Air Force successfully beat back three waves of 150 German raiders today as they tried to reach London in Armistice Day attacks.

More than 100 planes, following up a fierce night attack, participated in the first assault, crossing the coast in two formations. In the second thrust, 50 fighter-bombers crossed the Kent coast.

Royal Air Force fighters swept into battle and while thousands of persons stood in silence to commemorate the 22nd anniversary of the first Great War armistice, a fierce sky battle of this war raged above. The usual official armistice observances in London were abandoned because of air raid dangers.

Only Four Reached Capital

Only four invading planes got as far as the capital itself and they concentrated on the Thames Estuary area, where ground defenders sent up a heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire to greet them.

Several persons were killed by a bomb which wrecked a group of houses in the night. Seven bodies were recovered and a woman and a child were among those still entombed.

Another bomb hit part of a trench shelter in the grounds of a London technical college. Several persons were killed, but more than a hundred others were unhurt.

The all-clear signal ending London's first daylight alarm sounded after a short time but a second alert came within a few minutes.

An all-clear signal heralded the end of the second raid of the day

British Squadron Of Fighters Shot Down Thirteen

LONDON, Nov. 11—(CP).—British fighter planes shot down 26 Axis raiders—13 Italian and 13 German—in widespread air battles over Britain today, the Government announced.

"Our losses remain at two," said the brief Ministry of Information announcement, reporting the air warfare score up to 5 p.m. (12 noon EDT).

The Italian planes downed—seven bombers and six fighters—were the first bagged over England.

They participated in an Axis Armistice Day air parade which set off six alarms in the capital. The sixth, heralding the nightly darkness raid, sounded a short time after the last daylight "raiders passed" signal at dusk.

Announcing an earlier tally of eight Italian planes felled, a communique said they were shot down by a single R.A.F. Hurricane fighter squadron which intercepted them in "an attempted attack on shipping" off the Thames Estuary. It said "there were no British losses in this combat."

(The Rome newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia announced Saturday that a "tremendous air bombardment of England and her Allies" would be loosed by the Italian air force as a reprisal for the alleged killing of civilians in recently intensified British air raids on Italy.

(Italian reports previously had said that a "tremendous" Italian air base has been established near the French coast of the English Channel).

Greeks Annihilate Large Units Of Alpine Division

By MAX HERRELSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

ATHENS, Nov. 11 (AP) — The Italian invaders of Greece "have lost the battle in all sectors and are retreating in disorder toward Albania," the Greek radio declared today.

Thus the radio summarized the series of Greek successes which it said had been won in 15 days of warfare "despite the superiority of the Italian forces."

The Greek successes included defeat of Italy's Alpine Centaur division, which had trained for a year in Albania for a lightning attack on Greece.

Snow Turns Into Slush

Greek confidence grew apace as the first downpours of the four-month winter rainy season made slush of snow in the mountain passes, deepened the mud in the lowland roads and threatened to bog down mechanized war.

Principal gains announced today by the high command were in the Pindus mountains, central section of the border battlefront, where the Italian Alpine division was trapped in an attempted drive toward Metsovon, northeast of Ioannina.

What was left of the division was reported retreating in disorder, leaving behind uncounted dead and almost all its equipment—even medical supplies.

Planned Quick Blow

"With this large unit," a communique declared, "the enemy planned to deal a quick, decisive blow at our forces in Epirus....We launched a series of counter attacks which we pressed with stubbornness over hard terrain and through bad weather conditions.

Il Duce Sends In Leading General To Take Over Drive

ROME, Nov. 11—(AP). — Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, 57-year-old veteran of every Italian military campaign since 1900, has taken command of the Fascist invasion of Greece, apparently under instructions from Premier Mussolini to get the broken effort back into high gear.

General Soddu, Mussolini's Undersecretary of War, went to Albania in a change which the Fascist editor Virginio Gayda declared yesterday meant the campaign would be speeded at once.

(British dispatches Saturday from Athens said captured Italian officers reported that Gen. Visconti Prasca had been in charge of the Italian campaign in Greece).

At the same time, the Italians announced their first use of cavalry in the battefront mountains. Mounted detachments were claimed to have struck swiftly into the Northern Epirus in the vicinity of the Vojousa River, and to have captured Greek artillery and arms.

(This was at variance with Greek reports which said the Italians were checked on all parts of the front

Oil Wells Are Ravished By Quakes

Oil Fields Are Licked Up Tremendous Fires

By ROBERT ST. JOHN
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 11 (AP)—Earthquakes without equal in the written history of Rumania ravaged the Nazi-controlled oil wealth of the kingdom yesterday and today, tore up the transport system, knocked down buildings and weighed in the unpredictable military future of southeastern Europe.

At least 1,000 to 2,000 persons were dead; the injured and homeless uncounted, and new shocks prolonged the terror and increased the desolation.

The grey-clad soldiers of Germany, who have poured into Rumania for weeks for a purpose known only to Hitler and his confidantes, became in a few quivering seconds rescuers, fire-fighters and guardians of what order was left.

Oil fields on which Hitler has counted for the fluid without which mechanized war cannot be waged were licked by flame and littered with the splinters of their wooden derricks.

The rails and bridges and roads over which the German troops have been moving south and east and west through Rumania were twisted and split apart.

No one knew what had happened underground to the dark deposits of oil. In some places where oil never had been found before it oozed through fissures in the ground, indicating a widespread shifting in existing pools. In one area, near Ploesti, sulphur fumes

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 11 (AP)—Greece's youth is helping to keep essential services going behind the line while their fathers, brothers and uncles are fighting at the front.

The youngsters are the "eons"—the Greek equivalent of boy and girl scouts — comprising teen-age boys and girls under the orders of Premier John Metaxas.

Their bright blue uniforms are seen everywhere as they work in regular six-hour shifts with the police, guiding civilians to air raid shelters, patrolling the streets after curfew, caring for the wounded, housing refugees and distributing food and clothing.

Less than two weeks ago they were in the secondary schools. Today they have more serious work.

If a new air-raid shelter is to be dug, they dig it. If drivers are needed for trucks, they drive. If ships are being unloaded, they help out.

Many of the "Eon" girls do voluntary nursing, often staying in the streets during air raids to aid the wounded. Others do the hardest kind of drudgery in canteens, hospitals and kitchens, scrubbing floors and cleaning up.

Chamberlain Passes

Man Who Worked For Peace, Is Dead

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(CP)—Plans for a public memorial service—possibly in Westminster Abbey—were being arranged today for Neville Chamberlain who died Saturday amid the bomb-strewn wreckage of his dream for "peace in our time."

The tall, lean statesman who led Britain from the Munich appeasement through the first 8½ months of war with Germany resigned as Prime Minister May 10 after the British withdrawal from Norway and stepped from his last cabinet post little more than a month ago an exhausted, ill man.

He died at 5:30 p.m. Saturday (12:30 EDT) at his Hampshire countryside estate where the grounds near his rambling 16th century home have been pock-marked by Nazi bomb craters. He was 71.

At the wish of the family, his death was not announced until Sunday morning—after parishioners at the neighborhood church had prayed for his recovery.

At evening services, the Rev. H. R. P. Tringham said in eulogy:

"Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God, and no one has worked harder for our peace. Although his work seemed a failure, it was a grand failure."

That and the press praise of Chamberlain as an "honest statesman" who did his best to save peace without attempting to sidestep criticism of the results of his policies

Ald. Stocker Ardent Trustee, Dies

Never Spared Himself When Working In Interests Of City

The municipal administration of Peterborough suffered its third loss within the last four weeks in the sudden death of Alderman Walter Stocker during the noon hour on Saturday.

In distressingly swift succession City Clerk Armstrong, Roland Denne, member of the Utilities Commission, and Alderman Stocker, chairman of the Parks Committee for eleven years, have died in office since Tuesday, October 15. The length of their combined service, measured in time, was about ninety years. Preceding them by what now seems only a few weeks, George Grange, caretaker of the city hall, succumbed to a comparatively brief illness, extending the series of deeply personal shocks to Peterborough's administrative and executive family and beyond them to the entire community to which these men had given in their own separate and different ways invaluable effort and thought and accomplishment.

28 Persons Lost When Boats Collide In Bay

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 11 — (CP Cable).—Details were still lacking here today of how 28 persons were believed drowned when a motorboat collided with another small boat in Conception Bay. A snowstorm which obscured vision was believed responsible for the crash last night.

With 29 men and three women aboard, the motorboat Garland plunged to the bottom after it was holded in the collision with the Golden Dawn. The Garland was acting as a ferryboat between Bell Island and the mainland.

According to reports today reaching here, 15 miles from the scene of the accident, only four men aboard the Garland were saved. They were picked up by the captain of the Golden Dawn who was the only one aboard his vessel.

William and James Quilty, Norman Ash and Gerald Tucker were picked up by the Golden Dawn. The bodies found were those of Hector Tucker and a Mrs. Clement.

Seventeen others are known definitely to have been passengers on the Garland, while another nine were believed to have been aboard the little ship.

Several vessels from Conception Bay ports joined in the search last night for possible survivors or bodies but choppy water and the snowstorm hampered the search.

Quake Shakes Russia

Moscow, Nov. 11 (AP)

EARTH TREMORS, the strongest ever recorded in Moscow, were reported today to have damaged some southern Russian cities yesterday, particularly Kiev and Odessa.

Striking at the same time as the tremors which devastated thousands of buildings in Rumania, the earthquake awakened many persons here and cracked the walls of some buildings, but did no serious damage, the siesmological institute announced. No casualties were reported.

AA Gunners Bag 357 Nazi Planes

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(CP).—Anti-aircraft gunners have shot down 357 German bombers and fighters—a seventh of the total German losses over Great Britain—during the last thirteen weeks, the Air Ministry announced Saturday.

The Ministry said: "These figures do not tell the full story of the damage inflicted on the German air force by anti-aircraft fire. There are 'winged' bombers that may just manage to limp home, but crash in landing, while others may be out of service for several weeks.

"The fate of these planes can never be known to our vigilant gunner crews."

Fast Messerschmitts, as well as the slower Heinkels and Dorniers, have been hit, the Ministry said.

British Ship Is Attacked

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP).—A distress call from the British freighter Balmore 1,925 tons, saying she had been bombed by German planes some 300 miles west of Ireland, and was in danger of sinking, was reported to-day in a message received in New York from the Japanese liner Fushimi Maru.

(There was no confirmation from any other sources.)

The Balmore's call gave her position as 52 north latitude, 17 west longitude, the message said. It was in this area that the 26,032-ton Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan was bombed Saturday, suffering only slight damage.

The Fushimi Maru, carrying homeward-bound Japanese refugees from Britain, also heard the Empress of Japan's wireless report of Saturday's attack.

Red Commissar Berlin Bound

Molotoff Accepts Hitler Invitation For Conference

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—(AP).—Soviet Russia's Premier-Foreign Commissar, Vyascheslaff Molotoff, sped toward Berlin to-day for discussions which some sections of the German press suggested might centre on the problem of British-guaranteed Turkey, guardian of the Dardanelles.

Informed sources said Molotoff was expected to reach Berlin sometime to-morrow afternoon. Foreign Minister Ribbentrop will accompany the Soviet entourage on the main part of their train ride through the eastern Reich to the capitol, these sources added.

The National Zeitung stated last night, a short time after Molotoff left Moscow by rail amid considerable ceremony, that the Turkish question lay within the scope of conference, scheduled to open aerly this week, perhaps to-morrow.

Because of the controlled nature of the German press this assertion took on the aspects either of a deliberate untruth or an authoritative declaration of what was to come up in the discussions. Dienst Aus Deutschland commented that Molotoff's visit, made on Germany's invitation, indicated that the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance "had found a welcome reception" in Moscow.

(From Rome came word that Italy's Foreign Minister Ciano might attend the Berlin conference, although there was no mention of this in Berlin or Moscow. Rome observers also mentioned the possibility of a discussion of the Turkish question, as did neutral sources.)

All press comments on the German-Russian discussions, however, were tempered with the caution that nothing too revolutionary should be expected.

(Molotoff, accompanied by a staff of 33 experts on foreign affairs, internal affairs, commerce, aviation and industry, left Moscow at 6:40 p.m. (11:40 a.m. EDT) yesterday. Also aboard the train were Count

Peace Talks Are Postponed

De Gaulle Lands Force In French Equatorial Africa

VICHY, FRANCE, Nov. 11.—(AP).—Peace negotiations between defeated France and victorious Germany will be postponed until the war is ended, Vice Premier Pierre Laval has announced to his nation.

Laval, in an official note issued last night after he returned from a conference in Paris with Goering, said there never was any question of negotiating peace to end the armistice, which now prevails, so long as the war continues elsewhere.

The note also added a criticism of the actions of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the free French forces. Laval returned from the Paris conference in time to hear official reports that the De Gaulle forces are fighting a "full-fledged" war in Gabon, French equatorial Africa.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation reported in a French language broadcast that the De Gaulle forces had landed at Libreville, French equatorial Africa, taken over French Gabon. The broadcast quoted the Leopoldville radio in the Belgian Congo as saying that "all Gabon is united under the standard of free France.")

Gen. Tenu, commander-in-chief of the French forces at Libreville, reported to Vichy, however, that nothing" would make the besieged capital of Gabon surrender. The General claimed De Gaulle was being aided by British forces.

Laval, in his note issued after a cabinet session, asserted British radio announcements which said that parts of French territory were to be abandoned to Germany constituted an attempt "to ruin the only attempt we can make toward obtaining the best possible peace."

The French war ministry, meanwhile, issued a long account of what happened from the day the Germans attacked France last May until the armistice and disclosed that defeat was considered certain as early as June 12, two days before the Nazi entry into Paris.

Rescuers Are Trapped By 2nd Quake

Oil Wells Are Ablaze Thousands Killed As Whole Land Shaken

By ROBERT ST. JOHN
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 11 (AP).—Thousands fled from homes and offices in mid-morning today as several new earth tremors shook Bucharest, toppling balconies while explosions and fires in ruins of an apartment block where nearly 200 still are entombed killed an undetermined number of Iron Guard rescue workers.

Flames spread through the debris from bursting gasoline tanks, sealing the doom of all those trapped within, and it was impossible to learn how many men searching for victims had gone to their deaths.

The known death toll from Sunday morning's quake, the worst Rumania has ever known, mounted steadily as communications were re-established with provinces where village after village reported fatalities, but officials still were reluctant to admit that the final total would be more than 1,000 to 2,000.

The quake, beside destroying whole villages, levelled masses of buildings in Bucharest and set raging fires in rich Rumanian oil fields.

Property damage mounted into many millions of dollars in the 5,000-square-mile area affected by the three-minute temblor, which left thousands injured, homeless and terror-stricken.

Aid In Rescue Work

Tens of thousands of German soldiers quartered in the kingdom pitched in swiftly to help Iron Guardists, firemen, police and Rumanian troops in the rescue work, which was hampered seriously by broken communications, including almost complete suspension of rail traffic because of collapsed bridges and buckled tracks.

(Some neutral military observers considered the damage might constitute a stiff blow to possible German plans to move large numbers of troops through Rumania for a Balkan campaign. They also pointed out the damage to oil fields might slow down the flow of Rumanian oil to the Nazi military machine.)

The quake, whose epicentre was in Focsani, a city of 50,000 in the eastern Carpathian foothills about 100 miles north of Bucharest, struck at 3:39 a.m. (9:39 p.m. Saturday, EDT).

Focsani and Galati, a city of 102,000 population on the Danube, were believed to have been the worst hit cities.

Bucharest's newest and most modern apartment building, a 10-storey structure, collapsed at Thevery beginning of the quake and officials estimated 300 men, women and children were trapped in the wreckage.

Rescue workers shovelled frantically in an effort to reach groups trapped in an air raid shelter beneath the 20-foot pile of rubble. By some freak, the telephone in the shelter worked long enough for a call to police headquarters for help.

30 Bodies Recovered

Thirty bodies had been recovered last night from the wrecked building and 15 persons were brought out barely alive. Two others were found conscious.

"It took about two minutes for the building to fall," a newsboy who saw it related. "All that time I heard the horrible sound of human screams. Then came sudden silence."

Campina, a thickly-populated town about 100 miles northwest of Bucharest, was reported to be "in ruins," with fierce fires raging in refinery plants, including those of Romana-Americana, a subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Ploesti, an important oil centre nearer the capital, also was hard hit, while hundreds of roofs and large buildings collapsed in Brasov, historic German Transylvanian city, killing some and injuring a great many.

Nearly all theatres and public buildings were reported levelled in the hard-hit cities of Galati and Focsani, and scores of bodies were said to have been located already at Galati, a Rumanian submarine base. The cathedral, Greek church, largest factory and railroad station were reported in ruins there.

The royal palace suffered in Bucharest some damage, but King Mihai and Queen Mother Helen were outside the quake area, at the summer palace in Sinaia.

ing the fifth Armistice Day alarm. Five persons were entombed by one bomb which wrecked three houses and all were believed to have been killed.

Reverting to the mass air attacks of the earlier stages of the siege, the raiders hit the coast in such big waves that many were able to streak inland past Britain's defending fighters.

On one occasion one raider, on another five and again 20 flew across the capital.

Air battles could be heard in many places while Britons stood with bared heads beneath misty skies to honor the dead of the last war on the 22nd anniversary of the broken peace of 1918.

The day raiders, although harassed by the capital's intermittent barrage, dropped heavy bomb loads on London.

One demolished two houses, injured a woman and three children. Another salvo fell opposite a school but caused no damage. A third wrecked a saloon and bowled over a bus. A bank and some stores also were hit.

Outclassed Completely

The ministry said France was outclassed completely by Germany in numbers of trained men, equipment and industrial production, and asserted that although the retreat to the south was ordered on June 12, the government decided not to ask for cessation of hostilities immediately because of the British.

At the beginning of June, the account said, the French had lost 38 divisions in the north and on June 11, between the Maginot line and the sea, had but nine normal divisions, nine incomplete divisions, 11 divisions reduced by half, one almost completely destroyed.

Britain, the ministry said, supplied only 10 divisions while Germany was creating 43 new ones and added:—

"This slowness of English effort is one of the capital causes of the qualitative and even quantitative disproportion between the forces," the statement claimed.

Nation Did Not Pause

The nation was to busy with the grim business of manufacturing war machinery to pause for even the customary two-minute silence, so there was no official Armistice Day service.

Instead of prayers and the singing of hymns, the roar of traffic provided an accompaniment for the usual pilgrimage of the band of faithful widows and wives of crippled veterans who deposited floral offerings varying from single limp poppies to extravagant wreaths and then disappeared from the scene made grim by rolls of barbed wire and other means of defence which the city prepared after the Dunkirk evacuation.

The men of Dunkirk also were remembered by a woman who laid a sprig of flowers alongside the Princess Pats wreath, which was placed there by Jenny MacGregor Morris, known to Canadian soldiers of the last war as "Mother of the Princess Pats."

In Jenny's handwriting the card on the wreath gave a pledge that the new generation of Princess Pats "are holding high the torch you handed" and two of the youngest members of the unit came to London to lend personal assurance.

Cpl. W. J. Shaw, Chasé, B.C., and Pte. L. W. Swift, Victoria, were given special leave at the written request of Jenny to attend the informal ceremony. A late train arrival prevented them visiting the Cenotaph with Jenny but they came along later, marched side by side to the shaft, saluted, and then, as a score of onlookers stepped out of the way, moved the front of their regiment's wreath, saluted, clicked their heels, turned and walked away.

Unit's Mascot Invalided Home

An Eastern Canadian Port, Nov. 11 (CP)—A bounding Airedale with a crooked ear and an enthusiastic bark sniffed at the Canadian breeze and wagged his tail.

"He's glad he's back home again," said Private Emile Tinperio, Montreal, who has charge of Corky, friendly mascot of a Toronto Scottish regiment, now serving in England. "Sure he knows he's home," declared Tinperio, with certainty, as he hooked the dog on a leash and prepared to disembark from a big liner which had arrived from a United Kingdom port.

Corky is being invalided home. Not that Corky himself is ill, but the officer who owns him has returned to Canada for treatment. So he brought Corky with him, and as Corky officially shows on the regiment's muster, the dog has been put on the "invalid" list to comply with formalities.

Corky learned a lot about soldiering when he was in England. He learned, too, to distinguish between the explosion of dropping bombs and the crash of "Ack Ack" guns. When he heard the anti-aircraft guns he wagged his tail. When he heard the bombs dropping he growled in disapproval. "Yes, Sir, Corky is a real soldier," declared Tinperio.

Know Desert Warfare.

The source said the biggest advantage held by Allied forces in the Near East was their knowledge of desert warfare. The force consists of troops from Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Palestine, France, Poland, and a big Arab legion from Trans-Jordan.

The collapse of France created formidable problems, including the loss of the French Mediterranean fleet and the French armies in Tunis, Syria and French Somaliland. French forces in that section were weak at that time and ill-equipped as compared with the British expeditionary force.

After the evacuation of the British army from France it had to be re-equipped, which meant that the British forces in the Near East had to go begging. But that is all changed now, with large forces of men and equipment of all sorts being sent to the East.

"We may count ourselves fortunate that during our period of extreme weakness we were not attacked," the source declared.

The position of Syria was described as "fairly stable" under the present French regima.

The same source said defences in Malta have improved considerably.

He declared "our ability to defeat Italy depends on holding on in Egypt at all costs."

The job of holding Egypt was described as "an immensely tough task." While strategy in North Africa is simple, this source said, maintenance of a military force constitutes "one hell of a job."

Britain's duty, he said, is to turn out equipment, find ships to send it, and rush it to the Near East as speedily as possible.

Country Laid Waste.

More or Rumania was laid waste than would have been desolated in many months of war, and reports reaching here told of damage also in Turkey, Bulgaria, and Italy and "catastrophic consequences" in Russia.

Again at mid-morning to-day, earth tremors shook this capital, toppling balconies and adding to the death lists which grew steadily as communications were re-established with provinces where village after village reported fatalities yesterday.

Explosions and fires in the ruins of an apartment house where nearly 200 were entombed killed an undetermined number of Iron Guard rescue workers. Bursting gasoline tanks spat flames through the wreckage, sealing the fate of those trapped beneath and it was not known how many searchers had gone to their deaths.

Affect Oil Deposits.

While experts surveyed the damage to oil refineries and power plants, caused principally by toppling chimneys, geologists said the earth movements might have made unpredictable changes in the oil deposits which have made Rumania a bone of war cantention.

The Bucharest Geological Institute said the earth shocks were "the most severe anywhere in years and the first in a long period to be registered on every instrument in the world." Government seismologists said they originated 100 miles deep in the earth and were more intense than the severe Turkish earthquakes last winter.

In Giurgiu, chief Rumania Danube oil port, 65 per cent. of the homes were demolished. There were many casualties.

At Focsani, near the epicentre, 70 per cent. of the houses were levelled. There were 35,000 homeless and at least 22 dead. Hundreds of others were injured, many gravely, and still others were buried.

War Memorials Recall Ideals Padre Declares

Last night, about 150 members of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion paraded to Trinity United Church, to honour the memory of comrades in Flander's Fields. The attendance at the church, and the interest shown in the sermon, bore excellent tribute to those Canadians who fell in battle a quarter of a century ago.

Rev. Capain George Easton, D.D., chose, as the subject of his sermon, "The Ministry of Remembrance Day." Captain Easton is one if the padres of the Legion, and is one of the best qualified men in the city to speak on Remembrance Day. He began with words to the effect, that from time immemorial, men had erected monuments; they have sought, by doing so, to preserve a record of the ideals for which they have fought.

Dividing memorials into three groups, Captain Easton said there were those that are smug, triumphant, as an example, the one in Rome, dedicated to Titus; such memorials, the speaker said, glorify war. The next do the opposite, they condemn war. The picture of a building, once beautiful, but now in ruins at Ypres is a memorial to the horrors of war. The third class are those that "commemorate the sacrifices and qualities evoked by war"; the Cenotaph at Whitehall, and the Canadian Vimy Ridge Memoral do not glorify war neither do they condemn war. They make us remember that ideals, and not love of power or the spirit of conquest, were the things for which men died.

Remebrance Day should be of the third class of memorial. It should serve to recall the sacrifices, and as the speaker so beautifully put it: "Memory enables us to stroll along in the past, and reap the harvests of time."

The price of war to a nation is not found in the financial history of the nation, or in its casualty lists. It is found in the greying hair, and in the furrowed brows of the world's motherhood and the world's womanhood.

Sorrow, said the padre, is our enemy, if it makes us hard and dries our tears. He urged that when graves are visited, it should also be kept in mind that ideals can be visited, and it was ideal for which our young men fought in 1914-1918, and for ideals, many of them died.

Captain Easton pointed, as an example to the world, the borders of the United States of America and Canada. Here bridges have been built to unite, rather than fortifications to disunite.

Memory not only visits the past, the speaker said, but it feeds our hopes for the future. The ideals propelling democracy are again threatend, but Britain can rightfully claim to have had no part in the beginning of the war, she is completely guiltless, she still requires no more of her enemy than he confine himself to the limits of his own property, and play a just and helpful part in the International Brotherhood.

Britain can claim the support of the most powerful ally—God, and the speaker said that the world would, to a great extent, look to the veterans of the last war as being examples, and patterns on which to mould courage. With a tribute to the former Prime Minister of England, Mr. Chamberlain, and with soul stirring belief in victory, the sermon was inspirationally closed.

The members of the Igion formed up in front of the church and paraded back to the Legion Hall where they were dismissed. Accompanying the veterans were the Prince of Wales Rangers Band, and members of the E Ontario Squadron, Legion of Frontiersmen, and the Frontiersmens' Boys' Band.

CanadianBanker Lost One Eye

The area in which Mr. Pope resides was under a heavy night attack when he was injured. He was hurrying across his garden toward the air raid shelter when, as he explained, "one screamer hurtled down too close for safety."

The banker made a dive for the entrance of the shelter but in the darkness struck a gateway. The blow shattered his glasses and particles of glass were driven into his right eye.

Rotarians Hear Roy Kerby

A knowledge of people and how to get along with them was recommended as a most effective secret weapon for business men by Roy Kerby, assistant to the president of General Motors of Canada in an address on "Public Relations and the Part It Plays In Industry Today" before the Peterborough Rotary Club today. Mr. Kerby, who flew from Winnipeg to Toronto yesterday in order to keep his speaking appointment here today told his audience that they were living in a changed world and that it was of the utmost importance that human relationships should be considered just as carefully as problems of production and materials.

The members of the club stood in silence for a minute in tribute to the memory of Roland Denne and Walter Stocker after Rotarian James Dutton had referred to the great loss Peterborough had sustained in the death of those two men, both of whom, he said, had made a most valuable contribution to the city's welfare and left their mark upon the community. "Rollie Denne" said Mr. Dutton, "had the faculty not only of doing useful things himself but of inspiring others to do them." Of Ald. Walter Stocker the speaker said the chairman of the Parks Committee had a keen eye for the beautiful in nature. He knew not only what should be done to beautify Peterborough but also how to do it.

At the suggestion of President T. J. Carley a letter of condolence will be sent by the Rotary Club to the bereaved relatives.

Introduced by Rotarian Fred L. Roy Mr. Kerby began his address by referring to the sorrow with which he had learned since arriving in Peterborough of the sudden death of an old friend in the person of Rollie Denne.

The speaker said that there was a time during the boom years when business felt that it did not need to bother about people or what they wanted but it was realized now that that was a mistake.

A questionnaire sent to thousands of people asking them to name in order the five things they most desired. The first choice was naturally health but uprisingly enough the second was a knowledge of people and how to get along with them. Mr. Kerby said that the greatest asset a man in business could have was the ability to make a favorable impression upon the public. The need of business today, he said, was to study human beings, with the same thoroughness as problems of production and material were studied.

Mr. Kerby concluded his address with a statement as to the war work being carried on by the automotive industry in general and by his own firm in particular.

Life In Over-Populated China Described

Dr. Jessie McBean was guest speaker at the Thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and was introduced by Miss M. R. Rannie, who referred to the many years of service Dr. McBean has given in Canton, China, especially in connection with the Hackett Medical College.

In beginning her message, Dr. McBean drew a picture of China itself, with its immense territory; population of 450,000,000 people; large resources of mineral wealth as yet hardly touched, and a background of centuries of wonderful culture.

Conditions in China had been standing still for some years when Dr. Sun Zat Sen showed what it is possible for one man to do, Dr. McBean said. In 1894 he gathered together a group of young men who went about the country preaching, teaching and trying to reform. The Government of the old war lords at Pekin began to realize how powerful Dr. Sun Zat Sen was becoming and set a price on his head. In 1912 this reform group formed a republic in the Southern provinces with the Government at Canton, Dr. McBean explained, and Dr. San Zat Sen as its first president. He took Abraham Lincoln's motto, "Government for the people, of the people and by the people," as his motto.

Dr. McBean told of the Presbyterian Church starting a mission in South China at this time, and of Christian Chinese in Canada who had come from the south helping support the missionaries. Trouble developed between the Government of South China and the old Government of the North. Sometimes soldiers from four different parties would be in the same hospital at the same time, she said. Dr. Sen appealed to the governments of the world for help and only Russia responded. In 1923 Russia sent men to train officers, for the Chinese were not a military people. Civil war raged from 1912 to 1926. General Chiang Kai Shek became the new leader when Dr. Sen died in 1925. He, too, was Christian and many of his followers also became Christian. He carried on the reforms began by his predecessor in 1912, and great changes were made in a few years, with old walled cities modernized, street car and air-lines introduced, good motor roads opened up, colleges and hospitals built.

Although China had a coast line of 3,000 miles, it was only in the new republic that a navy was begun, also an army and an air force, said Dr. McBean, who stated that China was not ready in 1938 for the terrible aggression of Japan, one of the strongest military and naval nations of the world. Although many towns and villages have been destroyed and thousands driven from their homes, the people are not conquered, the speaker emphasized, and have faith that in the end China will be victorious. In the trek of the refugees the Gospel has been spread, and the work of the missionaries is bearing fruit. Many have been brought into the church by the Chinese Christians.

The Red Cross is doing wonderful work in the ruined districts by helping the wounded. Recently $50,000 was sent from China for the relief of London—the Chinese know what it is to sacrifice, and have been encouraged in sacrificial giving. Dr. McBean emphasized that this is no time to retrench mission work in China, but time to go on. The people are so distressed they are ready to listen to the Gospel message, she said. It is the human touch that helps the missionaries' work. The Hackett Medical College nurses go out among the refugees whenever needed.

Dr. McBean referred to Madame Chiang Kai Shek, wife of the leader, as a wonderful woman. In a message to the world she said "China may lose everything, but on the ashes of the old our prayer is that we may build a new Christian church."

The meeting was held in the Sunday School Hall Friday evening, with Mrs. T. J. Carley presiding. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Dutton. An appropriate solo, "Thanks Be to God," was sung by Mrs. H. F. Doig, following the address. Miss T. Chambers was at the piano. Dedicatory prayer was offered by the president after the offering, and a vote of thanks to Dr. McBean for an intensely interesting message, and to the soloist, was voiced by Mrs. H. Morgan. Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr pronounced the benediction. Tea was served by the social committee.

Tells Of Work Among Chinese Soldiers

The story of Rev. W. B. The meeting opened with the National Anthem, and during the business period Mrs. Victor Smith gave a fine report of the Sectional rally at Bensfort.

The study period was in charge of Miss Jean Hair, and was a commemoration service for Miss Minnie Shipley, "Pilgrim of the Honan Road," who for twenty-five years served as friend and counsellor to the village women; as pioneer in the movement for a reading church, and as inspirer and colleague of the young christian leaders who today are carrying on the work she began. Kelly united in marriage Jean Goldie Crighton Kingdon, Reg. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Kingdon, De Ayncourt Street, Lakefield, and Corpl. Ernest Calvin Nutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Nutt of Atwood, Ontario.

The bride wore a street length frock of poudre blue crepe with a trimming of black sequins. Her turban was of matching material, and her corsage of Sweetheart roses.

Miss Patricia Earnshaw was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of the same material as the bride's, in dusty rose shade, with black accessories. Her corsage was of bronze baby 'mums.

Arthur Kingdon, twin brother of the bride, was the groom's attendant.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for about twenty friends and relatives.

Hewson—Tedford

St. Luke's Church, Burlington, with tall standards of white chrysanthemums and ferns, was a pretty setting for the wedding of Jeanne Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tedford, and Leading Aircraftman Charles Dale Hewson, R.C.A.F., son of Mrs. Hewson and the late Dr. Robert Warren Dale Hewson. The altar also was decorated with white chrysanthemums. Rev. G. W. Tebbs officiated. The church organist, Mr. Murray Hall, played the wedding marches, and during the signing of the register played 'Because.'

The bride's father gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of white silk jersey, made on Grecian lines. The long train fell from the bodice, and there was a high neckline and long, shirred sleeves. She wore her mother's long wedding veil of fine illusion, gathered softly at the back of the head and held in place by a coronet of gardenias and bouvardia. She carried the white prayer book belonging to the groom's mother, from which fell streamers of gardenia and bouvardia. Her costume carrying out the military colors associated with the occasion, the bridesmaid, Miss Ellen Donaldson, was in soldier blue, and she wore a small calot of matching feathers. Her accessories were red and her flowers were a cascade bouquet of red roses. Her gown, made on Grecian lines, had a shirred bodice. Leading Aircraftman Ray Hardingham, R.C.A.F., was the best man.

At the after-reception held at The Corner House, the bride's table was decorated in white with tapers and bowls of tiny chrysanthemums and bouvardia. The bride's mother wore a dress of fuego red crepe with matching jacket, trimmed with silver bugle beads. Matching fuego red feathers trimmed her soldier blue hat and she wore a corsage bouquet of white roses. Mrs. Frank Walker, aunt of the groom, who assisted in receiving, wore a black sheer crepe dress, trimmed with sequins and toque of black, trimmed with red and blue feathers. Her corsage bouquet was of red roses. Among the guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Deck, Peterborough. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Eastern Canada and will reside in Burlington. The bride went away wearing a khaki green dress and hat with black accessories and fur coat.

Lieut. Gordon William Swartzen To Bring Bride to Peterborough

Pink and bronze chrysanthemums in Trinity Anglican church, Mitchell, Ontario, provided the setting for a charming ceremony this (Monday) afternoon, when Miss Ruth Evelyn Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Davis, was married to Lieut. Gordon William Swartzen, No. 32 Military Training Camp, Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Schwartzentruber of Elmira. Rev. C. L. Langford officiated. Mrs. John Skinner was at the organ, and Mr. Franklin Moore sang.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of powder blue in redingote style, with blue fox trimming. Her hat matched her gown, and her flowers were a corsage of orchids and baby chrysanthemums. Miss Aileen Davis of Ottawa, her sister's only attendant, wore dove grey, with corsage of Talisman roses and blue cornflowers. Mr. Carl A. Clare of Toronto was groomsman.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Davis received in a gown of rose, with black accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses; and the bridegroom's mother was gowned in navy blue, with navy and white accessories and corsage of Sweetheart roses. Both bride and bridegroom are honor graduates of the University of Western Ontario, and on their return from a trip will live in Peterborough. The bride travelled in a two-tone grey coat and dress, with dove grey accessories.

Mary C. Anthony Is Wed To Anthony DeNoble

The Immaculate Conception church was the setting for a lovely ceremony this (Monday) morning, when Mary Cecelia Anthony, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anthony, was wedded to Anthony Albert DeNoble, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. DeNoble of Parnell street. Very Rev. Dean F. S. O'Sullivan officiated. Miss Bernice Flynn was at the organ, and an "Ave Maria" was sung by Miss Loretta Giardino.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a period-style gown of white slipper satin, the very full skirt falling into a long graceful train. Corded quilting embroidery edged Sweetheart neckline and cuffs of the tight-fitting sleeves, and she wore a cloudlike veil of tulle illusion with satin halo, quilted to match. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of white roses and lilies. Miss Margaret Anthony and Mrs. J. Asta were attendants for their sister. They wore slipper satin gowns made on similar lines to the bridal gown, with identical cording around the square necklines and three-quarter length shirred sleeves. Miss Anthony was in charm pink, and Mrs. Asta's frock was ice blue. Their turbans were of silver lame, and they wore silver slippers and carried lovely cascade bouquets of pink roses. Mr. Joseph DeNoble was groomsman, and ushers were Mr. Frank Anthony and Mr. Joseph Anthony, brothers of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 428 Mark street, Mrs. Anthony receiving in a navy crepe gown with shoulder corsage of pink roses, and Mrs. DeNoble in black crepe with corsage of red roses. The gift to the bride was a rhinestone bracelet; to the attendants gold lockets, and to the groomsman and ushers leather bill folds.

Mr. and Mrs. DeNoble left for Toronto and Niagara, the bride travelling in an Indian earth crepe frock with brown accessories, and beige boucle coat with wide bands of muskrat fur. They will live on Sophia street.

Over 300 Attend Y.M.C.A. Dance

Over three hundred attending the opening of the Saturday Night Club dance series at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday night was evidence of the popularity these weekly parties have gained among local young people since they became a regular feature of the Club's program last season. Mr. G. H. Roper, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and Mrs. Roper, Mr. Al. B. Clark, physical director, and Mrs. Clark extended their patronage to the affair.

Modernistic light standards and streamers in patriotic red, white and blue were clever ballroom decorations arranged by a committee of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolstenholm, Miss Jane Harvey and Mr. C. Porter. A shower of colored ribbon streamers and balloons were released from the ceiling at the height of the party's festivities, and gay dance music was played by Jimmy Duffus' orchestra. The lady's door prize was won by Miss Eileen Jeffries, and the gentleman's by Edward Geraghty. Spot dance awards went to Helen Morrow, Ted Freeman; Joan Pitchford, Ron Gynane; Edna Borland, Bill Scott.

POSSESSIVENESS GREATEST VICE THAT WOMAN CAN HAVE

It Is the Cause of More Dissension, More Broken Homes, More Spoiled Lives Than Any Other One Cause.

The most common and the worst of all feminine vices is possessiveness. It heads the list of all the seven deadly sins that women can commit against themselves and their families. It wrecks more homes, ruins more lives, causes more strife than anything else in the world. It is an insidious as the dope habit and, like dope, it deadens its victims to every sense of justice and mercy and consideration for others. This is a terrible indictment of those who are our No. 1 criminals, but every word of it is true, and it doesn't mitigate the offenses of these malefactors to say that women are monopolists by nature and that hereditary forces drive them into grabbing and keeping for their sole behoof and benefit anything they can get their hands on, if they want it. And, anyway, they are our mothers and wives and sweethearts and have such sweet, innocent faces—so what the heck? But whatever the reason or the alibi, if you will look into the trouble that keeps humanity groaning and law courts busy, you will find that women's possessiveness is at the bottom of most of it. It explains even so simple yet mysterious a thing as why no two

His Aim Was Splendid

There may have been a touch of grim humor in the despatch from London which said that "a stick of British bombs overshot its mark and hit the famous beer cellar where Hitler spoke at Munich and started a large fire."

We know of no place where bombs could be placed to better advantage than right where Adolf Hitler was speaking. It would be counted splendid marksmanship if the bombs had been so accurately directed that said Hitler could speak no more.

In order to accomplish that raid on Munich it was necessary for the R.A.F. to make a flight of more than 600 miles, calling for a round-trip cruise of more than 1,200 miles, and in that territory they would have to cover large areas where German defence would be at its high mark of perfection. And yet they were able to go through and place their bombs right smack on that beer cellar where Hitler was due to speak.

The man who has turned Europe into hell should be the man near whom bombs shall fall. There may have been an attempt at humor in stating that some bomber "overshot the mark" but no explanations are necessary. That particular bomber was placing his material right where it was—and is—needed.

Ald. Stocker Has Gone

There has been a peculiar similarity running through the death of three men in the public life of this city. Simon Armstrong, city clerk, had not been ill prior to his demise; he had been at a meeting only a short time before. Ex-Mayor Roland Denne had not been ill; he, too, was present at a meeting in the evening and passed away a short time after returning home. Walter Stocker, veteran alderman, had been around much as usual until a few hours before his death on Saturday.

Ald. Stocker had not been in robust health for several years. He knew his weakness and shaped his habits and his efforts accordingly, but it was difficult for a man of his vigorous outlook to step out of the line of busy men and be content in the role of spectator.

He was a man of decided opinions, of strong likes and dislikes, and Ald. Walter Stocker never reached the point where he was moved to hide his convictions under a bushel. His utterances were forthright, and dull moments were not likely to be numerous when Walter Stocker was in his accustomed place.

A Yorkshireman he was, nor did he ever lose his love and admiration for that particular spot in England. There was in the man a decided and unquenchable love for beauty in its varied forms. He was fond of music; in his earlier days he sang himself. When the Mendelssohn Choir last visited Peterborough Walter Stocker was having a delightful time chatting with Dr. Fricker, the conductor. We believe he was so much engrossed that he would have delayed the commencement of the program to have concluded the conversation.

He was fond of trees, shrubs, flowers, green grass, and he was responsible for a good deal of the parks development we have in our city. He seemed to be possessed not only of a desire to attend to such matters, but coupled with that was a knowledge of how things should be done, and when Ald. Stocker decided it should be done this way or that way it could be accepted that there would be few departures.

How many private citizens have asked Walter Stocker how to fix something in their lawns or gardens is something we do not know, but we are certain the number would be impressively large. If the city men were engaged to do any such bits of work, then the resident would be sure of one thing. He would have to pay the bill. Ald. Stocker was a stickler on that point, and neither friendship nor personal interest would allow him to tolerate a favor being done at the expense of the city. A colorful personage was his, with his interest spread wide over the whole city. We are certain that at the last he would go forth as one who walked unafraid.

Bombing British History

German bombers over London have found London Tower. Berlin has nothing like that because German history is too short. Berlin has beauty of design and all that, but it has not the historic landmarks of London. In London Tower one walks through history; many of the things of which we read in school have their confirmation right there where one can look, inspect, study, ask questions, and verify or discount former impressions and beliefs.

It goes away back to the time of William the Conqueror, and some of the battlements which have looked out upon the Thames for centuries are said to rest on foundations as old as the time and days of Julius Caesar.

It is not a military objective in any sense of the word. It was a strongly fortified place at the time it was built, but its protecting moat has long since ceased to contain a drop of water, and we recall having seen some soldiers taking their drill on the ground once covered with water.

One can wander through the room where there is stored the mailed armour of other times; can go down into the dungeon and past the Poisoned Well. A little spiral staircase is the way to get down and with each turn the light grows less, and possibly the hope of those who made the descent years ago diminished in the same way. The implements and appliances for removing the heads of victims are all preserved. Undoubtedly gruesome in some ways, but it is all written in history and it is all verified in London Tower.

There are towers and buildings all over the place within the enclosure of massive stone walls which cover in all some 13 acres. Who has not heard of Traitors' Gate, the entrance from the river for prisoners? The palace which once stood there was pulled down in the time of Oliver Cromwell. If one desires to see masonry good enough to last indefinitely then there is the White Tower, built for William the Conqueror in 1078 by Gundulf who seems to have combined the offices of architect and bishop. Those walls are 15 feet thick.

Your guide stops frequently to explain that this spot was the site of a scaffold or that a "block" used to be right here. Those of rank and prominence were executed within the walls, while the lesser folk were attended to out in the open.

It may be that the German bombers who picked on London Tower as a proper target know nothing of it, but in one form or another it has been there for 870 years. It had been looking down upon the Thames more than four centuries before Columbus discovered America. There's nothing in it but history that runs its way through years that stack up into centuries. There is nothing there of military value or significance and yet it has been bombed.

Italians Were Hungry

Observers who have covered a lot of ground in Europe have found large sections where the people have insufficient to eat, and they are satisfied the situation will grow worse. What facilities they had for making their survey we do not know, but they all seem to arrive at the same conclusion: Food is scarce, and Germany is taking within its own borders most of the available supply.

There have been several references to food shortage coming from points in Greece, and we have reason to believe they tell the true situation. There was one small party of 269 Italian Alpine troops taken to a Greek prison camp. The first thing the prisoners did was to empty their pockets of whatever small amount of money they had, and then they were also willing to part with their wedding rings, and the one thing they desired to secure above all else was something to eat. They reported they had gone for days on nothing at all in their venture into the mountain passes. There were mules and horses on the same expedition, and in large numbers and they would be as hungry as the men. Efforts had been made to drop baled hay from planes to feed the animals, but often they went so wide of the mark that they could not be recovered.

That one despatch from Greece tells a good deal. It shows that there had been poor management in arranging that expedition. It had been planned in advance, and it seems true enough that some of the Italian troops were actually over the border before the ultimatum had been presented to Greece. They were doing one of two things, (1) anticipating an immediate success in their invasion of Greek territory, or (2) they had to send out the men with short rations because there is a food shortage. Either way it was poor campaigning, and it can be added to the evidence already accumulated of the inherent weakness of Italian efforts wherever they have been directed.

A Reasonable Suggestion

Two young members of the Canadian Parliament moved and seconded the address from the throne, and in doing so brought to the front a question which is typically Canadian—the attitude which people of this country should adopt to the people of France. We have in this country 3,000,000 residents whose racial origin is French. It does not follow that these people living as good subjects in our land will have their thinking directed by forces in France. Not at all, because the attitude of the average French-Canadian is one which is what can well be called distinctly Canadian.

The plea was that we should think kindly of the people in France today, and that is reasonable enough. The amount of reliable information which comes from France today is small, because it is a conquered nation and the sources of available information are in control of the Germans. When news comes from the Vichy government we can be assured it has been furnished with the consent and authority of the German master, and for that reason it is worded to suit his purpose.

This much we do know: The people of France are being treated today as Germany treats all conquered nations. France always has had a sufficiency to eat, but it has little today. Independent observers who have since had to leave the country told of the extent to which produce and goods of all kinds had been removed to Germany. One incident was typical of the general plan: There were 900 hogs brought to the market in Paris and 600 of them were at once requisitioned for shipments to Germany.

We know too that there is an army of occupation in France of about 2,000,000 Germans, and they have to be fed and well fed and France has to pay for the feeding. Their riches and their treasures have been taken from them; their rolling stock goes to Germany and it does not come back. The country is being bled white and at the moment the people are not in a position to strike for their liberty and their freedom.

We can have small patience with the people who brought about the downfall of France, but we never could believe they were doing the will of the French people. So it is we find no difficulty in thinking kindly of the people of France, and we are actually concerned about the day of their liberation.

NOTE AND COMMENT

From all points in United States comes the demand for national unity, and from Britain comes the urgent suggestion that planes come faster and faster.

We read some days ago about crack Italian troops going on with the invasion of Greece. And now they appear to be cracked.

Germans have told Belgians they must not observe Armistice Day. But they cannot blot out the memory of that dingy spot where the Germans of other days shot Nurse Edith Cavell.

Man in Quebec was married on the day when he started to serve a term of seven years. Only one advantage can we see in this, and that is during that time the bride will at least know where her husband is spending his evenings.

One German citizen was sent to a concentration camp because he put his hands over his ears when a loud speaker suddenly came on with a Hitler message. They fear that if people begin getting their hands up to their faces some of them may happen to get their fingers working with the nose as the basis.

Reports from Western Canada tell of numerous claims being lodged by young Mennonites for exemption from military training. Mennonites are good farmers and they are straight living people, but that does not explain why other young men should fight their battles. There is something in this for future guidance in regard to our immigration policy.

PROMISES

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I read what politicians say, devour long columns every day, and I am sure some goodly thing will turn upon us by the spring.

¶ They vie with one another now to save the poor man's brindle cow, the wealthy jay has seen his best, our statesmen now sit on his chest, and they'll take ducats out of him, leave scanty covering for his skin.

¶ The poor man comes into his own and none may dare to seize his home, the rich man shakes beneath the law, they'll whack him square upon the jaw.

¶ Each day a statesman says some more, they fight for chances on the floor, one speaks of artichokes and cheese, the next will give cream puffs and peas.

¶ If they keep promises they make we'll spend our summers on the lake, for they will give us cabins there where we can sniff the summer air.

¶ And when the fall cracks down on me and I'm as cold as man can be, the statesmen hand to me the tin to have the coal man fill my bin.

¶ I fear not when the landlord comes to take away his tidy sums, for I'll just get some statesman gent to cough up what I need for rent.

¶ If they mean everything they say I soon shall be a happy jay, I'll put stove polish on my boot and order me a Sunday suit.

Axis Powers Cannot Trust Newly-won Land

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON diplomacy's unmistakable impression is that Herr Hitler's and Signor Mussolini's tremendous effort to consolidate all continental Europe against Britain hints strongly that they're disatisfied with the conquests they have scored thus far at the expense of their neighboring countries on the old world mainland.

Adolf Hitler

That is to say, they've overrun France, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway and most of the Balkans, besides extinguishing Poland, but they haven't assimilated their inhabitants. The beaten peoples are as anti-Axis now as ever they were; so probably more so, from rage at having been beaten. At least, that's the state department's opinion, based on reports it receives from over the Atlantic.

If they'd converted, to their side, the dwellers on the soil they've occupied, of course these folk would be an Axis asset. But if they have to be rigorously policed all the time, to keep them under subjection, naturally they're a liability and a worry. This latter is the case, according to accounts from the war-torn continent.

It's realized that the lands the Axis partners have seized possession of undoubtedly provide them with excellent bases for operations in the direction of John Bull's island. They also are sources of supplies, available for the Axis' confiscation. However, it takes force, or the threat of it, to do the confiscating, and that's a distraction from the Axis' other efforts.

WIDE DISCONTENT

IN SHORT, Adolf and Benito are assessed as having a having a certain amount of disaffection in their own respective countries and close to 100 per cent of it in the democracies they've vanquished — temporarily, anyway. Such an underlying mass of violent disconrent, if it exists, as competent observers believe it does, is seen from Wasnington as an insecure foundation for the dictators to build on.

The Vichy government of France, to be sure, seems to be fairly effectively dominated by the Axis, but official Washington's judgment is that the French generally don't acquiesce in it—that they'll go anti-Axis again the minute they think there's a ghost of a show for them. It's assumed that the Fuehrer and the Duce know this as well as anybody.

Spain isn't regarded as a dependable pro-Axis bet, either. General Franco, indeed, is under deep obligations to Adolf and Benito for helping him to demolish the Spanish republic, but if he gets into another war, to help them in return, the republicans are more than likely to grab the chance to break out once more. Should they do so, they still are strong enough to occupy all his attention.

Japan's of no use to the European Axis except indirectly. If the Japs were to get into a muss with the U.S. busy in the Pacific, doubtless to the Axis' advantage. They likewise must have a tendency to prevent Russia from turning anti-Axis and creating trouble for the Nazis and Fascists in the Balkans.

Russia's a deal of a problem. Nobody can have a bit of confidence in any deal the Soviets may frame up with anybody. They have their reasons for preferring Britain to the Axis, because their interests conflict with the Axis' in the Balkans. They have their reasons for liking the U.S., because they're traditional enemies of the Japs, and the U.S. is on strained relations with the Mikado.

RUSSIA'S HOPES

COMRADE STALIN has a loose compact with Fuehrer Hitler and Duce Mussolini, but it's agreed that he'd scrap it readily for a good tie-up with Britain. There's talk of a deal between himself and Tokyo, but there's no question that he'd unload it in favor of a U.S. dicker to keep the Japs from bothering him. And some say it might pay the U.S., little as they like the Communists.

Southeastern Europe is so mixed up that it's hard to evaluate. It assuredly isn't solidly pro-Axis, anyhow. Turkey and Greece emphatically are not. All in all, the Axis has a lot of territory to cover that it can't but be extremely uncertain of. Which explains, as the U.S. state department reckons, its frantic attemps to get some unity into it, in the Axis' favor.

The Berlin and Rome press call it a "peace move," with a view to a "new world order." The U.S. state department's very sceptical that Berlin and Rome would be undertaking a peace move at present if they weren't suspicious that they're about at the end of their string—that they'd better hang on to what they've got already and be satisfied with it — for the present.

• Can See No Sportsmanship In This

Letter in Toronto Star

SIR: Few things show up the true character of men as their behavior in the bush at any time and particularly during hunting season. My home is on the Pimai bay, a link of the Mattawa river waters, just where the trans-Canada highway cuts this bay in two. I have these days the doubtful privilege of watching scores of my intrepid fellowmen flaunting their red caps and shiny guns because flocks of ring-neck ducks has this year selected the bay as a stop-over in their flight south—a truly wonderful sight for the nature-lover and a temptation for the hunter.

Now there is such a thing as hunting and hunting. The desire for a good duck dinner is admittedly legitimate. There is also an element of sport in hunting wild duck when the hunter permits the hunted a 50-50 chance to get away and is in a position quickly to reach a bird unfortunately winged by a poor shot. But to stop the car on the road and from there take pot-shots at the migrating birds feeding peacefully in the bay without any means, much less any effort, to reach the killed or wounded birds and from obviously no other motive than a brutal desire to practice target shooting on live things, is wanton cruelty and mean defilement of nature. And when these sleek cars and their cargo of dude hunters buzz off to continue their inane chase after new victims, the silence of this bush is broken by the anguished quacking of wing-shot birds being helplessly washed ashore somewhere and left to sigh out their last pitiful breath of life in needless agony and indignity. It would seem these gallant marksmen might put their art to better use these days.

• Where They Talked Far Too Much

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir, — The London (England) Daily Herald and its reporter will scarcely be open to the charge of being biased by fanatical temperance views. The article by its reporter from "Somewhere in Berkshire" which apeared in that paper a little while ago, reveals the risks that are inescapable so long as public drinking houses are tolerated under war conditions.

Said the reporter:

"If I had been a spy I would have earned Hitler's best thanks 'for services rendered' today.

"Without trying to cross-question, I learned military secrets in a Berkshire town which would be most useful to the enemy.

"It was easy. I merely went into public-houses and a hotel, bought beer and listened. Out of the mouths of officers and men in the public-houses came information which, linker together, would have told a spy lots of things he wanted to know.

"These are some of the facts I learned:

"The number of thousands of men stationed in a certain area;

"Number of companies of men who attended church parade at a certain centre today;

"Names of two ports from which troops were embarked from this area for France;

"How many tanks and lorries were congregated in this district.

"Complaints have been made in London that an enemy agent could get valuable information by touring West End Clubs and listening to conversation. But it is a small town like this that would be a spy's delight. Tongues are loosened daily to spread knowledge of how many men are stationed in the area, how many are already in France, and how many local houses have been commandeered for officers and men. In the hotel I visited, officers were lunching. Pretty blondes and less attractive civilians talked to some of them. Round the walls were eleven notices warning the officers that a few words might reveal to an intelligence agent all that he wanted to know. They might as well not have been there.

This risk is equally present in Canada, and especially so when our Liquor Control Board aproves the establishment of a beer room in the vicinity of a plant engaged in making explosives.

CHURCHILL DECIDED

THE decision to close the Burma Road was Mr. Churchill's own decision, and the decision to open it is also his. It is right to correct the view that the Foreign Office was primarily responsible in this case. Lord Halifax fought against the closing of the road and Mr. Churchill took the full responsibility when he announced it. It is easy to understand his motives for an act of "appeasement" distasteful to his inclinations and temperament. It was a military decision. He thought we were about to be invaded and the naval experts urged that we could do nothing in the Far East if Japan attacked our shipping. It seemed worth while to try to keep off Japan for another three months.—London New Statesman.

LOOKING AHEAD

IF The Listowel Banner is right in its aspirations for youth after the war, the civilization we have built may be improved and buttressed:

The young people of today, we believe, are more intelligent than the previous generation and this leads one to hope that they will be intellectual enough to stop wars. If they can do that, all causes of social progress will go ahead. Gradually students say they are going to make a better world and are going to make sacrifices to do it. We hope they will.

NO REGRET ANYWHERE

There'll be no regret if all the German cannon in British Columbia are sent to the smelter and melted up as scrap....

The Nazis, for many reasons, would like to have the German war souvenirs returned to them. Let us be forgiving, and send these obsolete cannon back to the Germans—in the form of shell cases and bombs.—Vancouver Province.

"Artificial respiration be blowed," said the man, excitedly, "You'll give her the real thing. I'll pay for it."

Missing

He: "I am surprised that our wedding is not mentioned in this calendar."

She: "Why should it?"

He: "It gives the dates of all the great disasters."

"How old are you, my little man?"

"I don't know, sir. Mother was twenty-six when I was born, but now she's only twenty-four."

ABSENCE OF SCANDAL

THOSE who remember the Great War and the accompanying events in Canada must be impressed by the absence, in the present war, of the scandals which marked the course of events in 1914-18. The various control boards set up by the government and its determination that excessive war profits shall go to the state rather than to individuals have had a notable effect.—Toronto Star.

70-Year-Old Man Is Killed By Falling Tree

TWEED, Nov. 11 (ENS)—Michael Franks, 70-year-old Madoc township resident was killed when hit on the head by a falling tree while skidding logs for the Airhart Lumber Company, in the township of Madoc. Coroner Dr. F. J. Nickle of Madoc investigated the accident and announced no inquest would be necessary as the accident was of a purely accidental nature. Mr. Franks suffered a fractured skull as the result of being hit by the falling tree and died shortly after the accident.

Franks was employed at skidding logs for the lumber company when a loose log struck a "dry tree" knocking the timber over. Mr. Franks was standing nearby and did not see the tree toppling down, as his back was turned. Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond assisted the coroner during the investigation. Other nearby workmen miraculously escaped injury when the "dry tree" fell dangerously close to a group of skidders, but struck Franks only.

Are You a Sufferer From Rheumatic Pains?

These pains come from an inflammation in the muscles and are generally caused by a deposit of poison in the blood called uric acid which produces the irritating and painful effect that causes many days and nights heavy with pain.

During the past 60 years Canadian people have found that by purifying the blood stream, Burdock Blood Bitters aids them to enjoy freer body movement with less rheumatic pain, as B. B. B. helps to tone up the system and clear up the uric acid in the blood, and probably help fortify the system against future attacks.

Chris Taylor Winner In Durham County

MILLBROOK, Nov. 11—(ENS)—Awarded top standing, out of a field of 18 contestants, Christopher Taylor, of Port Hope, won the public speaking competition for Durham County, at the annual gathering held in the town hall, Millbrook, on Friday at 8 p.m., the event being under the auspices of the Durham County Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association, with the president, Mr. W. J. F. Rickard, of Bowmanville, in the chair.

Port Hope pupils had all the honors, the runner-up being Alex Kellough of that town, but it was conceded by the capacity audience that the judges, Dr. Bannister, of Peterborough, R. A. Cornish, of Port Perry, W. R. Bxter, of Colborne, and H. McLeod, of Brighton, had a difficult task in arriving at their decisions, as all entrants made a most creditable showing.

J. Wellington Pickup, K.C., of Toronto, an old Millbrook boy, was in attendance representing the Durham County Old Boys' Association of the Queen City, and presented to Christopher Taylor, the winner of the evening, the handsome shield which that body first gave for this competition in 1932, and which has been continuously competed for each year since.

The American Election

Choosing as his subject: "An event of the hour, and the man behind it", the timely material covering the recent election of President Roosevelt for a third term in the White House, and its world significance, Christopher Taylor couched his speech in fine language, had an easy platform manner, required no prompting, made a good appearance, and had no difficulty whatever in holding closely the attention of the large audience.

Alex Kellough, who was awarded second place, also made a strong appeal to the listeners with his theme: "A well known British statesman, Winston Churchill", covering his life, and military accomplishments, in comprehensive detail, and winning hearty and prolonged applause.

Spoke of the Flag

There is no doubt that the pupils of the Durham county public schools will be well versed in the history of the flag, no less than six of the contestants on Friday evening having chosen this subject for their address. Yet not two presented just the same material, and all used drawings in color of the three crosses making up the flag as illustrative of their remarks. The first contestant, John Hicks, of Millbrook, brought forward a worthwhile suggestion when he said: "If the flag becomes too soiled to be of further use do not just throw it away with the remark, 'O, that old thing is no longer fit for anything', Rather put in a box, and burn it privately, thus showing the respect due 'the emblem of a living Empire'."

Every contestant who took part was given a well bound book, as an encouragement to continue in the good cause of competent public speaking, Mr. Pickup presenting these, and also the awards won at the recent North and South Cavan, and the Millbrook, elimination contests: John Tinney of Cavan school; Theida Hubbeard, of Zion (South Cavan); and John Hicks, of Millbrook, each of whom received a handsome and reliable pen and pencil set.

Musical Program

Adding variety to an entertaining program were the musical selections given by the pupils of the Port Hope and the Millbrook schools, under their respective supervisors, T. W. Stanley, of the Lakeside town, and Homer Oulette, of Cavan. A general sing-song, with Mr. Stanley at the piano, gave the entire audience a chance to relax while the judges' score cards were being totalled, and the results made ready to announce. The past president of the Association, Russell Osborne, of Bowmanville, was on the platform, and announced the winners, others on the stage being ex-Warden Percy Stinson, and L. H. Winslow, a member of the executive. The secretary, Mrs. J. R. Cooper, of Orono, was also in attendance, and her assistant, Mrs. Fred Bowen, county organizer for the Home and School Associations.

Those who took part in the public speaking were: Joyce Martin, Clarke; Isabella Carveth and Jean Brown, both of S.S. 15, Manvers; Cleo Morton, S.S. 15, Hope; John Hicks, Millbrook; Irene Piper and Haines Bellman, of Bowmanville; Lillian Osborne, Darlington; Marie Allen, Clarke; Carl Flint, Orono; Murray Walton, Newcastle; John Tinney, Cavan; Alex Kellough and Christopher Taylor, Port Hope; Theldo Hubbeard, Zion; Harold Hamilton, Fleetwood; Merlin Bailey, Blackstock; Earl Cox, Bowmanville.

Lions' Club Trophy

The collection taken to defray expenses amounted to over eight dollars, and appreciation was warmly expressed for a contribution of five dollars from Hon. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough. The National Anthem brought a memorable evening to a close, after the president had reminded the winners of the district competition at Brighton on November 22, at 7.30 p.m. where they will compete for further honors, those taking top place here going on to the provincial contest.

Mr. Pickup extended an invitation to Christopher Taylor to be the guest of the Toronto Durham Club on November 19, at its regular gathering, and to repeat his address on that occasion, the association having commissioned him to invite the 'guest of honor', and to request this favor of him.

The shield for the boy taking second place on Friday night is being given by the Lions' Club, of Bowmanville, and will be presented later.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST

Asked to leave her boarding house because she had no money to pay rent, Lona Ackerman finds herself stranded on a city street. That night the man who had taken Lona's room finds her on a park bench. He offers to treat her to something to eat. After telling him her father is in the penitentiary for murder, Lona learns the stranger's name is Jim Claridge. He obtains a hotel room for her and promises to call her next day. In view of her past experiences, Lona wonders about Jim, decides she can trust him. Looking for work, Lona is surprised when a former employer, who had later dismissed her, receives her in his office in response to an "ad." Instead of a job, Melvin Hardy offers to take Lona to lunch. Disgusted, she leaves his office in a huff, much discouraged over her inability to find work. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER SEVEN

IT WAS raining when Lona came out of the department store, where she had retrieved her checked suitcase; a drizzling summer rain that soaked her thin shoes in a few minutes, and made the jacket of her suit cling to her shapelessly. With listless disinterest she walked on and on, scarcely noting her direction, until she came, finally, to a "For Rent" sign in a window of a house sufficiently dilapidated in appearance for her purpose.

The room to which the whiny-voiced landlady conducted her was shabbier even than her memory of Mrs. Peterman's. It was on the third floor, with one dingy window, and scarred, rickety furniture she hated on sight.

"Two dollars," the woman told her, with a sharp eye on her wet, worn suit and sodden shoes, "paid in advance."

"Of course," she heard herself agreeing wearily. "In advance. I always pay in advance." And she gravely handed out two dollars of Jim Claridge's money.

When the woman was gone, she threw herself, wet clothes and all, prone on the grayish bedspread. Exhaustion, the anesthetizing exhaustion of despair, stole over her. Too tired even to shed the tears that were pressing like heated balls against her lids, she shut her eyes, and listened dully to the beating of the rain on the roof. If she could only lay here like this forever, and not have to think.

It was late afternoon before she roused, finally, to the knowledge that the rain had ceased and that she had had no lunch.

As she stooped to lift her suitcase to the one chair the room boasted, a telephone shrilled somewhere below and for a moment she stiffened expectantly, as she had been doing now for months. Always there had been hope in her mind at the sound of a telephone. She had left her address so many places. It was possible, someone MIGHT call.

Then she slumped again as she remembered. Nobody would be calling her here. Nobody knew where she was. And she would tell nobody either, she thought, as the morning's bitterness flooded back. Not even Jim Claridge. He should not know what become of her. She wouldn't have him hunting her up and being kind to her again.

Stripping off her wrinkled jacket, she opened her purse for the key to her grip. If she must go out for something to eat, she'd have to wash her face and hunt out a fresh blouse. And then, with dismay, she saw that the key was gone. She recalled that she had used it back at the hotel that morning. She must have left it there. She had set it on the dresser for a moment, she remembered, while she put on her hat. She'd have to go back for it. There was no getting out of it. How careless, how dreadfully careless of her!

Scolding herself, she banged down the steps and out onto the street again, conscious of her unwashed face and her wrinkled clothes. Like a bum, she must look. A tramp! Well, what else was she? A convict's daughter.

With reckless unconcern she strode into the hotel and asked for the missing key.

The clerk handed her an envelope with a number on it. "Picked it up after you left this morning," he told her. "By the way," he added, cutting into her mumbled thanks, "there's been a couple of phone calls for you this afternoon. Think it was the guy that—brought you in last night." He dropped his voice confidentially.

"Sounded as if it was urgent," he said. "Better ring him up."

Nodding, Lona thanked him again, and started for the street entrance.

"The booth's over this way if you're going to phone." The clerk's voice followed her, and for a moment she hesitated. . . . He had called her, then. He hadn't forgotten. Twice, the clerk said. Perhaps, after all. . . . Maybe he HAD meant what he said last night. His eyes. . . .

But she brought herself up short with a cynical little shrug and went on toward the door. The next moment she stopped, a panicky exclamation on her lips. He was here now! Coming in through the street entrance. He looked tall and suddenly familiar, and his brown eyes lighted at sight of her.

"Where've you been, girl?" He was pulling her back into the room before she could voice the protest that died, somehow, on her lips, at the sound of his first words.

"I've been calling you all afternoon." He was looking at her. The brown Tiny eyes—how could she have forgotten them?—narrowed quizzically. "I was afraid you'd lit out on me, and I've got you a job."

For a moment Lona could only stare at him. The room seemed to be whirling suddenly. Queer specks were dancing on the edges of her vision crazily. Only his face stood out clearly, his face with the Tiny eyes.

"A job!" she heard a voice like her own saying from somewhere far off. "Did you say—a job?" She was gripping his arm with her fingers now, and the room was clearing. She wasn't going to faint after all, something told her.

"Why, girl!" He had pulled up a chair, had helped her into it, was rubbing her hands. "You mustn't take things so hard. I didn't think, I shouldn't have sprung it on you like that."

"I'm all right," she managed to assure him, weakly, hating herself for being so foolish. "It's only—have you really got me a job?"

"The Krider agency has been calling Mrs. Peterman's. You're to show up tomorrow at the Western Realties office at eleven — eleven something Lothrop avenue, I've got the address down somewhere here." He slapped his pocket and went on studying her critically.

"Bet you haven't eaten a bite today," he decided accusingly. "And you've been out in the rain, too. Here' Grab my arm, and if you think you can make it, let's move over into the grille." With a nod toward the hotel dining room on the right, "What you need is to get on the outside of a bowl of hot soup."

Lona laughed at his concern. Actually laughed. "You're always taking me some place and feeding me," she protested.

"You seem to need some feeding," he answered, with a grim smile.

He failed to realize that we have to perspire to live—just as we must breathe. In warm, stuffy rooms, we perspire more—from a pint to three pints a day, even when we are sitting still. Left on the body, this sweat goes stale—decomposes. Then YOU have "B.O."

Careful people check "B.O." before it starts, with Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath, Lifebuoy stops "B.O."—its purifying lather washes away stale perspiration deposits. Winter or summer—play safe—with Lifebuoy.

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT 'B.O.'

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyper-pyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it —especially in changeable weather. Heated rooms, lack of fresh air and heavy clothes quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

FOUR WELL-BALANCED BASKETBALL TEAMS OPEN THE 'Y' LEAGUE

Spitfires Eke Out 26-22 Win From Hurricanes

A quartet of well-balanced basketball teams took the first step down the trail towards the Dominion Life Trophy, emblematic of Y.M.C.A. basketball supremacy as the annual House League got under way Saturday night at the 'Y.' Spitfires eked out a thin 26-22 victory over a hard-fighting Hurricane team after they had trailed at the half-way mark; Defiants led all the way to down Wellingtons 26-16 in another hard-fought tussle in the second game.

In both games the ball handling and shooting of all four teams was not at peak form but the combination exhibited was better than might have been expected of four newly organized clubs.

Hurricane's battling defence held Joe Stewart's powerful Spitfires through the first half to hold an 8-7 edge at that point but Spitfire's pressing last half attack and their better shooting soon gave them the edge. It was anybody's game all the way with the winner's scoring late in the fray to hold a lead at the right time. Spitfires with four of last year's city champion Zephyrs aboard had plenty of trouble penetrating the losers' defense and not until late in the ball game did either team lead by more than a couple of points. Stewart and Dyer at forward and Sedgwick at guard were the winner's best and McArthur, Rogow and Garvie, a newcomer to local hoop circles, led the loser. The teams:

Hurricanes, 22: Centre, McArthur (2); forwards, Weese (2), Garvie (14); guards, Csumrick (4), Rogow; subs, Clapham.

Spitfires, 26: Centre, Stewart (7); forwards, Dyer (9); Gemmell (4); guards, West (2); Sedgewick (4; subs, Gardiner, Smith.

Referee—Doug McPherson.

With McPherson sparking the early play, Defiants piled up an opening half lead that they managed to hold through the final period to take a fairly covincing 26-16 win from Wellingtons in the second game. The winners used a smooth-working zone defense throughout the game that held Wellington's offensive thrusts fairly well outside the free throw lane and forced the losers to shoot long. The losers made a better showing in the final stanza but Defiants turned it on near the last and managed to add to their lead, outscoring Wellington 11-8 in this period. The winners had a good passing game on the offense and had more scoring chances in close, while their shooting was a little more effective to earn them their victory. McPherson's defensive and offensive showing and the work of he and Gillespie under their basket was outstanding for the winners with Ferguson, Grose and Dougherty the pick of the losers. The teams:

Wellingtons, 16: Centre, Ferguson (2); forwards, Dougherty (8); Smith (2); guards, Grose, Marsn (4); subs, Morrow, Milburn.

Defiants, 26: Centre, Craig (8); forwards, Currie (2), Ward (1); guards, Gillespie (2); McPherson (11); subs, Burns (2), Spencely.

Referee—Don Sedgewick.

Seek To Eliminate Playoff System

ATLANTA, Nov. 11—(AP). — An effort to eliminate the Shaughnessy playoff as a means of determining minor league baseball championsh' : will be made here ecember 4 when the National Association of Professional Baseball League convenes.

Submitted by Houston of the Texas League, the amendment to the major-minor league rules would provide that:

"Except in cases where a split-season schedule is adopted with the championship being awarded to the winner of the post-season series between the winners of the respective halves of the split-season schedule, the club which has the highest percentage computed on a basis of games won and lost during the regularly adopted schedule must be declared champions of the league of which such club is a member."

Commenting on the proposal in his tentative agenda for the December meeting, W. G. Bramham, president-treasurer of the association, said it would eliminate award of the championship to the winner "of a so-called Shaughnessy series," and would recognize "the club which proves its superiority over the course of a full season."

Start In Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—(CP).

FIRST game of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union playoffs between Ottawa and Toronto Argonauts will be played here next Saturday, Secretary George Perley of Ottawa Rough Riders Football Club said last night.

Earlier Perley had said final decision would not be made until a meeting of the Rough Riders' executive was held to-night. Subsequently a "telephone meeting" was held, and it was decided the first game will be played here, with the second and last game of the home-and-home series in Toronto the following Saturday.

Ottawa won the right to choose the venue of the first playoff game under a league rule by ending the season as league-leaders.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The tragic death of Frankie Collins has shocked Peterborough sporting circles. His was long a familiar name in hockey and baseball in this city. A lively, likeable youngster, always the life of the party on baseball and hockey trips, Frankie was popular both with players and fans during his athletic days in Peterborough. He started his hockey career here with the local junior O.H.A. squad, played fine hockey when he graduated to the Peterborough intermediates and reached the peak of his form when he played for the Peterborough senior team that won the senior Ontario championship from London in 1926. Collins centred the Petes' first string line with Ace Bailey and Biffer Ranger on the wings and his speed, fight and tireless back-checking made him a most valuable member of the champions' roster. After he left Peterborough Frankie starred with the National Sea Fleas, helped them to win a championship and travelled Europe with the Toronto club.

* * * * * *

Collins will always be remembered by hockey fans for one outstanding achievement. In the second game of the senior finals at London he scored one of the quickest goals on record, certainly the fastest in a game of such importance when he beat Alfie Moore, London goalkeeper, less than three seconds after the initial faceoff. The Petes had played their "home" game in Toronto, winning 4 to 2 and a two-goal lead was none too robust. It was recognized that scoring the first goal in London would be a decidedly important factor. Frankie saw to it that the opening counter went to the Petes. When the puck was dropped he secured possession, took two strides in the direction of the London goal, and then let fire. The puck struck the ice in front of Moore and before that startled player could make a move the rubber had bounced into the net and the Petes were three goals ahead. That quick score had a decided psychological effect upon the outcome of the game, the Petes ultimately holding London to a tie score and taking the round and the championship by two goals.

* * * * * *

Frankie played a lot of good baseball for Peterborough, too, as a member of the local Central Ontario League club. He was a fair hitter and did a good job defensively both in the infield and outfield. Collins' debut in senior ball came when he was only sixteen. His first game was in Lindsay when he was called upon to face the celebrated smoke ball pitcher, Cannonball Ed Scott of Toronto who did the heaving for the Red Birds that season. The youngster who played a bangup game at second base for the Petes that day calmly slapped two hits off Scott's high fast one and after that they just couldn't keep Frankie off the ball club. He was a prime favorite with Manager Jake Solomon who liked the pep and aggressiveness of the kid and his cheerfulness on and off the field. Peterborough fans will recall his exploits on the diamond and on the ice in mourning his sudden passing and in extending sympathy to his bereaved relatives.

Got Them All Correct

This column clicked on all five football predictions Saturday although for a long while it looked as if both ends of the Big Four program for the day were going to backfire. Both Argos and Rough Riders had the scare of their lives before they eventually triumphed over Montreal and Hamilton Tigers respectively. Both had to come from behind in the last period to win out and both had to have considerable help from Dame Fortune before the Argos outscored the Montrealers 15 to 11 and the Ottawa gang just managed to stagger home in front of the battling Tigers 19 to 18. That of course leaves the championship between Ottawa and Argos. The O.R.F.U. games ran according to advance dope, Balmy Beach winning from Hamilton Alerts 9 to 3 and Sarnia Artillerymen defeating Camp Borden. The Bammies and the Gunners will clash for the Ontario title. Out West the Winnipeg Blue Bombers did what most folk expected, taking their second straight game from Calgary Bronks and grabbing the Western title.

* * * * * *

Right now the best football club in the East, certainly the most consistent is the Balmy Beach outfit. Their win Saturday was their sixth without a loss and opposing clubs have found scoring against the Beachers a tough job. They are the Cindarellas of football and we would not be in the least surprised if they finally bob up as Eastern champions. Both Ottawa and Argos have apparently developed a bad attack of football heebie-jeebies. The Rough Riders have turned in three wobbly games in a row while the Oarsmen have been in-and-outers. One has about as good a chance as the other to win the Big Four and if the winners happen to come up with a bad game when they clash with Balmy Beach who are almost certain Ontario champs, the result will be just too bad.

Cricket in Peterborough has lost a warm friend in the sudden death of Ald. Walter Stocker. Since he came here 53 years ago as a young man from England, Ald. Stocker had always taken a keen interest in local cricket. He was a playing member of the Peterborough Cricket Club for many years and after he retired from active participation as a player he made a valuable contribution to the success of the game here by officiating as umpire at fixtures of the Peterborough club. He gave up the umpiring duties some time ago but his interest in the game never failed and the local cricketers always had a champion in the chairman of the Parks Committee. Incidentally Walter Stocker was one of the keenest fans in Peterborough in regard to Old Country cricket and had the batting and bowling averages of English cricketers at his finger tips, especially when the Test matches were to the fore.

Rangers Are Out In Front

Week-end activities in the National Hockey League saw the New York Rangers out in front. The Men of Manhattan did not win but they came from behind to secure a 2-2 tie with Detroit in the Motor City Sunday night and they are now leading the parade with three points. Maple Leafs won their first victory of the season with a 3 to 0 win over the Red Wings Saturday in a game in which the chief feature was that the Apps-Drillon-Metz line got all the goals, each scoring once. Chicago Black Hawks who were beaten in their opening game by the New York Amerks invaded Montreal Sunday night and defeated Canadiens 3 to 1. Demers, one of Dick Irvin's rookies put the Canadiens in front but the Hawks tied it up in the second period and went on to win in the third.

Close, hard basketball featured the opening of the Y.M.C.A. House League Saturday night and was a fitting start to what is expected to be an unusually successful season for the cage game here. The four clubs in the Dominion Life series look to be very well-balanced and there will be a lot of lively basketball before the title is decided. The House League activities will serve as lively curtain raiser for the City League which is expected to furnish exciting entertainment every Saturday night all winter in the Y gym. The cage pastime is becoming more popular every season as sport fans get to appreciate the speed and skill demonstrated in the modern edition of the pastime.

Barons Wallop Buffalo, Indians Down Hornets

(By the Canadian Press.)

Bill Cook's Cleveland Barons and Eddie Shore's Springfield Indians are showing the way in their respective divisions in the American Hockey League.

The Barons ran their victory string to four straight games from the start of the season without defeat Saturday night by walloping Buffalo Bisons 5-0. At the same time the Indians trounced Pittsburg Hornets 6-3 to remain undefeated in five games. The Indians have won three and played to two draws.

Bears Beat Reds

In other Saturday games Hershey Bears defeated Providence Reds 4-1 and Philadelphia Ramblers won 2-1 over New Haven Eagles. Last night three games were played with Indianapolis Capitals winning 5-3 over Ramblers, New Haven defeating Pittsburg 3-2, and Providence topping Buffalo 5-3.

Scorers for Indianapolis were Jud McAtee, Heck Kilrea, Carl Liscombe with two, and Jack Keating. Philadelphia tallies went to Foster and McKay, with the former registering twice. Goals by Polly Drouin, Marcel Tremblay and George Patterson gave New Haven its first victory of the season in the game against Pittsburg. The Hornet scorers were Lloyd Roubell and Lorne Duguid.

Rookie Max Bentley led the Reds to victory over Buffalo, scoring two goals, while Art Giroux, Bucko McDonald and Norm Man got the others. Buffalo goals were scored by Morey Rimstad, Leray Goldsworthy and Bob Gracie.

Scored Three Goals

Fred Thurrier led Shore's Indians to their Saturday victory by scoring three of the six goals. Max Kaminsky scored twice while Glenn Brydson got the other. Larry Archambault, Art Lesieur and Mickey Blake tallied for the losing Pittsburg club.

Eary Bartholome paced the Cleveland attack with a pair of goals against the Bisons, while Norm Locking, Milford, and Les Cunningham notched singles. The Barons scored three goals in the last period, bringing their record to 21 goals in four games.

The scoring punch for Hershey against the Reds was provided by Wally Kilrea, who tallied twice in the middle period. Other Hershey goals were scored by Bobby Kirk and Gordon Bruce, while the lone Providence tally was scored by Windy Steele.

George Mantha, former major leaguer with Montreal Canadiens, got the only New Haven goal against Philadelphia in the first period. The Ramblers tied it up early in the second when Lude Wareing scored and a few minutes later Stu Smith scored the winner.

Stratford Wins O.R.F.U. Group By A 4-3 Score

TORONTO, Nov. 11. — Stratford won their O.R.F.U. group championship and qualified to meet the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders of Niagara Falls in the next round of the playdowns by whipping Oakwood Indians 4-3 on Saturday, at Oakwood Stadium.

A fumble by the Toronto team in the third quarter set the stage for a placement by Gilbride to enable the visitors to overcome a 2-1 lead that the Indians had built up on Jimmy Cummings' kicking. Stratford broke on top in the first quarter when Doug Smith kicked from the Oakwood 35-yard line to the deadline for a single point. With the wind at their backs, Oakwood carried the play in the second quarter and worked in deep in the visitors' territory. Fred Porter's attempt at placement went for a single and the score was tied. Cummings put Toronto ahead when he kicked a ball about 70 yards with the roll and it went for a single.

Chicago Hawks Win 3-1 Over Canadiens

By ROBERT CLARKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

One week of fighting along the National Hockey League battlefront has left the impression with even the most casual observer that it will be difficult for the other teams in the league to stop the drive of the New York Rangers' machine.

Only two games have been played by the unit led by Lester Patrick, but as both were in enemy territory they serve as a fair gauge on the capabilities of the team that finished second in the standing last season and then went on to win the Stanley Cup.

Two Unbeaten Teams.

Patrick's warriors started off Nov. 2 with a 4-1 victory over the Maple Leafs at Toronto, then followed it up last night by playing a 2-2 overtime draw in Detroit with the Red Wings.

As things stand now, the Rangers are one of two unbeaten teams in the league with Boston Bruins, who have played only a single game, being the other.

In other games of the week-end, Chicago Black Hawks and the Maple Leafs scored their first victories of the season, with the Hawks winning 3-1 last night over Canadiens in Montreal, and the Leafs blanking the Red Wings 3-0 Saturday night in Toronto.

The Rangers, who showed their ability to make lightning thrusts by scoring three goals in less than two minutes against Leafs in their first game, demonstrated a forceful counter-attack against the Wings. The Wings scored the first two goals, the Rangers the next two.

The first Detroit goal went to Sid Abel, a little more than a minute from the end of the first period. The Wings went two up when Kenny Kilrea scored shortly after the half-way mark in the second period but before the session was over Clint Smith and Neil Colville tallied for the Rangers to even the score.

Hawks First Win

The Black Hawks, beaten 1-0 by New York Americans on November 7, gained their victory over Canadiens with a pair of goals in the third period. The Hawks and Canadiens were matched in speed throughout the first two periods, but the Montrealers faded in the last session as Bill Carse and George Allen scored for the Hawks.

Before these goals, Tony Demera had blasted one of his bullet drives by goalie Paul Goodman of the Hawks in the first period and Johnny Chad had tallied in the second period to even it up. Heavy bodying by Chicago defencemen in the first two periods slowed down the Habitant forwards for the third frame.

Goal in Each Period

The Maple Leafs scored a goal in each period against the Wings Saturday night, with Nick Metz filling in brilliantly at left wing with Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon in place of injured Bob Davidson. Each man on the new line fired home a goal, with Apps getting the one in the first period, Metz the one in the second and Drillon the one in the third.

In addition, Drillon and Metz figured in Apps goal while Apps also picked up an assist on Metz's score. The only marker in which at least two of the men on the line did not figure was the one scored by Drillon, for defenceman Wally Stanowski made the play for the goal.

The shutout was the second of the season and the first one for goalie Turk Broda of the Leafs. Earl Robertson has the other from Americans' 1-0 victory over the Black Hawks.

Blue Bombers Capture Western Title

WINNIPEG, Nov. 11 — (CP). — Champions of the Western Interprovincial Football Union for the fourth successive year, Winnipeg Blue Bombers cast their eyes eastward to-day toward possible candidates for the proposed East-West football game in Toronto on December 7.

Bombers routed Calgary Bronks 23-2 here on Saturday afternoon to capture the Western Conference title in straight games. They won the first battle of the two-of-three series 7-0 in Calgary a week ago.

While nothing definite has been arranged, the Sports Service League has offered to sponsor an East-West game. Manager Joe Ryan, who received an offer for his Bombers to participate in the battle if they won out in the Western playoff, said the Winnipeg players will keep on their football togs at least until a decision has been reached regarding the Eastern game.

Bombers made themselves ineligible for the Canadian finals when they refused to play their schedule games under Canadian Rugby Union rules.

It might have been an unleashing of hidden power or it might have been the freezing temperatures which made the players lose faith in the numbing fingers, but Bombers uncovered a wealth of razzle-dazzle play in overwhelming Bronks on a snow-smothered gridiron on Saturday.

Three touchdowns, two field goals and a brace of converts made up the Winnipeg points. Bronks replied only with a two-point safety touch.

Pike Subs For Hiller On Rangers' Forward Line

Frankie Boucher is expecting great things this year from his New York Rangers, last year N.H.L. champions, and the Hextall-Watson-Pike line, will probably advance Frankie's expectations considerably. Hiller is usually the playmate of Hextall and Watson but at present is out with an injured knee.

Argos To Meet In Finals Rough Riders

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The preliminaries have resulted exactly as had been forecast early in the season, though not with the same sureness, the East's fast-closing football season hits playoff time with the same old casts in the same old roles.

It is Ottawa Rough Riders, the champions, and Toronto Argonauts again in the Interprovincial Union, as it has been since 1936, and Sarnia Battery and Toronto Balmy Beach in the Ontario Union. The only difference in the O.R.F.U. set-up is the name of the Sarnia club—the Battery for the old Imperials.

Two Tough Battles.

The Big Four leaders reeled in on Saturday, groggy under the pounding of the bottom clubs and barely having escaped a second-place playoff between Argonauts and the gallant Hamilton Tigers. Ottawa just beat out the Tigers, 19-18, while Argos came from behind in the last quarter to snatch a 15-11 triumph from Montreal.

Beaches continued their unbeaten, untied streak though they had to get a touchdown in the last few minutes to whip Hamilton Alerts 9-3 at Hamilton. The Battery, without some of their first-string stars, defeated the winless Camp Borden Soldiers 6-0 at London.

The Tigers had to win on Saturday and Argos had to lose to bring about an added playoff—and it almost happened. Deep in their own territory and ahead 15-13 on touchdowns by Doug Turner and Bud Donald, Tigers fumbled a ball deep in their territory. Dave Sprague kicked it across the line and fell on it for a touchdown.

Second Field Goal.

Bill Murmylyk kicked his second field goal of the game a little later to make it 18-18, but Tigers couldn't catch up. The scoring stars of the game were Orville Burke and Andy Tommy, who caught two of Burke's passes for touchdowns.

At Toronto, 10,000 fans watched with amazement as Montreal outplayed Lew Hayman's Argo machine and yielded only in the closing minutes when Bobby Coulter sprinted 53 yards to set up the winning touchdown. The little back won the game on a kick-runback, bringing the ball to the Montreal five where he tossed a lateral that Jimmy Riddell knocked down.

Passed, Kicked, Ran Better.

The ball bounced over the line and Jack Wedley fell on it for Argos. That nullified a third-down score by Ed Burton who caught a 40-yard pass from Doug Smaill and ran 10 for a touchdown to give Montreal a 10-9 lead. Montreal passed, kicked and ran a little better than Argos, but the pay-off was on the points, and Argos had them.

Beaches built up a two-point lead against Alerts, then came from behind with a fourth-quarter touchdown after Walter Gibb's placement field goal wiped out their margin. Eddie Manson set up the touch with a 50-yard burst through the Alert line to the 15, from where Bill Drinkwater took it over on the second down.

Jim Butler's fine kicking sent Borden down to defeat. Butler punted four singles and another of his kicks was dropped by Eddie Thompson, who fell on the ball to concede a safety touch. Sarnia's victory was costly, however. Gus Scheiers, a good halfback, broke a leg and will be lost for the playoffs.

Oshawa Ties Sea Gulls

MIDLAND, Nov. 11.—(CP).—Atlantic City Sea Gulls and Oshawa juniors, 1940 Canadian champions, played a 4-4 tie in an exhibition hockey game here Saturday night.

Conacher scored two goals for the Oshawa team and Sawyer and Eddolls accounted for the others. Pozzo and Webster, with two each, made the counters for the Sea Gulls.

Two Mighty Little Footballers With Ottawa Rough Riders

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 11 — (CP). — The eyes of the crowd will be on two mighty little footballers who run the bigger boys ragged when Ottawa Rough Riders meet Toronto Argonauts here next Saturday in the first playoff game of the big four football league.

The new scoring combine of little Andy Tommy and littler Orville Burke came out in the open with a vengeance on Saturday as Riders fought their way to a tight 19-18 victory over Hamilton's Tigers. Tommy weighs only 160 pounds, Burke 153.

Twice Burke ghosted back, swung his arm and sent the ball sailing straight into Tomy's arms. All Tommy had to do each time was cross the Tiger goal-line.

The touchdowns gave Tommy 20 points and second place in the league scoring totals, one point behind Hamilton's Scotty Wright. So it's something of a paradox for two such tackweights, smallest men on the team, to carry the ball for Ottawa. It becomes less confusing, though, after study of the records.

Through eight long seasons, Andy Tommy has been one of the arresting figures in the Big Four scene. In 1933—his first season with the Riders—he set up an individual record by sprinting 115 yards for a touchdown aginst Toronto Argonauts.

No Experience.

Tommy was born in Hartland, N.B., but spent most of his early career at nearby Woodstock. In 1933, with nothing behind him but experience gained playing English rugger in his native New Brunswick, he travelled to Ottawa and became the freshman sensation of the Big Four.

Burke's role with the Riders been less conspicuous but just as important. Ever since 1936, when quarterbacking Ottawa became his steady job, the shifty forward passer has been the man who made Riders tick.

The 1939 Dominion finalists had plenty of power before Burke came on the scene, but couldn't seem to hit their real stride. Then Orville started firing passes all over the lot and Coach Ross Trimble's team had the punch and diversity it needed.

Ever since, it's been a case of "as Burke goes, so go the Riders." He's good in every game they win and if they lost it's a pretty safe bet Orville was off-color.

No better illustration is needed than the Dominion final between Ottawa and Winnipeg Blue Bombers last fall. Burke's passing was less effective than usual that day and with a minute to play he bobbled a catch that led to Winnipeg's winning point.

Fees Remitted Military Teams

SASKATOON, Nov. 11— (CP).— Military leagues and military hockey teams will be given special attention by the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association if the plans made by the executive at its meeting here on Saturday are carried out.

Military hockey teams will be admitted to the provincial intermediate hockey playdowns without the payment of the usual registration fees.

If after a survey, it is found that equipment is required, all recommendations for purchase will be dealt with by a S.A.H.A. committee.

During the 1939-40 season, the S.A.H.A. made grants of $100 each to military hockey leagues at Regina and Weyburn, while in Saskatoon approximately $700 was raised for the Auxiliary Council for War Services.

This amount was used for the purchase of hockey equipment, which will be available again this season.

Chilean Takes Jumps To Win Military Stake

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 — (AP). — For the fellow who takes his horse shows with the rest of the sports page headlines, the neatest description of Major Eduardo Yanez, the Chilean, probably is that he's a rider's rider.

He's a little man, barely big enough to look over the backs of some of the husky hunters and jumpers in the 55th National Horse Show, and he's probably the quietest member of the team of happy-go-lucky Chileans. But when he climbs on one of the small South American-breds which he and his team brought up with them, you know you're looking at the real thing.

The gallery at Madison Square Garden has been cheering him for three years. But where you really find out his worth is in talking to some of the riders he's beaten, the cavalrymen from Mexico, Cuba and the United States army who wound up behind him last night in the $1,000 International Military Stake.

He rode on to the Garden's tanbark last night on Toqui, a little old chestnut, standing only 14.3 hands high.

Major Yanez, who goes over a jump on his horse's neck, looking like a part of the jumper, himself, piloted little Toqui over 12 of the toughest barriers in the show world—some of them five feet high and 12 feet across. At the end of the first round, he was tied with three U. S. army horses.

In a jump-off, with elapsed time to count as well as the leaping, Toqui and the Major did it again. The time of 54 seconds flat was just good enough to beat one of the surprise United States horses, eight-year-old Smacko, owned and ridden by Capt. C. B. McClelland of Tennessee and Fort Myer, Va., who went over the 12 jumps the second time in 54 2/5 seconds.

Regina Rough Riders, then the top team in Western Canada rugby, defeated Calgary Altomahs 30-2 at Calgary eight years ago today for their seventh consecutive western championship. Until 1935, Regina squads virtually dominated the prairie gridiron scene. They have won the western title twice since.

Neville Chamberlain, Prime Minister Who Fough t For Peace, Mourned By Empire

Democracies of the world join the British Empire in mourning the passing of Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, former Prime Minister of Britain, who devoted his tenure of office in a vain attempt to prevent the present war. The highlight of his career was probably his conference at Munich with Hitler, Mussolini and Premier Daladier of France, LOWER CENTRE. It was from this conference that Mr. Chamberlain came back to England and announced, "Peace in our time." A year later he was faced with the task of declaring war on Germany. In an effort to create a better relationship with Italy, he visited Rome, accompanied by Lord Halifax. They are shown, TOP CENTRE, with Count Ciano and Premier Mussolini. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain are shown, LEFT, leaving No. 10 Downing Street en route to the House of Commons, while Mr. Chamberlain is pictured, RIGHT, leaving Downing Street to attend the King's levee at Buckingham Palace.

MORE ABOUT—

fellow citizens will long remember him as a virtual Parks Commissioner, although he was only chairman of the committee, and received no remuneration for work that could not have been done more faithfully and diligently if he had been drawing a salary for it. Some recent detail of planting trees he had bought for the city was in his mind when death was strangely close to him. Presumably it was his last thought. For several years his health had been uncertain, requiring periods of rest, and in that conserving of the strength he had left he made it a practice to remain in bed on Saturday mornings. At the meeting of the relief committee about the middle of last week he had mentioned the purchase of two or three hundred trees for planting before winter came, and was telling the other members of the council about their arrival in several consignments and their prompt planting. When the noon hour came Saturday he knew that H. W. Cooper, an employee of the parks committee would report what progress had been made with the last of these saplings, and he asked his wife to telephone for news about what the men had done. That incident in the privacy of his home is justified in telling as a last evidence of the concern he gave to this phase of the city's beautification. Mrs. Stocker was on the stairs going down to telephone when she heard a sound that stopped her. When she got back to the room it was too late for any human help to be called.

The Examiner had called the Stocker residence about ten o'clock in the morning to ask the Parks chairman for some information about the places where he was having the trees planted, but Mrs. Stocker had suggested that he would not be up for a while, and the enquiry was put off until today. Although it was realized that his health was uncertain, the death of Mr. Stocker came as a decided shock in the remembrance of his animation at the council meeting last Monday night and the later meeting of the relief committee.

An Ardent Trustee

At one of the municipal nomination meetings at which he was proposed for re-election he said in a brief statement: "If you want to know what I have done, all you have to do is look around the city." The thoroughness of his civic work was characteristic of everything to which he had ever turned his hand. He never spared himself or looked for soft spots, he never padded an aldermanic expense sheet, and never evaded a responsibility, sometimes unpleasant, if he thought his decision and his action were in the interests of the taxpayers.

And it can also be said as a reflection of the spirit of harmony and confidence within successive councils, first under Roland Denne, then under George A. Macdonald and last under Mayor Hamilton, that Alderman Stocker's associates let him have his way, knowing how deeply his interest was attached to the beautification of the city in parks and boulevards and corners here and there where he set out trees and flowers.

Walter Stocker was seventy-eight years old a few months ago, on August 12. He was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to Peterborough in 1888. His first employment was with the late Peter Hamilton, father of Mayor Hamilton. Their home faced on Water street, south of King street, on the lot on which the Peter Hamilton Company plant was located. He had brought from the Old Country and Englishman's love of flowers and lawns, and a knowledge of practical horticulture which he had gained as a boy. Part of his duties around the Hamilton works was as gardener. Some years later he bought the bill posting business of E. C. Hill, who apparently carried it only as a side line to his grocery shop at the corne of Park and Brock streets, the present N. T. Routly store.

Lived On Aylmer Street

Mr. Stocker's work for years took him through the Peterborough district, even beyond the bounds of this county, when he had to travel by horse and cart or sleigh, and he came to be widely known. He was financially successful and about the time he went in the city council he retired. He was president of the Canadian Bill Posters' Association, and had much to do with effecting the changes which transformed the old style bill boards into their present illuminated and panelled design. He lived for some years in the large house which stood on the lot that is the site of the Nashua Paper Company's plant, facing on Aylmer street. It was a big frame house that was later moved up Aylmer street, south of Rink street. W. B. Bamford, now of Nelson, B.C., and then C.P.R. station agent, had occupied the same premises in their original location.

Alderman Stocker then moved to Albert street, and finally to Gilmour street, and it is recalled that he always found time to plant flowers, keep his lawns cut, and generally to give his home an attractiveness that was conspicuous. Those who lived near him in the south end regarded him as a good neighbor, as fine a tribute as any that could be paid to his memory.

A lover of music and possessed of a strong baritone voice that was often heard in local concerts years ago—one of his songs was "The Soldiers of the Queen"—Walter Stocker was also a faithful concert-goer, including trips to hear the Mendelssohn Choir, first under the famous Voght and later under Fricker, and he was a decidedly active patron of music at one time. It is related that Mr. Stocker, the late John Crane, John J. Turner and R. M. Glover, comprised a local group who brought many fine artists and musical organizations to Peterborough for concert engagements, such as the Black Watch Band, the Meistersingers Quartette, Dan Godfrey's band, John Phillip Sousa's band, the Boston Orchestra, Madame Nordica, David Bispham, the Sheffield Choir, and others.

Mr. Stocker was also a cricketer in the old days of the Peterborough Cricket Club, and later officiated as an umpire. He continued until last year to be a keen follower of Old Country cricket, and frequently called at the Examiner office for reports on Test and other matches.

His Civic Service

Mr. Stocker was first elected to the council in 1922 when he was returned second to E. Mel Turner, who headed the aldermanic polls in that year under W. H. Taylor. It is recalled that he was nominated by George H. Duncan and Roland Denne, both subsequently elected mayors and now deceased.

Alderman Stocker remained in the council until 1926 when he retired to become market clerk. After one year of that experience he was appointed by the council to the aldermanic vacancy created by the resignation of E. M. Turner. In that year, 1927, Mr. Stocker was a candidate but was defeated, being sixth. And because he was next in order after the first five who were elected, he was proposed for the vacancy on Alderman McIntyre's motion, seconded by Alderman Cotton. W. T. Holloway was mayor in 1927, and J. M. Greene was chairman of the parks committee. On November 8 that year Alderman Stocker was appointed chairman of the Board of Works to fill out the term of J. O. Fife, who had resigned to become chief operator at the sewage disposal plant. He was chairman of all the committees except the finance, and in 1930 was appointed chairman of the parks committee, retaining that post until the present. It may be recalled that in 1936 he was elected second to R. M. Glover who headed the polls. According to those records Alderman Stocker was a member of the council for eighteen years.

Other Services

Alderman Stocker was chairman of the Board of Health eight years, became dissatisfied with the management of that institution, contending that it was costing the taxpayers too much, and eventually brought about changes which had the direct result of cutting the annual cost in two. The earnestness with which he went about his civic obligations led him into some stormy sessions of the Board of Health at that time, but he was convinced he was right and followed the course he had set with the same tenacity which he had shown in other enterprises.

He used to be actively interested in the Peterborough Horticultural Society, and was its president for several years ultimately receiving its diploma of merit. He had long been a member of the Children's Aid Society, was a leader in the purchase of the Popham property at the south end of the city, and in other phases of its management which have now been almost forgotten. He was a member of the executive of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund during the last war, and in all these public bodies his aim was to see that the people's money was expended efficiently so as to obtain full value. It may be that at times he followed that trait to a fault, but his priciple was influenced by his own innate sense of industry, of doing the job as well as possible.

As chairman of the parks committee Alderman Stocker began building up great compost piles using leaves and other street sweepings, thereby obtaining at slight cost, valuable fertilizing material for parks and boulevards, an economy that is now established. He resodded Central Park after removing the old thin turf and the layer of gravel underneath it, a foundation which he used to tell the council would never make green grass during hot summer weather, because there was no fertility beneath it. But, his work during the last ten years speaks eloquently of what he did, and hundreds of citizens voted consistently for him because they appreciated the improvement which he brought about in all parts of the city and they could see simply by observation how sincerely he gave himself to the work of making Peterborough a more beautiful city for everybody, and as an example that would eventually be emulated by the city's home-makers.

A member of the Masonic Order he was affiliated with Peterborough Lodge A.F. & A.M. and was its Master in 1902. Of the men who preceded him in that office there are only three now surviving.

Funeral On Tuesday

Mr. Stocker is survived by his widow, and two daughters, Mrs. W. M. Fiester of Shreveport, Louisiana, and Mrs. Chalmer Nicholls of Montreal. He was twice married, his first wife being, Maria Taylor, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. from Trinity Church to the Little Lake Cemetery. Mr. Stocker was a member of Trinity Church, and before its erection he was a member of the old Charlotte Street Methodist Church, and sang in its choir.

Chamberlain

were the first tributes paid publicly.

King George and Queen Elizabeth headed the list of many who sent private messages to the family. During his illness they recently spent an hour at his bedside.

Official tributes awaited the next session of Parliament when Chamberlain's staunch friend, Winston Churchill, who succeeded him as Prime Minister, will speak in his honor along with other senior statesmen.

Under a heading "He Served Britain," the Daily Mail said today "Neville Chamberlain will be remembered as a sincere, high-minded, steadfast statesman. His successes and his failures all sprang from one abiding motive—to serve right in serving Britain."

The Times said of Chamberlain's efforts to reach a peace understanding with totalitarian leaders:

"We know now that what he attempted no man could have achieved, but against organized evil with which he was fated to contend the work which he did for his country will shine in its sincerity more and more strongly as the years pass."

Chamberlain's death revived rumors in political circles of new changes in the government.

It was suggested that his longtime associate, Lord Halifax, be shifted from the Foreign Office to the India Office. There, the Daily Herald (Labor) said, he would be "probably better qualified than anyone to heal the present lamentable breach" with India.

These reports also mentioned War Secretary Anthony Eden, who broke with Chamberlain over the appeasement program, as the possible successor to Lord Halifax in the Foreign Office.

It fell to the lot of Neville Chamberlain, who once described himself as "a man of peace from the depths of my soul," to lead the British Empire to war against Germany.

On Sept. 3, 1939, in announcing to the House of Commons and the nation the fact that Germany's invasion of Poland had brought into effect Britain's guarantee and that consequently Britain was at war, he said:

"I cannot tell what part I may be allowed to play, but I trust I may live to see the day when Hitlerism has been destroyed and a restored and liberated Europe has been re-established."

That hope was denied him.

"Everything I had worked for, hoped for and believed in during my public life has crashed into ruins," he said.

"There is but one thing left for me and that is to devote what strengths and powers I have to forwarding victory of the cause."

Before this he had been the apostle of appeasement and non-intervention in an uneasy Europe, devoting himself to a quest of means to settle international quarrels without recourse to war.

Once, when war seemed imminent over the acute crisis between Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, he staved it off at the eleventh hour with the historic "Pact of Munich."

Thought He Brought Peace

For this he was hailed in London and throughout most of the world. He brought back "peace in our time," he said. Hitler signed with him a declaration that the British and German people planned to fight each other no more. But it was a scrap of paper. Six months later Hitler broke his word by entering Prague; in another six months he invaded Poland.

The day war began Mr. Chamberlain brought Winston Churchill into his Cabinet as First Lord of the Admiralty.

Mr. Chamberlain devoted himself as wholeheartedly to victory with arms as he had striven for peace. But Britain was not ready. There were staggering problems to be met against the fully prepared Germans. Crises arose in the Government.

The Nazis rumbled over Poland, Norway, Denmark, Britain's expeditionary force was compelled to evacuate Norway. During the fighting there Mr. Chamberlain had proclaimed his confidence of victory and said "Hitler had missed the bus."

A bitter debate in Parliament ensued. The phrase "missed the bus" was hurled at the Prime Minister, who defended himself doggedly.

But many members of his Conservative Party voted against him. He was sustained on a vote of confidence by only a narrow margin. Last May 10 he resigned.

Winston Churchill succeeded him. The new Prime Minister, an admirer of Mr. Chamberlain's qualities of tenacity and sincerity, invited him into the Government as Lord President of the Council.

Then came a serious operation for an abdominal ailment during the summer. He returned to his duties after a long rest, his health below par, and on October 3 he resigned, stating he had suffered a relapse and needed to seek rest.

Led in Hectic Days.

Neville Chamberlain rose to world eminence in anxious days — days that threatened Europe with general war less than twenty years after the close of history's deadliest armed conflict.

Through the hectic years of war in Spain, war in China, and armed coercion in Central Europe; with the world harassed by totalitarian demands for expansion, demands for trade, demands for colonies, Chamberlain stood out as a figure striving for peace. First, peace by appeasement; and when that appeared on the point of failure, peace by opposing force with force.

Criticized and applauded throughout his efforts to appease the dictators before the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia, Chamberlain remained outwardly calm. He was equally calm—and hard—when that "wanton violation of a solemn pledge" brought a reshaping of the British policy. For the first time in history Britain, under Chamberlain, guaranteed frontiers in Eastern Europe; for the first time since Cromwell she conscripted men in times of nominal peace.

Nearly 50 when he entered the House og Commons, Chamberlain rose higher than his brilliant father, Joseph, and his half-brother Austen. Until the "war-scare" years he was perhaps best known for carrying through, as Chancelor of the Exchequer, the project nearest his father's heart. In 1932 he introduced an Empire preference tariff schedule in his budget, reversing the century-old British policy of free imports.

Shortly after Chamberlain became Prime Minister, a biographer, referring to his natural reserve and innate shyness, wrote of him:

"He had no glowing eloquence or aptness for coining phrases that stamp themselves on the public mind or memory."

Became Premier in 1937.

Yet, within a year of that verbal estimate, the practical, realist Premier had given utterance to speeches that will have a place in the pages of history.

War talk and lawless international action were almost epidemic when he took over the Prime Ministership from Stanley Baldwin on May 31, 1937. Although beset with mounting problems at home, he promptly applied himself to the task of saving the Empire, Europe, and possibly the world from war, which he held to be the cruelest and most senseless method of settling disputes.

Undeclared war raged between Japan and China. Spain was wracked by a long and bitter civil revolt, in which Italy and Germany openly intervened in behalf of the Fascists. A series of delicate incidents developed, involving Britain, France, Russia and some of the smaller nations. There was an ever-present danger of an open rupture between the democracies and the totalitarian powers.

Despite caustic criticism and denunciation from the Opposition in Parliament and some sections of the press, Chamberlain persevered in what he believed to be the course toward peace. He steadfastly pursued a policy of "non-intervention" and "appeasement" and sought by every means to win the friendship of Germany and Italy.

This policy, however, cost the Prime Minister in February, 1938, the services of his young and popular Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden, who even then was being mentioned as his possible successor.

Eden didn't see eye to eye with his chief on the abandonment of collective security under the aegis of the League of Nations, but retired from the Government chiefly over the issue of "standing up" to the dictators. He demanded some prior evidence of good faith from Mussolini before treaty negotiations were opened.

1938 Fall Crisis.

Lord Halifax took over the portfolio, but as he had no voice in the lower House, Chamberlain in effect became the active Foreign Minister.

He had not long to wait before his personal qualifications in that post were put to the test. In the midst of the world's turmoil and tension Germany annexed Austria, and smouldering embers of discontent among the 3,000,000 Sudetan Germans of Czecho-Slovakia suddenly flared into the crisis of September, 1938.

Original demands for local autonomy and other special concessions developed into a full-throated cry for self-determination. Violent disorder broke out throughout Sudetanland. There was heavy toll of life and property on both side before the Czech Government invoked martial law and arrested some of the Nazi leaders in the frontier area.

Efforts to settle the dispute ended in a deadlock, and Hitler stepped in with the might of Germany's arms to support the Sudeten demands. Danger signals flashed across Europe, and the word "war" was on every one's lips.

It was a situation unparalleled since 1914, but it also provided Chamberlain with a role which earned him world acclaim — and later, some criticism.

Flew To Meet Hitler.

Although on the eve of his seventieth birthday, he essayed three plane trips within two weeks to Germany, where, face to face with Hitler, he sought to save peace. Some questioned the wisdom of the Prime Minister's decision, but few challenged its timeliness or doubted its sincerity.

The Munich pact was the ultimate outcome. Under its terms Czecho-Slovakia was called upon to grant the fullest measure of the Sudetan demands. But the headlong rush of Europe into war had been halted.

Chamberlain returned to London to receive one of the greatest popular welcomes ever accorded an individual in the city's long and colorful history. His policy of appeasement and direct approach was hailed as a personal triumph.

Less than six months later Hitler's troops were on the march, the Munich pact was dead, Czecho-Slovakia dissolved and brought under the protective wing of Imperial Germany. The era of appeasement was at an end.

Foreign Policy Revamped

Hitler's action came as a severe blow to Chamberlain, but, by scrapping a solemn pledge and spurning a gesture of lasting peace, the Fuehrer became directly responsible for the most drastic peacetime reorientation of Britain foreign policy in history.

Chamberlain, with the backing of France, promptly launched what became known as the "Peace Front" against aggression.

Guarantees of protection against unprovoked attack were extended to Poland, Turkey, Rumania and Greece.

Peacetime conscription was introduced in Britain for the first time since the days of Cromwell.

Strength of the Territorial Army was doubled and by the end of 1939 nearly a million men were under arms.

The nation's already enormous national defence program was enlarged and an unprecedented campaign of preparedness set in motion.

In defence of his changed policy, Chamberlain said:

"Man of peace as I am, there is one claim which, if it were made, must as it seems to me be resisted if necessary by force. That would be a claim by any one State to dominate others by force, since, if such claim were admitted, I see no possibility of peace of mind or body for anyone."

He insisted, however, that resistance to such claims did not involve denial of the right of any nation to put forward its grievances, its difficulties or desires and to have them examined by others in a spirit of understanding and good-will.

Few families have held such a long and continuous eminence on the political stage of the nation as the Chamberlains. But for the caprice of fortune, the honor of becoming First Minister might have fallen years before to the father, Joseph, known as the "Great Imperialist," or to Neville's half-brother, Austen, who had been dedicated almost from birth to the profession of politics. Actually, Neville as a young man declared: "I have not the slightest intention now or at any time of entering Parliament. I desire to be a business man, pure and simple."

With the voluntary departure of Baldwin, selection of Chamberlain as successor was regarded as a foregone conclusion. Like so many of his predecessors, he stepped into the exalted office from the Chancellery of the Exchequer, at the age of 68, or eighteen years after he made his debut in the House of Commons.

"I am assuming the duties and responsibilities attached to the office of Prime Minister at an age when most people would think of retiring from active work," he told the Conservative party convention following his selection.

In an anteroom awaiting the decision of the party, he had been afforded ample opportunity of reflecting upon the realities of acceptance or rejection of an invitation to lead the nation.

No major point of policy could be decided, he said, no really fateful step taken, without the assent, either active or passive, of the Prime Minister. If things went wrong he could never escape the reflection: "I might have prevented this if I had thought or acted differently."

In his peroration he said: "I have not been so much wracked by anxiety as to the result of your deliberations. I have rather been thinking how much more easily I should sleep tonight if your full choice fell somewhere else. But although I have never sought this or any other office, I have never thought it right to shirk any duties which other people thought me capable or performing."

shortly before noon.

Roof-top observers estimated that German bombers roared over the city last night at a one-a-minute clip, pounding away with high explosive bombs for five hours despite a furious anti-aircraft barrage, but a government communique said damage was not great and "casualties are not likely to prove heavy."

Bomb Hits Crowded Pub

Most of the casualties, the government said, occurred when a high explosive bomb plunged squarely on a crowded pub on the south bank of the Thames Estuary. Patrons were trapped by falling glass and brickwork and an undisclosed number was killed and injured.

Rescue workers struggled throughout the night to release victims and doctors crawled under the wreckage ministering to the injured.

In addition to the attacks on London, invading fliers struck at towns in various sections of the embattled island, including the industrial Midlands. The government said activity as a whole was "not particularly heavy" but "somewhat greater than on the previous night." Most night raids stopped soon after midnight.

In the capital, four members of a stretcher party were killed when a bomb hit a maternity and child welfare clinic being used as an air raid protection depot. A hospital, a hotel, several houses and places of business also were damaged and casualties caused.

One bomb hit a home, killing an entire family of eight, including a three-month-old baby.

Air activity over England was light during Sunday.

About 150 persons, including many women and children, escaped from a flooded basement shelter beneath a London orphanage damaged when two bombs fell nearby. One of the bombs fell in a roadway and the other burst at the base of the building, smashing water main which flooded the shelter.

After police and rescue workers swam around in the icy water for a considerable time they reported that all had been saved.

One of the rescued said:

"There was about 150 of us down in the shelter. The first thing we knew was the crashing of masonry and then water rushing in. We immediately made for the back entrance and within a few seconds we were wading through water up to our waists."

forces were overthrown, and, hastening to escape complete encirclement, retreated in disorder, hotly pursued. In their flight they carried away with them other enemy forces which were landed at Valona (Albania) and rushed by motor car to....support their retreat.

"Enemy losses in dead and wounded were very heavy. A large number of prisoners was taken and a great quantity of all sorts of war material not yet counted fell into our hands."

To the west, toward the coast, where the Italians started their first wedge into Epirus almost two weeks ago, the Greeks were said to have stopped another Italian attack over the week-end, annihilated two battalions, and forced the invaders back under heavy artillery fire.

From heights overlooking the encircled Italian base at Koritza, at the opposite end of the battlefront, additional Greek guns hauled into position through ice and slush were reported to be continuing a steady bombardment, reducing Italian defences for a final assault.

The Athens radio alleged Italian prisoners reported that Albanian troops, fighting alongside Italian units, had been machine-gunned from the back when they retreated.

The radio gave this summary of the situation over the week-end:

"The Italians tried to invade Greece from three different points, from the Koritza-Phlorina road, from the Pindus road, and from the west.

"The Pindus road had been considered by the Italians as more suitable for a blow at the Greek army. The Greeks frustrated the Italian attempt and dispersed the Italian army of the centre . . . The advance whose object was to unite this column with the central army—was rendered problematical, and the failure in the northern sector as a result of our occupation of important positions in front of Koritza bars this column's movement to Macedonia."

Unfavorable weather brought a let-up in Italian air raids. Two towns on the Greek Island of Crete were reported bombed yesterday.

A Greek spokesman pointed to the change in Italian commanders in the campaign from Albania and said it indicated the view at Rome that the drive has been a failure. (Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, Italian Undersecretary of War, was sent to Albania Saturday to take charge of the campaign.)

The first American Red Cross contribution for war relief—$5,000—was received by the Greek Red Cross yesterday. Greece's Premier, Gen. John Metaxas, replied with a letter of thanks.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO DEAD OF TWO GREAT WARS

MAIN STREET TOPICS

A CORRECTION

In the account of Alderman Stocker's life and work published in another column today, the place of his birth was written as being Yorkshire. It should have been in Hemingford, Huntingdonshire, England.

Mr. Trumpour wsa driving south, coming in off the Chemong Road and the Lorne car had been travelling north-east along Reid Street. At the intersection with Stewart Street the two vehicles came into contact and both were damaged.

A STOCKER STORY

A down town citizen who had known Walter Stocker almost from the time of his coming to Peterborough recalled a typical outburst in some incident many years ago. "There was some kind of meeting on the market and a soap box orator was addressing the crowd. Stocker was quite a young man then. He didn't agree with what was being said, and he hollered out 'Rats,' and got in wrong with the partisan audience. But, wasn't that like him. He didn't try to conceal his thoughts."

Cloud Of War Over Legion's Remembrance

"Our backs are to the wall again, but our heads are high and our trust is in God who will not fail those who serve Him."

In this avowal of faith and pledge of fidelity, a solemnly phrased declaration, Captain Thomas Magliederry, New Liskeard, president of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion, affirmed anew the covenant of his comrades to hold aloft the torch of freedom in recalling the memories of those who fell in the Great War of 1914-1918 at this morning's ceremony of Remembrance.

Rain failed to dampen the spirit of the men of the Legion or keep them away from their reunion and their rekindling of old memories as hundreds of them paraded over the familiar downtown route with comparative few other citizens in their train.

Veterans of the last war with Girl Guides and Boy Scouts and headed by the Prince of Wales Rangers' Band marched again this morning, commemorating the armistice of November 11, 1918, which Captain George S. Easton said had, after all, been only a truce between two great wars.

If the company of civilians was noticeably small within the assembly hall of the Armouries, under whose protective roof the veterans sought shelter this morning, the number of representatives of local organizations was just as large as ever, and their wreaths placed on the city's war memorial and on the Legion's cenotaph were as numerous as ever. Municipal remembrance was expressed in the presence of Warden John McColl, who carried the county's wreath, Alderman Bradburn bearing the city's wreath, and accompanied by Alderman Dutton, and D. G. H. Melton performing that duty for the oBard of Education.

To Fight On.

George Gimblett was chairman of the Legion's commemorative service, and Lt.-Col. M. R. Sloan introduced Captain Magliederry, who said in the awful commonplace of today that the world is again torn with strife and the security of everything dear to free people was trembling in the balance.

"We pledge again to our comrades who made the supreme sacrifice in the last war that we will continue to fight until the hordes of Huns and their associates of evil have been overthrown, and victory is with the armies of right."

"We have no hatred of other countries impelling us in this war, we have no desire to engage in this primitive thing of war and conquer other countries," Capt. Magladerry said. "The Canadian Legion has never glorified war or tried to perpetuate the memory of the last war. No body of men has any deeper hatred of war than we have, but we can't forget those ecomrades of ours who gave all and did not come back.

The principles of political and religious freedom, and a free press, the right of men to live their lives in ordinary security were just as dear today as they were 25 years ago, just as worthy of sacrifice, Capt. Magladerry said.

Only Years of Truce

"It is no longer fitting to celebrate this as Armistice Day," said Captain (Rev.) George S. Easton, chaplain of the Legion. "That day began at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month of the year 1918, when the hope of the world was that war was ended and peace and security established. But, it turned out to be only an armistice. From November 11, 1918, to September, 1939, were only years of truce between wars.

However, we can dedicate this day appropriately as Remembrance Day to the memory of the 60,383 comrades who came not back to Canada, who rest in foreign soil under alien skies, and in a land temporarily under the dictators' heel. And we can fittingly dedicate this day to the memory of their dream, the oldest dream of all free people: that freedom, justice and honor would be established in a world secure and at peace. For that, half a million Canadians risked their youth and lives and faced the certainty of suffering and the probability of wounds and death. If as we are given to say that their youth was spent and their lives lost in vain, it can still be their pride and their country's pride that they had and have no part in the betrayal of their dream.

The British people, heirs of freedom, have chosen to die for it rather than live without it, and we can remember our comrades and their dream by one more dedicating ourselves to our King, country and God." Captain (Rev.) P. J. Kelly related the story of Edmund of Norfolk in early English history, and the capture of a prince of Denmark who expected to be killed simply because he was an alien Dane.

"If you were in our country we'd kill you because you are a Saxon," the Danish prince said; and the reply of Edmund was that he had done nothing that deserved death.

Today, Captain Kelly pointed out, British people were killed because they were British, and not because they had done any harm to the enemy with whom they were now engaged. He also said that Britain's only active ally was the little country of Greece, from whom many of our laws had originated, and had given the world of old much of its art.

Captain Kelly said men liked to feel that they were in good company, and in this war the Canadian people were side by side with the home-loving British and the intelligence of the Greeks.

The Remembrance Day custom of standing with bowed heads for two minutes of silence, now a tradition since that first ceremony in the year after the armistice, was observed again this morning in the two minutes that began with the sounding of whistles of Peterborough's industries, and during that hush, Capt. W. Peryer of the Rangers' Band sounded the Last Post and Reveille.

This morning's celebration seems to have been affected everywhere by the distraction of the present outrages of the Germans and their Italian allies, directed by the twin dictators, Hitler and Mussolini. The Remembrance Day spirit of other years was refreshed by the members of the Legion, their long parade including again the large deputation of members who marched uptown from the Canadian General Electric Company, but the overhanging cloud of anxiousness and the awareness of the new sacrifices that are being made and that may greatly increase seemed to be upon the public assembly.

Norwegian Steals Boat, Reaches England After Being Forced Down In Nazi Plane

AN EASTERN CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 11 — (CP). — Another story of the German invasion of Norway was recounted to-day when big, bronzed Lieut. Haakon Rudstad, who is to train with the Norwegian Air Force in Ontario, strode down a gangway here after a voyage from a United Kingdom port.

Rudstad was stationed at an airport in Northern Norway when the Germans invaded the country. He stole one of the enemy's planes—carelessly left unguarded — and started off for the United Kingdom. But fog and sleet obscured landfalls at both the Shetland Islands and the mainland, and he was forced to turn back.

His plane ran out of gas and he had to pancake down on the North Sea. He inflated a rubber boat and paddled only a short distance to the Norwegian Coast.

Then he crept back again to the airport. This time, with other Norwegian airmen, he stole a group of lifeboats and, equipping them with sails, once more made for England. They landed safely and offered their services to the Norwegian Government.

Wolf Steals Liver From Hunter Dies Later Without A Meal

In years gone by queer tales of hunters and wolves have come out of the north country, but this story of a wolf and an Apsley guide shades them all.

It happened last week when a party of deer hunters including George Marshall of Toronto, Fred Marshall, former game overseer of this city, Wellington Lean, Apsley, Norman Lean, Reeve of Burleigh township, Melville Sine of Stirling, and Charley Smith, veteran hunter and trapper from Apsley went into camp near Eel's Lake.

Charley Smith likes liver and onions and this is the crux of the story.

He has the habit of carrying a lunch tied in a bandana handkerchief to his braces at the back instead of in a haversack.

While hunting alone he shot a large deer, hung it up, cleaned it, and carefully removed the liver. Having eaten his lunch he decided to wrap the liver in the bandanna and then he tied it to his braces at the back.

It so happens that in the section of the wild country, north and west of Apsley, there lived a wolf, an old fellow known as "Two-toed Pete." This wolf had lost three toes from one front paw, either in a trap or from a rifle bullet, and hunters had noticed the peculiar track for the past five years.

Smith was climbing a steep hill on his way back to camp with the liver dangling in the handkerchief when he felt a sharp tug and his braces gave way at the back. The sudden jolt upset the hunter, and he thought at first he had got caught in the branch of a tree. As he scrambled to his feet, he was surprised to see a large wolf loping away through the bush, with the red handkerchief in his mouth. Smith cut loose with his forty-four rifle and the first shot flattened the wolf. As Smith described it "He was opened out like Eaton's catalogue."

It seems that blood from the liver had been dropping on the ground, and attracted the wolf. It was the cripple, "Two-Toed Pete" and as he was hampered somewhat in getting food by virtue of his deformity, he followed the trail, finally coming on the unwary hunter.

Smith recovered the handkerchief and the liver and that some night had the liver and onions.

"I didn't mind so much when he stole the liver" said Smith but he store the two buttons off my trousers and I had to attach the braces again with nails."

Smith is bringing the wolf into Peterborough to claim the Provincial bounty of $15, and he intends to sell the pelt for another three dollars.

Reeve Norman Lean of Apsley said he has hunted the north country since he was a boy, and it is the first time he has ever known a wolf to come that close to a human being.

The party had good luck and every member bringing in a deer.

OBITUARIES

MRS. EDWIN JOHN F. HEAP

One of Peterborough's most loved citizens passed away Saturday in the person of Mrs. Edwin John Fallows Heap, after a short illness, in the Toronto General Hospital. Her late husband predeceased her by only two days.

She was the former Eva Jane Sedgwick, and was born in Otonabee, but had lived in Peterborough all of her life.

A member of St. Luke's Anglican church, she was an ardent worker for the church, and for the various Ladies' societies in it.

Her cheerfulness in the face of difficulties were factors of her nature that were widely known, and her passing has occasioned a great deal of sorrow amongst her many friends in Ashburnham, and throughout the city. Friends who have said that Peterborough has never known another whose qualities were more sterling.

Surviving is one son, John Ormie; one daughter, Charlotte Andrey; three brothers, Thomas, of Vancouver, and Joseph and Albert Sedgwick of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. Agnes Esson.

The funeral will be on Tuesday, at 3.00 p.m. from the family residence, and St. Luke's church, Rev. G. J. Bousfield will officiate, and interment will be in Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. HARGRAVES HALSTEAD

ROSENEATH, Nov. 11—(ENS).—The death occurred on October 29, at 1623, 14th Avenue West, Calgary, of Mrs. Hargraves Halstead in her 95th year.

Mrs. Halstead, born Mary Kennedy, came to this country at nine years of age with her parents from Aberdeen, Scotland. The crossing was made in the sailing ship "Transatlantic" and took four weeks. The new home was near Harwood, Rice Lake. On April 25, 1865, she was married to Mr. Halstead; the marriage was the first performed at the new manse at Harwood. Until 1912 Mr. and Mrs. Halstead farmed in Haldimand township near Fenella, and in Alnwick township near the village of Roseneath; retiring, they moved to Calgary.

Up to the time of her death, Mrs. Halstead did her own housework and gardening, and was in full possession of her faculties. She was of staunch stock and in her own corner of the world did her full share of the tasks, helping Canada to emerge from the pioneer stage to its present state of development.

Of her ten children, seven are living: Miss Clara Ann Halstead of Calgary; Mrs. B. Simmons of Chicago; Mrs. Thomas Davey of Craigmyle, Alberta; George of Calgary, Harry and David of Alberta, and Albert of Roseneath. Surviving also are nineteen grandchildren and twenty-three great grandchildren.

Committee Probes "Smear" Material

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(AP).—Politicians and public-spirited citizens were requested today to send all examples of "scurrilous and vicious campaign literature" used in this year's United States election to the special Senate committee appointed to police the national contests.

Chairman Guy Gillett (Dem.-Iowa), issuing the request, said the material would be used to give the "American people a complete picture of this type of campaign methods."

"Every campaign has developed some of this undercover material but this one apparently produced more than ever," the Senator told reporters. "The committee will ask both National political headquarters to furnish copies of this scurrilous campaign literature."

The Senator said much of this "smear" material had been distributed by "undercover methods and late in the campaign so there was no chance for a fair answer to it."

Empire Merges Its Sorrow To Honor Dead

By D. E. BURRITT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(CP Cable)—On broad Whitehall, once the scene of pomp and pageantry, the Empire merged its sorrows today and paid tribute to the dead of the first and second Great Wars.

At the base of the cenotaph and on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey, representatives of the United Kingdom and the Dominions placed wreaths alongside those laid there on behalf on Queen Mary, the King and Queen. The Duke of Connaught and numerous others, including a group of Maple Leaves and Poppies dedicated to the men of Princess Patricia's Light Infantry.

A giant wreath of poppies, fern and white chrysanthemums from the government and people of Canada was placed by Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, who went unaccompanied to the cenotaph, which usually is ringed by thousands of bare-headed persons.

Mr. Massey and representatives of the other Dominions walked bare-headed from their cars, placed the wreaths, and left.

Canada's Tribute

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—(CP)—Official Canada paid homage to the dead of the first Great War here today as young Canadians in uniform for the new and grimmer conflict of today stood by.

For the first time the ceremony of Remembrance Day was held at the National War Memorial in Confederation Square. In other years it took place at a temporary cenotaph on Parliament Hill.

Today, however, the giant stone arch with its bronez figures of fighting men which was dedicated by the King in May, 1939, was the scene. The ceremony of peace-time was somewhat shortened. It lasted just five minutes and that included the two minutes of silence.

Some 2,000 veterans of the last war paraded and the guard of honor for the Governor-General was a company of the Veterans Guard of Canada, men who again wear the uniform after 20 years of civilian life.

The Earl of Athlone, accompanied by Princes Alice and Prime Minister Mackenzie King took up a position in front of the monument just before the guns boombed out the signal for the start of the silence at 11 o'clock. When the second gun brought the silence to an end the "Last Post" was played by a young bugler of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The R.C.M.P. band then played a verse of "Abide With Me" and the bugler sounded "Reveille." The Governor-General, tall and erect in his khaki uniform advanced to the foot of the monument, saluted, laid a wreath, saluted again and withdrew.

Mrs. Catherine Lewis, a frail, tiny, aged woman who gave several sons to the cause of Empire in the last war laid a wreath as the representative of the Mothers of Canada and the Prime Minister laid a wreath on behalf of the government.

It's Up to You

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 11 (CP) —J. S. Duncan, deputy minister for air, told the personnel of the Trenton air base today that "it's up to you young men of today to finish the job we undertook in 1914."

In brief Remembrance Day services, held in the morning so as not to interfere with the training, the personnel of the base paraded before Mr. Duncan, who took their salute. He said:—

"The cause of fair play, of freedom of democracy and decent living, the rights of the weak and downtrodden, the preservation of our way of life, of our belief and of our religion is the task before you and I know you, the young men of 1940, will be equal to the task."

The veterans of Belleville and district and several societies placed wreaths at the Cenotaph here.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, November 12
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

UNDER THE urge of the predominant astral influences there may be an irresistible impulse to do strange, untried and extraordinary things. This may be in the direction of launching experimental projects of bold or unusual scope, or there may be an indomitable urge to do old things in original, novel or perhaps revolutionary ways. Such efforts may prove to be workable, practical and constructive, providing such impulse be not carried to extremes, or the attempts be not reckless, wayward or tempestuous.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of surprising progress and achievement through the application of fresh or novel projects or new, original or even radical ways of speeding up old or static situations. But use practical common sense for productive results and not fantastic, erratic or spectacular methods.

A child born on this day may be wilful, erratic, obstinate and impulsive, although having fine initiative and creative talent. Its desire for novelty and fresh adventure may carry it to extremes.

Woman's Shout Frightens Purse Snatcher

While on her way home from down town on Saturday night Mrs. L. Delaire, 492 Elm Street, was attacked by an unknown man who tried to steal her purse, but was frightened off when Mrs. Delaire called for help.

Passing the corner of Bethune and Hunter Street, Mrs. Delaire had noticed a man standing there, but had not paid a great deal of attention to him. However, as she reached Hall Street near St. Peter's Cathedral, the same man who had followed her, suddenly seized her from behind, grabbing her by the coat collar and shaking her several times. Then he tried to seize her purse, but ran off when she resisted.

Police were not notified for some time afterward, and no trace was found of the assailant, when a search of the neighborhood was made.

Rambling Reporters

HE JUST FORGOT.

The story is being told of an absent-minded bridegroom whose wedding is on the cards for to-day. On Saturday night the bride and he were discussing some of the things that had to be done to-day prior to the ceremony, and the groom remarked that he had several matters to look after. "The first and most important," he said, "is to go to the bank.' Then there was a rather sticky silence. He had just remembered that to-day would be a holiday and the banks would be closed. He is financing the honeymoon on borrowed capital as a result of his failure to remember Remembrance Day. — F.D.C.

WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN

With so many improbable deer stories appearing, The Examiner has maintained a standard of truth, and all stories about the deer have been vouched for. This one, and the blame for its appearance rests at the feet of Fred Marshall, former game overseer in Peterborough.

Last week, while hunting with some friends, Elmer Metcalfe bagged a deer. He was proud of the animal, which, from what has been said, would appear to have been built along beautiful lines, but size was against it right from the start.

According to Fred, Elmer brought the deer in to his home, and hung it up in his garage; he had cleaned it, and had taken every precaution against its not keeping, but he had neglected its protection. When Fred told the story last night, he said, "Poor Elmer, when he went out into the garage, perhaps to show his trophy to someone, he found that some inconsiderate neighbor had let his cat run at large, and the deer was gone, further investigation revealed that the cat had eaten it.—J.W.H.

Star Athlete Dies In Accident

Numerous friends in Peterborough were shocked Saturday to learn of the tragic death in Belleville where he had lived for the past year of Francis Collins, former Peterborough hockey and baseball star. He had long been a prominent figure in sport circles here before he left to take up residence in Toronto in the employ of the Imperial Oil Company.

He played junior, intermediate and senior hockey in Peterborough and was a member of the great Peterborough team which won the senior O.H.A. championship in 1926. Afterward he played with the National Sea Fleas in Toronto who were also champions and toured Europe as a member of that team. In baseball the deceased played for the Peterborough Central Ontario League club for a number of seasons.

Born in Hastings, he came to Peterborough when only a small boy and received his education here. He was a son of Timothy A. Collins, 524 Lock street and of the late Margaret Dillon. Surviving relatives are four sisters, Frances and Marguerite, Peterborough, Mrs. F. J. Donoghue, Bay City, Mich., and Josephine of Brooklyn, N.Y., two brothers, James and Neil of Peterborough, a niece, Rosamund Collins and a nephew, Mulhern Collins of Peterborough.

Frank Collins enjoyed the esteem and affection of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances in Peterborough and elsewhere.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning from the home of his father Timothy A. Collins, 524 Lock street at 8.45 o'clock to the Church of the Sacred Heart for a funeral mass at 9 o'clock and thence to St. Peter's Cathedral for interment.

Canon Paterson Resigns Parish

Canon Major J. Douglas Paterson of All Saints' Church for the past 17 years has resigned. A much-needed rest was the reason given for his resignation, which has been accepted by Archbishop Owen.

Major Paterson, when asked by the Examiner what his plans for the future were, and what his future capacity would be, answered, "Nothing officially at present." According to information received, he will take up residence in Toronto at an early date.

Women Rap Beverage Rooms

OSHAWA, Nov. 11.—Support of four resolutions dealing with the sale of liquor and beer was registered by the Oshawa branch of the Women's Christian Temperance union at its meeting here.

The resolution, to be forwarded to Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of national war services, urged "that the sale of alcoholic beverages in taverns, beer rooms, wine shops, etc., be discontinued and that sale of such beverages be confined entirely to government-owned liquor stores.

"That the sale from government liquor stores be permitted only between the hours of 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 8 o'clock in the evening and on week days only.

"That all advertising of liquor in Canada be forbidden except in the place of sale.

"That when the request in item one is implemented, an order be issued from the department of national defence closing all wet canteens in military establishments."

"We appeal to all who are interested in the welfare of our people, especially during war-time, that they write individual letters to the government as a measure of support to the requests made."

Police Probing Hi-jacking Deer

Hi-jacking deer is a new form of law-breaking in this district. Provincial Constable John A. Rogers of Havelock has received a complaint from members of the McArthur party hunting in Methuen township that a year-old buck shot by one of the members of the party last Wednesday was stolen that night. The deer was hung up in a tree until it could be moved into camp, and when members of the party returned next day the carcass was gone.

This is not the only instance of deer theft. A similar case has been reported from Burleigh township, where someone carried off a deer shot by another party.

British Deny Italian Victory

LONDON, Nov. 11—(CP)—A Cairo communique issued in London today said that Gallabat, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, remains in British hands.

(The Italian high command claimed yesterday they had recaptured it.)

The communique said:

"Egypt, Kenya and Palestine: Situation unchanged.

Sudan: Yesterday our fighting patrols were active in the area east of Gallabat, which remains in our hands. In the Cassala sector operations continue."

Consider Memorial To Pilot-Officer

In his sermon on Sunday morning, Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, minister of Knox United Church, assured his congregation that at a later date when all the documents and information are at hand there will be a fitting memorial service in honor of Pilot-Officer D. Ross Allen, who lost his life last week in a flying accident while serving with the Royal Air Force. The family have given their consent to this arrangement.

In his sermon on the subject "We Do Remember NOW" the minister was pointing out that a number of recent events have contrived to make this Remembrance Day more significant than many others in past year. We realize now as never before that those who fell a quarter century ago were fighting but another phase of this same war to defeat aggression. Young men and women who know of the last Great War only through their history books, now feel a kinship with those who fought and died from '14 and '18. This taking of their friend, companion, and fellow member of the church gives Knox young people at least a new link with heroes of the Great War. Older people too who have nursed old wounds through all these years have felt those wounds torn open, so that they not only remember the old events afresh but also out of the depths of remembrance they are able to extend to the Allen family a deeper nobler and more heartfelt sympathy than comes from the unbruised soul.

IN MEMORIAM

BRACKENRIDGE.—In memory of a loving husband and father, Thomas S. Brackenridge, who passed away three years ago November 11, 1937.

Three years have gone, how swift time flies;
But love's sweet memory never dies.
We miss his help and cheery ways,
With him we spent our happiest days;
We miss him when we need a friend,
On him we always could depend.
He cheered our life, he soothed our pain,
God grant some day we shall meet again.

WAGSTAFF.—In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Emma Wagstaff, who passed away November 11, 1939.

For grief often dwells where it seldom is seen.
—Ever remembered by Daughter, Son-in-law, and Grandsons.

FOUNTAIN.—In loving memory of Oscar Fountain, who was killed nine years ago to-day.

Love's remembrance outlasts all.

women, although they have the intelligence of college graduates and are noble characters, can keep house together in peace and harmony. Each feels that she has the exclusive right to run the establishment and have things done her way, and she brooks no rival in her kitchen. One of the bitterest family feuds I ever knew started over the way to wash a pitcher. The Chinese merely recognize a law of Nature when they make the ideograph for a fight represent two women living in the same house.

Base of In-Law Trouble

It is women's possessiveness that is solely responsible for the in-law squabbles that break so many hearts and keep the tear jugs in so many households filled and overflowing. Mother can't bear to give up any part of her precious darling boy. She wants to still be the woman he loves best. She wants him to be dependenet on her and to come to her for comfort and counsel.

It simply burns the young wife up to know that her husband loved his mother before he did her; that his mother had his first slobbery kisses, and that he and his mother have memories in which she has no part.

She feels she has an exclusive right to every particle of affection in his nature, every minute of his time, every cent he earns, and she considers herself done out of her rights if he shows his mother the slightest attention or sends her a card on Mother's Day. Hence the two women who love him most tear so many a man to pieces in their struggle over him.

First Aid to Divorce

It is women's possessiveness that is first aid to divorce. The reason millions of men take to drink and philandering is to try to escape from their wives' dominance. They are simply coming up for air and to get a breath of freedom. They have stood all the bossing they can endure and they are willing to risk anything to get away from their jailers for even a few hours.

The greatest surprise that many a man ever gets is when he discovers that the little pink-and-white thing he married considers that there was something in the marriage ceremony that made him her exclusive property, and took away from him every vestige of liberty.

She wants to be all in all to him, to separate him from his family and old friends and doom him to her unrelieved society. She insists on going with him wherever he goes, even on business trips. She bewails herself as a neglected wife if he stays down town to have dinner with the boys or goes off for a day's fishing.

She makes marriage a servitude that he loathes and his wife becomes in her husband's eyes nothing but an oppressor. One of the most pitiful sights the eye ever beholds is the rejuvenated widowers who have lost possessive wives.

The Greatest Sinner

But the greatest sinner of them all is the possessive mother, and she is the one we meet most frequently. She is the woman who, to gratify her own selfish desire to monopolize her children, shuts the door of opportunity in their faces, denies them the gratification of natural human emotions and dooms them to barren and frustrated lives.

John is offered a fine job in some distant city. Mother weeps and begs him not to leave her, and tells him that it will kill her if he does. So John stays and spends his life grubbing at a job with no future to it.

Mary has a chance to marry a fine young man, who will give her love, a home and security, but Mother can't give up her darling daughter, and she preaches to Mary about her duty and sheds more tears, and Mary lets her sweetheart go and lives out a dreary life as an old maid.

Women's possessiveness! What crimes it causes them to commit! And they call it love!

all about Melvin Hardy and her morning's experience. She hadn't meant—to tell him. She hadn't meant to tell anyone, ever. But somehow, with the good meal she had just eaten warming her, and the prospects of a job tomorrow easing her troubled mind, her world seemed to have changed. And there was something about this Jim that invited confidences. The sympathy in his eyes seemed to draw the words from her, just as it had been when she told him last night about her father.

"He said there was a blacklist and that a—a convict's daughter would stand at the head of the list," finished her tale, stumbling a little over the epithet, but repeated it bravely. "Do you think he can do anything like that?" she asked anxiously.

Impressive Service Held At Marmora

MARMORA, Nov. 11 (ENS)—Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion and members of Marmora section of 'B' Company of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Non-Permanent Active Militia, assembled at the Agricultural Grounds on Sunday morning for a special church parade, with the St. Andrew's United and the Sacred Heart churches being visited. The parade was in charge of Vice-president T. E. Pritchard of the local Legion and was headed by the Boys' Bugle Band, with past president Wilbert Bedore carrying the Union Jack.

The number on parade was approximately one hundred and the march was impressive from the spectators point of view. At the Sacred Heart church Rev. Father H. J. Farrell addressed the full congregation—the soldiers occupying front seats—on Remembrance. Prayers were offered for those soldiers who had given their lives and a tribute was paid to those who would yet sacrifice their lives in this conflict. At St. Andrew's, Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher was in charge of the service and preached to a large congregation. Two anthems were sung by the choir. A parade through the main streets after these services ended with dismissal at the Memorial Hall.

Glass Pictures Easy—Make Stunning Gifts

A charming, appealing picture—as a gift or for yourself—is "Doe and Fawn." You can paint it easily in lovely colors on glass — in its full size, 9 by 12 inches.

You lay your glass over a paper pattern, following its lines with your brush — and by the same simple method you can paint other delightful subjects.

A thrill to see rich color effects emerge as you work. The doe and fawn pictured here are in soft browns dappled with white. The mountain is a rich purple with deeper purple shadows.

All these colors — indeed any color — you can get by mixing three inexpensive tubes of oil paints — red, yellow and blue. To darken a color, use black household enamel; to lighten one, white household enamel.

Our new set, "Four Designs to Paint on Glass — Second Series," includes "Cabin in the Pines," "Swans on a Lake," "Rose Bouquet," "Doe and Fawn" — each 9 by 12 inches. Has directions for mixing colors, tells colors for each picture.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for our set of FOUR DESIGNS TO PAINT ON GLASS—Second Series to Examiner, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, ADDRESS, and the NAME of picture set.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE FOE HAS AN ENTRY

HOW OFTEN we have all established some winners in dummy which are useless to us because no entry is left to get at them! On rare occasions, when no other play for the contract is in sight, we can make the opponents help us out. Careful counting of the cards as they fall may show that one of the defenders will have to lead right into the winning card or cards in the dummy if we throw the lead into his hand.

As it developed, 4-Spades would have been easy to make on this deal, if North had tried that bid over the 3-No Trumps. At the latter contract South has work to do. West led the heart Q to the K, and South's case is pretty hopeless unless he can score a couple of spade tricks. So he won the opener with the heart K and led the spade 5 to the K. East let that Win, but had to take the J, on which South threw a club. West won the heart return with the J, cashed his A, then put South in with the 6 to the 8.

Seeking some kind of a break, South played his two top diamonds, then the club A. When the J fell on this, he saw a ray of hope. It grew brighter when the K dropped the Q. To confirm his idea, he played the diamond Q. With nothing left but the diamond 7 and club 6, he led the diamond, hoping the winner of that trick would also have a spade left for his last card. That is exactly what happened.

West won that twelfth trick with the diamond J, but had nothing left except the spade 10, which he had to lead to dummy's Q, giving declarer the game trick. The elements of this play are just two—the defender who wins a particular late trick must have nothing left in his hand except one or more cards of a suit in which the dummy or declarer has one or more winners which he could not reach otherwise.

Four Hundred Attend Cavan Fowl Supper

CAVAN, Nov. 11 — (ENS).—On Wednesday evening a fowl dinner was given in Cavan community hall by the ladies of Cavan United church.

Approximately four hundred tickets were sold.

There was a sumptuous supper served with a menu of potatoes, gravy, pickles, jelly, salads, bread and butter, creamed carrots, biscuits, with plenty of fowl and an abundance of pies.

Mrs. D. J. Hunter, president of the W.A., was general supervisor, and with capable table managers and attentive waiters, the supper was served with dispatch, everything going smoothly. After supper there was a good play given in the auditorium of the hall. The Rev. W. E. Honey read the following cast of characters for the play, "Aunt Minnie From Minnesota."

Aunt Minnie Miller, Mrs. K. Braithwaite; Mrs. Emily Evans (her sister), Mrs. Donald Tinney; Elvira Evans, her younger daughter, Jean Gillis; Emery Eaton, Eva's fiance, Harry Freemantle; Guy Graham, who would like to be Elvira's fiance, Rex Carr; Silas Spencer, mayor of the town, Murray McCullough; Patience Perkins, who heads every committee, Mrs. M. Kinsman; Andy Andrews, former suitor of Aunt Minnie, Will Swain; Cornelia Curtiss, just back from the city, Mrs. Norma Braithwaite; Nella Nelson, a milliner, Mary Tinney; Worthington Winters, a promoter, Harry Kenedy.

The play was full of fun throughout and as the plot developed, the difficulties in the way of the younger people's love affairs, with the modernized Aunt Minnies and her old school fellow, Patience Perkins' romances kept the audiences in bursts of merriment. Aunt Minnie, with the co-operation of the young people, started out to boost Brandon and provide jobs for them with her money. The climax came when Patience Perkins eloped with Aunt Minnie's business manager and lover, taking with them Aunt Minnie's money. Finally it ended with everybody happy and Aunt Minnie's admirer of youthful days, Andy Andrews, coming to the rescue with his money and his romance, with Aunt Minnie being revived.

A number of geese and chickens and cut fowl were sold after the program.

Arab States Form Bloc Against Axis

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 11—(AP). — Formation of an Arab bloc to resist any Axis aggression in the Near East was being discussed in Arab circles here last night coincident with a state visit to King Farouk's court by the Emir Abdullah of Transjordan.

Well-informed sources said Transjordan, Iraq and Saudi Arabia, would be parties to such a pact with the support of Arabs in Palestine and Syria. Egypt would not be asked to join until details have been worked out, these sources said. The pact also would be aimed for the eventual inclusion of Iran and Afghanistan.

Iran, Afghanistan and Iraq have a pact with Turkey, providing their assistance to Turkey in the event Turkey is attacked.

The Emir Abdullah is believed to be strongly in favor of Arab support for Turkey. He has close relations with present Turkish leaders and was educated in Turkey.

Among the Emir's visitors since his arrival here were Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador to Egypt; Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Commander-in-Chief of Britain's Middle East forces, and Arab diplomats accredited to Egypt. King Farouk and Emir Abdullah conferred Thursday.

Britain has seen the vital Near Eastern oil fields as the ultimate goal of Germany and Italy in their Mediterranean operations, and observers believe she would give unstinted support to such an Arab bloc.

French Courts Given Japs

SHANGHAI, Nov. 11 — (AP). — A Japanese spokesman announced to-day that authorities of Shanghai's French concession had handed over to the Japanese-sponsored government at Nanking control of two Chinese courts in the concession, bring Japan's long-standing ambition to dominate foreign areas of the city much nearer fruition.

He said the action was taken in accordance with a "French-Nanking agreement negotiated at the instigation of the Japanese," and expressed the hope that similar agreements could be reached on other Chinese courts in the International Settlement, although no negotiations are under way.

Yielding to pressure which has become increasingly severe since the Japanese entered French Indo-China, the French concession authorities were said to have ousted judges appointed by the Chinese Government at Chungking and turned over the two courts to the Nanking-appointed judges.

The courts were established in 1931 under a treaty between the French Government and the government of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

A Japanese navy spokesman announced that the Japanese had erected barricades on Kiangshe road north of Soochow Creek along what formerly was the boundary between the British-Japanese defence sectors. The barriers were removed on July 2, but were restored, he said, because of recent "repeated recurrence of acts of terrorism."

Last Destroyers Sail

Newport, R.I., Nov. 11 (AP). — FIVE destroyers, believed among the last of the 50 traded by the United States to Great Britain in exchange for naval and air bases, took on supplies here today.

The vessels, which arrived yesterday, presumably were en route to Canada. They were the Nicholson, Meade, Shubrick, Swasey and Bailey.

Eggs Hold Firm On City Market, Range From 38 to 50 Cents

The price of eggs was firm on Saturday within the ten-cent range of from 38 to 48 cents with some of the producers here and there asking 50 cents.

One woman who apparently sells quite a lot of produce every Saturday said she got 33 cents for pullets, 40 cents for mediums and 48 cents for large. However, the ampler sounding half dollars quotation was heard a few times from across the counters, and there was some comment from the same direction that the price should be above 50 cents.

A few turkeys were noticed Saturday, most of them at 25 cents, although 28 cents a pound was mentioned earlier in the morning.

The offering of fowl was so generous that it looked like somebody was going to celebrate something, of that it was the day before a holiday. Probably a lot of folks celebrate every Sunday, although it is nothing unusual or out of the ordinary for them. Anyway somebody bought a heap of poultry Saturday morning. Geese are filling out and are just about fit to kill at 23 to 25 cents; hens 20 cents; chickens were 20 to 23 cents, but one woman said to the guileless reporter: "You could get all the chickens you wanted for 18 cents at noon and even before that."

Ducks were fairly plentiful at 23 to 25 cents at eleven o'clock. The market hall section looked busier Saturday than it has been for months, even the Thanksgiving Day market, but it may be that they were not all cash customers.

On the outside market, R. Bradfield of Douro, quoted fresh pork at 13 and 15 cents, and told the reporter that the price was down a cent from last week.

Potatoes sold from 90 cents a bag for a few bags of under-size ones to $1.20 for White Stars. Healy Bros. of Asphodel asked $1.20 for Stars, Herb Doig $1 for Katahdins, E. M. Beer of Campbellcroft $1 for Katahdins and Rural New Yorkers, and $1.15 for White Stars.

Norman Moncrief's prices for apples were: McIntosh Reds 40 and 50c a peck; Spies 45c; Snows 40c; Talman Sweets 40c; Milwaukees, Baxters, Greenings and Wolf Rivers 35 cents a peck.

Vegetable men said their prices were unchanged. Herb Doig's list included; cabbage six for 25 cents, carrots and parsnips 25 cents a bushel, turnips 50 cents the bushel, and Alexander apples 85c a bushel.

Harold Doig tagged his Northern Spies at $1.50 a hamper.

An Apsley wood trucker quoted a load of soft wood at $6 a cord. It included some birch and oak.

Young Greek Rams Italian Bomber Lands Safely, Captures 4 Fliers

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 11, — (AP). — A 22-year-old Greek aviator credited with shooting down two Italian planes before jumping from his flaming ship minimized his own exploits to-day to praise a companion who, he said, deliberately crashed into an Italian bomber when his ammunition ran out.

Tossing in a hospital cot and speaking slowly because of a bullet in his lung, Constantine Lalpropoulof said he learned later that his compatriot, Lieut. Marinos Mitralexis, not only wrecked the Italian plane, but landed his own damaged craft and captured the Fascist fliers.

Three Greek pursuit ships engaged ten Italian bombers, escorted by twelve fighters, and finally drove them off after a desperate 25-minute fight at 15,000 feet above Salonika four days ago, the young flier said.

"Before I was forced to jump," said Lalpropoulof, a dark, handsome chap, "I saw Mitralexis, who had run out of ammunition, fly his plane into the wing of an Italian bomber, partly wrecking his ship.

"The Italians — four of them — jumped with their parachutes and I later learned that all of them landed in the hills near the city, where Mitralexis landed his ship, and captured them."

Lalpropoulof said he and his two fellow-fighters met the wave of Italian attackers near the city. His companions engaged five fighters immediately, he said, "while I dived from a great height and scattered the bombers, shooting down one almost immediately."

All the planes manoeuvred wildly, he said, while the civilians in Salonika ran for shelter below.

"I fired a burst into another Italian plane," he continued, "and it started to fall. Then I felt a searing pain in my side. An Italian fighter had riddled my ship, which burst into flames. I bailed out and landed near the city, where civilians cared for me until I could be taken to a hospital."

Hospital officials said his claim to bagging two planes had been confirmed officially.

Price Of Pork In Poland Is Five Dollars Pound

CHICAGO, Nov. 11 — (Special).—Five American dollars will buy only one pound of salt pork in Russian Poland to-day, letters smuggled out of that Soviet-dominated region and sent to Chicago revealed. They have been received by the Russian Gospel Association, of which Rev. Peter Dyneka as superintendent. The association maintains 100 missionaries in several foreign lands.

"We are barely existing," one missionary in Poland wrote, quoting the exorbitant cost of even the commonest cuts of meat. "And much food that we need is unobtainable. We have been persecuted. Two of our members are now in a German prison, but we manage to hold meetings and rejoice that we are still alive."

Another missionary in German-held Poland wrote that one of his band continues preaching, although he is in rags and his family has been sent away to Russia. His three children are in great want, suffering from lack of food and clothes.

Persecuted Poles are seeking solace in religion to a greater degree than ever, the missionaries stated in their letters.

By the recent partition of Poland 90 per cent. of the Eastern, or Orthodox Church in Poland, which has about 4,500,000 memebrs, came under Soviet rule. Some 100,000 Polish Protestants have also become dominated by Russia, as well as 300,000 or 400,000 Roman Catholics and 5,000 Armenians.

In spite of the difficulties of its workers abroad, the Russian Gospel Association is expanding its service in other fields, according to the Rev. Mr. Dyneka. He is a Russian, naturalized as a citizen of the United States and for twenty years has been in missionary work. He has visited the Russian field four times, the last trip being three years ago, when he visited Russia, Siberia and the Far East.

Mr. Dyneka will leave on November 15 to spend six months in South America and open up a new field there.

MOLOTOFF, HITLER PLOT A NEW WORLD ORDER?

Greeks Pursue Italians Along Whole Front

RAF Cripples Warship At Taranto

Six Planes Shot Down Says Rome Raiding Naval Base

ROME, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Severe damage to an Italian warship by bombs dropped in an early morning air raid on Italy's main naval base at Taranto was aknowledged by the Italian high command today.

The raid presumably was made by British fliers.

In the war with Greece, which was ignored in yesterday's communique, the Italians reported they had smashed Greek attacks on Kalibaki, in Epirus.

(This was tantamount to an admission that the Italians have been at a standstill for 11 days on the Epirus front. Facist reports Nov. 1 announced that an armored spearhead of Italian forces had broken through to the highway junction at Kalibaki.)

The high command claimed six planes which took part in the early morning raid were shot down, and some of their crews captured. In addition, it asserted, three other planes were believed to have been downed.

The big Taranto base is in the large Gulf of Taranto, between the "heel" and the "toe" of the Italian "boot."

(There was no immediate report of such a raid in British circles, but it appeared likely that aircraft participating in such an action would be British or Greek planes based, perhaps, on Corfu or launched from the deck of the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which has been operating recently in the Mediterranean).

Chamberlain Passes Sure Corner Turned

Only Grief He Would Not See Ultimate Victory Churchill Tells House

LONDON, Nov. 12—(CP).—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that Neville Chamberlain died "with confidence that we had turned the corner, his only grief that he would not be a spectator at our final victory," although "long, hard and hazardous years are ahead."

In tribute to his predecessor as Prime Minister, who died Saturday, Mr. Churchill said his strenuous efforts for peace had established that Britain was "guiltless of the blood and terror and misery which have engulfed so many lands and peoples and yet seek new victims still."

"Herr Hitler protests with frantic words and gestures that he only desired peace," the Prime Minister declared.

"What do these ravings and outpourings count before the silence of Neville Chamberlain's tomb?"

The House responded with subdued approval when Mr. Churchill declared that "though long and hazardous years lie before us, at least we enter upon them united and with clean hearts."

"The only guide to a man is his conscience," Mr. Churchill said, "the only shield to his memory is the rectitude and sincerity of his actions. With his shield, however, the fates may play, we march always in the ranks of honor.

"It fell to Neville Chamberlain, in one of the supreme crises of the world, to be contradicted by events, to be disappointed in his hopes and to be deceived and cheated by a wicked man. . . We can be sure that Neville Chamberlain acted with perfect sincerity, according to his lights, and strove to the utmost of his capacity and authority, which were powerful, to save the world from the awful devastating struggle in which we are now engaged."

British Aces Blast Duce's Bases

Great Albanian Dumps Blasted Aflame, In Blows At Italy

ATHENS, Nov. 12—(AP).—British bombers blasted Albanian bases behin dthe tIalian invaders, the high command announced today, while Greek troops pursued shattered Fascist forces reported retreating in disorder along the whole fighting front.

A communique said British bombs destroyed a depot of combustible stores and started a fire visible for 100 miles last night at Durazzo, chief port of Albania.

At Valona, to the south, it said the British raiders blew up a munitions dump. The high command earlier had reported renewed raids on Valona by Greece's own planes. Ships at anchor in the bay and landing facilities in the port used for reinforcement of the invasion army were bombed, it said.

The Home Security Ministry accused the Italian of widespread terror raids yesterday. It reported aerial bombardment, machine-gunning and a hail of hand grenades on civilians in towns throughout the Greek mainland and on the island of Corfu. Pursuit of Italy's reversed invasion, however, admittedly was under the pounding of heavy bombing.

Red Chief's Berlin Pow-wow May Affect Course Of Nazi's Balkan Policy

Crowds Strangely Silent As Visitor Passes; Session With Dictator Hitler Expected To Bring Bid Into Axis Program

BERLIN, Nov. 12—(AP).—Hitler received Soviet Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff today at the Chancellery in Berlin not long after the Russian arrived for conferences which may affect the immediate course of Axis policy in the Balkans.

Molotoff called on the chief of the Nazi state after he had talked with Foreign Minister Ribbentrop.

The drums of the S.S. (Black Shirt Elite Guard) were rolling when the car containing Molotoff and Baron von Doerenberg, protocol chief of the Foreign Office, drew up in front of the Chancellery.

Otto Meissner, Hitler's executive secretary, led the Russian statesman into the massive building and to the grand gallery where Hitler stood amidst the splendor he had created for himself.

Molotoff, making his first visit to Germany, arrived at 11.05 a.m. (5.05 a.m. EDT), accompanied by a staff of 33.

Fanfare was absent from the greeting which the Russian received as he left his special train at Anhalter station, but Germans regarded Molotoff's visit as of great consequence.

Some informed Nazis indicated an invitation might be extended to Russia to become the partner of Germany, Italy and Japan in planning their "new world order."

Molotoff was welcomed by Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and a number of Nazi government and military officials as he stepped from his train.

After a formal greeting, Ribbentrop conducted Molotoff downstairs to review an honor guard in a downpour and then the party left by automobile for Bellevue Castle, where the Russian will stay while he is in Berlin. Less than an hour after his arrival he went into conference with Ribbentrop.

Meeting Hitler Later

It is announced that Hitler would receive Molotoff this afternoon in the chancellery.

Except for two big Russian and Nazi flags and a screen of green laurel trees, adorned with strips of gold, which partly waied off the platform, the station was almost bare of decoration.

Simplicity appeared to be the keynote, in contrast to the welcomes accorded Italian, Hungarian and Yugoslav statesmen on the occasion of their recent visits here.

Molotoff's special train halted several hundred feet from the spot on the platform where it had been expected to stop, and a large assembly of German dignitaries, augmented by the Japanese, Turkish and Chinese ambassadors, and the Italian charge d'affaires (Ambassador Dino Alifieri has been ill for some time), had to move hurriedly forward to greet the visitor.

Molotoff, smiling and talking animatedly in Russian, gesticulated approvingly toward the flags hanging side by side in the room. He was dressed somberly in a black suit, a white shirt and black tie, a pepper and salt overcoat, and a light grey slouch hat.

As Molotoff emerged into the square outside the station, where the honor guard flanked by S.S. men in field gray had taken up

Sub-Zero Wave Follows Mid-West Gales

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP) — Freezing weather overspread the middle-west today in the wake of furious gales that battered the mid-continent, causing death or injury to scores of persons and extensive property damage.

The mercury sank below zero in the Dakotas, Montana, and Wyoming while sub-freezing temperatures were general from the Rockies to beyond the Mississippi.

The violent winds uprooted trees, smashed windows, tore cornices from buildings, levelled frame buildings, broke radio towers, crumbled huge steel electric signs, and ripped away power and communication lines.

Tornadic winds struck Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee. Twenty families were left homeless when the storm struck Crocker Mills, Tenn., causing damage expected to exceed $150,000.

Snow blanketed much of the western half of the continent, piling into drifts that crippled transportation in Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, and Utah.

Three persons were killed in Wisconsin and fears were expressed for the safety of eight hunters on a barren, treeless island in the Wisconsin River near Portage.

The Nebraska state agricultural officials reported that one-fourth of the Turkey crop was believed lost. Thousands of the birds froze to death while huddled together for protection against the biting winds.

Weygand's Stay Annoys Nazis

BERNE, Nov. 12—(CP).—A speech and his failure to return to France have led foreign observers here to speculate on the activities in North Africa of Gen. Maxime Weygand, former commander-in-chief of the Allied forces in France.

Weygand, it was hinted, declined to return when Rear Admiral Rene Platon, colonial minister to the Vichy regime, flew to Africa to get him. Platon returned alone.

That action and a speech in which he declared France would not yield an inch of her African colonies was reported to have annoyed the Germans and embarrassed the Vichy administration which is trying to lay the basis of co-operation with the Germans in establishment of a "new European order."

It was even suggested Weygand's attitude might indicate a show-

Food Pinch Grips France Tighter

LONDON, Nov. 12 (CP) — The food situation in France is becoming "increasingly serious," according to information reaching the British ministry of economic warfare.

A ministry official said the German-occupied territory in France represents about two-thirds of the country's total agricultural production. This is reported to have placed the unoccupied portion also in a difficult situation, made more serious because of the breakdown of transportation.

Trucks and locomotives have been sent by the Nazis into Germany and lorry transport is at a standstill because of gasoline shortage, resulting in further dislocation in the distribution of available food supplies.

Bread is rationed in France at 87 ounces a week. The situation with regard to grain stocks is said to be unsatisfactory because the army of occupation as well as refugees have to be fed.

The ministry has received reports that before the harvest was gathered in France, a large number of actual fields of wheat were reserved for the Germans with swastika signs and at least 800,000 tons of wheat were removed to Germany from occupied France.

Foodstuffs are being taken up by the army of occupation and sent home.

Meat supplies also are low. The ration in France is 12½ ounces a week and in Germany 17½ ounces. In addition, a large amont of livestock as been transported into Germany. Pigs have been requisitioned

Vichy Dissolves French Trusts

VICHY, FRANCE, Nov. 12.—(AP).—The Vichy government dissolved to-day by special decree a group of industrial syndical organizations including the powerful Comite Des Forges Steel Trust and the General Confederation of Labor.

Also among the organizations dissolved was the great coal trust (Comite Des Houilleres de France), which almost completely controlled the French coal industry.

To replace private corporations in the steel and coal fields, the Government created a series of committees.

The organizations' possessions were ordered held at the Government's disposition for a future decree.

Other syndical organizations dissolved were the powerful Employers' Association, the "Confederation Generalle Du Patronat Francais," the Labor Syndicate, the "Confederation Francaise Des Travailleurs Chretiennes" and the "Confederation Des Syndicats Professioneles Francais."

Two committess were appointed to control the coal industy in France under Government supervision.

Majority Escaped

Raider Muffed Convoy Job Says London

LONDON, Nov. 12 — (CP). — The Admiralty said to-day a "substantial majority" of the ships in a British convoy attacked by a German surface raider last week had escaped.

A communique said:

"It can now be stated that substantial majority of the ships forming the convoy attacked by enemy raider last week eluded the raider. Further details are not yet available. It will be recollected that the German high command claimed that the whole of this convoy has been completely destroyed."

Britain lost 13 merchant ships totalling 65,609 tons in the week ending November 3-4, the Admiralty announced to-day. Other shipping loases that week were reported as four Allied ships totalling 5,403 tons, and one neutral ship of 1,583 tons.

The total of 62,595 tons included the Empress of Britain, the Admiralty said, adding that excluding that large liner British losses amounted to 23,261 tons—"whereas the enemy, with their usual exaggeration, claimed to have sunk in the week uhder review 134,900 tons of our merchant shipping."

(The average weekly loss of British, Allied and neutral shipping since the start of the war has been 56,932 tons.)

Troopers hurried to the scene to continue the investigation, and Major Sullivan said he had no further information and did not know the cause of the child's death.

Buried Amidst The Debris

Only 15 Escape Death As 3 Bombs Wreck Big London Factory

LONDON, Nov. 12—(AP).—Four storeys up, stirred occasionally by the rain-laden wind, two women's coats still hung on their pegs today on what was once the wall of a blueprint shop.

Below a squad of workers dug through a huge pile of bricks, charred wood and tangled steel trying to find their owners.

Early last night Axis bombing planes struck the building with three bombs, killing many of the shopgirls who huddled there.

Fifteen persons—seven of them girls—escaped from the wrecked building alive. But the workers who toiled through the long night hours had little hope of finding alive any of the undetermined number still buried.

"We haven't heard a sound for hours," said one workers.

At dawn today, a cluster of drenched onlookers still watched the men digging.

"Horrible, horrible," a charwoman kept mumbling.

Once the workers shouted for a stretcher, but it was half an hour before they were able to extricate the crushed body of a woman. A crane was needed to drag a metal cabinet from her body.

Acetylene torches lent the only touch of brightness to the drab scene as Londoners passed, this morning, on their way to work. A dishevelled shop maanger indicated the approximate location of the building's shelter so the diggers could concentrate there.

Many Injured As Explosions Rock Rail Signal, Powder Plants

WOODBRIDGE, N.J., Nov. 12. — (AP).— At least five persons were killed to-day in an explosion which razed the plant of the United Railway and Signal Corporation near here. More than a score were injured, some critically.

State police headquarters at Trenton received a report that there were 15 known dead, 10 missing and 35 injured.

Many of the injured were in a critical condition. The Perth Amboy General Hospital admitted seven and the Rahway Hospital, eight. Each treated a number of others.

Preliminary estimates of the death toll varied from six to 25, but police captain John Egan of Woodbridge township, in which the plant was situated, expressed belief that no more than 20 persons were employed there. It manufactured railway track torpedoes, flares and similar equipment.

(In Washington army and navy officials said a preliminary check of records of defence orders did not show that any contracts had been awarded to the company.)

Police said there were 15 building at the plant, but only half of one building remained standing after the blast.

Those destroyed varied from 100 to 200 feet in size, the buildings destroyed included the main plant and sheds.

Injured included persons in nearby homes and on the street.

The plant is situated in Middlesex county, about 15 miles south of Newark and a similar distance from Manhattan, N.Y.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 12—(AP).—Three men were killed today in an explosion at the Trojan Powder Company plant at Toxell's Crossing, six miles northwest of here.

A company spokesman said the victims were in a small building where percussion caps were manufactured. The company is an independent concern.

Lakefield Man Is Charged With Burglary

Stuart Graham of Lakefield faced a charge before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning of breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Cecelia Fleming, Lakefield, with intent to commit theft.

Graham who was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C. pleaded not guilty to the charge. Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., prosecuted.

Chief Constable Wallace Hendren told of going to the home of Mrs. Fleming on November 5 and finding the screen door and inside door forced open. Inside was a man's overcoat placed over the arm of a rocking chair and a partially full bottle of whisky. As a result of inquiries the witness said that he placed Graham under arrest.

The crown attempted to put in a statement allegedly made by the accused to Chief Hendren but Magistrate Langley ruled that the statement was inadmissible after the officer admitted that he might have said to Graham something about being better for him to tell what he knew about the case. Witness said that he had warned Graham that anything he might say might be used in evidence.

The overcoat and bottle of whisky found by witness in the Fleming house were put in as exhibits.

Theodore Crawford, Lakefield merchant, said that the coat produced was similar to two he had in stock in his store and one of which he had sold to Graham in October. "I could not swear this is the same coat", he said. "It is like it."

In cross-examination Crawford said that he had bought the coat from a Toronto firm and there might be many others of the same style.

"I suppose there are Lakefield people who forget the "Buy-at-home slogan and shop in Peterborough?" asked Mr. Carley.

"Lots of them," replied Crawford while the court crowd, some of them from Lakefield laughed.

"Can we put it that too many of them do so?" asked the defence counsel, and witness nodded his agreement.

Mrs. Fleming who said that Graham lived next door to her testified that she had been away from home from Saturday, November 2 to Tuesday, November 5. She had locked up her house securely and on her return found that a screen door and inside door had been forced. Inside was a man's overcoat with a bottle of whisky in the pocket. Nothing in the house had been touched, she said.

The case is proceeding.

Italian Lines Broken

ATHENS, Nov. 12 (AP)—Greek troops who advanced under heavy bombing attacks crowded today on the heels of shattered Fascist forces reported retreating in disorder along the whole fighting front of Italy's reversed invasion.

The Greek high command said its mountain troops and cavalry mopped up behind the routed Italians and speedily consolidated the positions regained at the start of the third week of fighting, despite "intense activity" of Italian aircraft along the front.

A government spokesman declared that Greek forces following up the remnant of the crack Centaur Alpine division in the Pindus mountains "continue to take prisoners."

Most of the division was reported killed or captured the rest in headlong flight.

The spokesman said this retreat and that of three battalions which "fled in disorder" along the coastal sector had "created panic behind the Italian lines."

At the opposite end of the battle-front, Greek highland troops were reported still in command of "strong and strategically important" positions won in a counter thrust into Albania to block the Italian drive into Macedonia.

MORE ABOUT—

In the House of Lords, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax said his former chief never relaxed his efforts to prepare Britain for war, even while doing his utmost to avoid war.

"One great fact he was able to accomplish," Lord Halifax said, "was that, when war came, it came to a country united."

Political leaders of other parties joined in paying tribute to Chamberlain.

Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, said that though Labor opposed, "often bitterly," Chamberlain's policies, "we never doubted his deep devotion to the cause of peace." He added that as a colleague of the late Prime Minister, "I recognized his abhorrence to the evil which is seeking to destroy civilization."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Air, on behalf of the Liberals, declared that "even in the heat of our most controversial debts we have been forced to pay tribute to his humanity as a social reformer, to his courage and his high sense of public duty, and to his unsparing devotion to the cause of peace."

George Lambert, National Liberal, one of the oldest members of the House, who served with three Chamberlains, said "Neville Chamberlain's name remains for ever as one who fought for peace."

Premier's Statement.

The text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement to the House of Commons today on the death of Neville Chamberlain follows:

Since we last met the House has suffered a very grievous loss in the death of one of its most distinguished members, and of a statesman and public servant who during the best part of three memorable years was the first Minister of the Crown.

Fierce and bitter controversies which hung around him in recent times were hushed by news of his illness and are silenced by his death.

In paying a tribute of respect and regard to so eminent a man who has been taken from us no one is obliged to alter the opinions which he has formed or expressed upon issues which have become a part of history but at the Lych Gate we may pass our own conduct and our own judgments under searching review.

It is not given to human beings—happily for them for otherwise life would be intolerable—to foresee or predict to any large extent the unfolding course of events.

In one phase men seem to have been right, in another they seem to have been wrong; then again a few years later when the perspective of time has lengthened all stands in a different setting.

There is a new proportion and another scale of values. History with its flickering lamp stumbles along the trail of the past, trying to reconstruct its scenes, to revive echoes and to kindle with the pale gleam of passion former days.

Conscience the Guide

But what is worth all this. The only guide to man is his conscience. The only shield the rectitude and sincerity of his own actions. It is very imprudent to walk through life without this shield because we are so often mocked by the failure of our hopes and deceived by our calculation.

With this shield, however, the fates may play, we march always in the ranks of honor.

It fell to Neville Chamberlain, in one of the supreme crises of the world, to be contradicted by events, to be disappointed in his hopes and to be deceived and cheated by a wicked man.

But what were these hopes in which he was disappointed. What were these wishes in which he was frustrated. They were surely among the noblest benevolent instincts of the human heart, love of peace, toil for peace, strife for peace, pursuit of peace even at great peril and certainly to the utter disdain of popularity or clamor.

Whatever else history may or may not say about these tremendous terrible years, we can be sure that Neville Chamberlain acted with perfect sincerity according to his lights. He strove to the utmost of his capacity and authority—which were powerful—to save the world from the awful devastating struggle in which we are now engaged.

He had precision of mind and aptitude for business which raised him far above the ordinary levels of our generation. He had firmness of spirit, which, though not often elated by success, was seldom downcast by failure and never swayed by panic. When, contrary to all his hopes and all his beliefs and exertions, war came upon him, and as he himself said, all he had worked for was shattered, there was no man more resolved to pursue the unsought quarrel to death.

The same qualities which made him one of the last to enter the war made him one of the last who would quit it until victory for our righteous cause was won. I have had the singular experience of passing in a day from being one of his most prominent opponents and critics to being one of his lieutenants and on another day of passing from serving under him to become head of a government of which, with perfect loyalty, he was content to be a member.

Such relationships are unusual in our public life.

I have before told the House how on the morrow of the debate which in the early days of May challenged his position he declared to me and a few other friends that only a national government could face the storm about to break upon us and that if he were an obstacle to the formation of such a government he would instantly retire.

Thereafter he acted with a singleness of purpose and simplicity of conduct which at all times, and especially in great times, ought to be a model for us all.

When he returned to duty a few weeks after a most severe operation the bombardment of London and the seat of government had begun. I was a witness of his fortitude under the most painful and grievous bodily affliction and I can testify that, although only a physical wreck of a man, his nerve was unshaken and his remarkable mental faculties unimpaired.

Fraser said the men had been replaced and the service was being maintained although there was "some difficulty" in pickup and delivery at Toronto.

Michael Nichols, union organizer, said at Hamilton that the walkout involved 600 men employed by Martin Transport and Direct Winters Transport.

there than he actually gets in Ottawa since there is "no rule against cabinet ministers working at night."

In London people turned in early. Despite nightly raids Mr. Gardiner didn't spend a single night in his hotel's air raid shelter, although people from the upper floors came down to lower levels to sleep on cots set up for them.

Mr. Gardiner said he slept soundly every night and the anti-aircraft fire from a nearby park was the "only annoyance."

Damage done to London by the German air force was much less important than he had imagined it would be. The most extensively damaged section was in the east end, and that area on a map of London "looks like a postage stamp on a table cloth."

When he visited the east end, Mr. Gardiner said, everything was done to facilitate his investigation and nothing was hidden. He visited police stations and asked as many questions as he liked. He learned that only 1,400 of the 2,000,000 residents of the area had been killed. While he was in London he did not meet anyone who had lost a relative or friend in bombing attacks.

From his stay in London, the Minister said, it was his firm belief no war would ever be won from the air, without the backing of a mechanized land army.

"Indiscriminate bombing can only bring misery to civilians and be a war of nerves," he said, "but they can take it in England."

opinion of most foreign observers—in Mikoyan's signing away a minimum of these products, badly needed by Russia herself. They include, according to unofficial estimates, 1,000,000 tons of oil, and are being paid for by 'ersatz' formulas, models of latest German bombers and other items of importance to the Russians.

The present status of Soviet-German economic collaboration is uncertain. Mikoyan and the chief of the economic division of the German Foreign Office, Dr. Karl Schnurre, recently took stock of the first six months of trade, after which Schnurre left for Berlin to report, as well as to work out proposals for the future.

German circles in Moscow say there is complete harmony between Moscow and Berlin, and that the next six months hold promise of expansion of Soviet-German trade. The Russians, however, adhere to their traditional silence, keeping the Germans and everyone else guessing.

Trade negotiations with Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Sweden, Denmark and other countries served to corroborate the impression among foreign observers in Moscow that Mikoyan, one of the youngest Soviet leaders, also is one of the ablest.

Capital Gets Night Of Sleep After 9, Snowy Gale Assists

LONDON, Nov. 12—(CP).—The German air force, turned back from London in a brief morning raid, smashed at northeast coast towns early this afternoon.

The daylight attacks which seemed widespread over England, followed a night of comparative calm in which the capital was undisturbed after 9 p.m.

Rescue squads, meanwhile, still were digging in ruins of buildings wrecked by bombs in yesterday's raids, notably in the debris of a blue print shop which housed a public shelter in which an undetermined number of persons had taken refuge.

A Channel gale kept Axis aircraft grounded most of last night and early today and Britons enjoyed a night of rest unbroken by air raid alarms.

Storm Assists

The last of a few lone raiders headed homeward at 9 p.m. last night, a joint communique issued by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security reported, and the storm-swept sky over England still was clear of invading planes when daylight came.

Such attacks as were made up to 9 p.m., the communique said, caused a "very small" number of casualties and "slight" damage.

Veteran Teacher Dies In Toronto

A member of one of Peterborough's fine old families Susan Lillian Grant Davidson, passed away on Monday at her home in Toronto. She had been ill only a short time and her death was most unexpected.

The late Miss Davidson will be well remembered by the older generation of Peterborough folk. She was one of the first kindergarten teachers at the old Union School, better known as the Murray street Public School, a half century ago. Later she taught school at Port Arthur, and at Windsor, retiring about four years ago because of failing eyesight.

She was a cheerful, kindly person and she leaves a host of close friends in Peterborough city and district.

She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John I. Davidson, and her father was for many years associated with the late James Kendry, at the Auburn Woollen Mills, in the capacity of secretary-treasurer of the company.

Surviving are two sisters, Catherine and Jean of Montreal and one brother, Robert, of Iroquois, Ontario. Another brother was killed on active service in World War 1.

The family lived on George street north in the house now occupied by Harry Foote. They attended St. Paul's Church. None of the Davidsons now living in Peterborough are relatives, the Examiner learned today.

The remains are resting at the Bert Humphrey Funeral Home, 2245 Yonge street at Eglinton, Toronto, until Wednesday morning, thence to Peterborough for interment in the family plot at Little Lake Cemetery, following arrival of the C.P.R. train at 9:30 a.m.

The building was destroyed by a blast heard for miles around.

The company held at least one national defence contract. It was awarded an army order for $81,400 worth of explosives November 5.

The dead were identified as: Fred Weller, of Scheresville, Pa.; Hugh Fisher, Allentown, and William Schoenfelder, Brienigsville.

John Bronstein, company treasurer, estimated property damage at between $3,000 and $4,000. The company "feels certain," he said, that not more than three men were killed. No one was injured.

After an investigation, Coroner Alexander M. Peters reported that the blast "was just an unfortunate accident."

Powder Explosion.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Nov. 12—(AP).—Deputy Coroner T. A. McKay reported three men were killed today in an explosion at the Burton Powder Works of the American Cynanamid Corporation in the village of Edinburg, two miles from this western Pennsylvania city.

McKay said he understood one of several small buildings comprising the plant was "blown up" but had no further details. The blast shook this industrial community.

Wines have been requisitioned in a big way by the Germans. The whole grape harvest at Bordeaux has been taken over. Instead of paying for it the Germans are calling it a legitimate prize of war. One firm alone delivered 12,000,000 bottles of champagne to Germany but it is not known whether it was paid for.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost —(Advt.)

Fashion Studies In Classics

By ALICE ALDEN

IN THE fashion world there are classics that endure year after year. And invariably these are beloved by great designers who see in them something that is becoming and smart and right for whoever may wear them.

Nicole of Nicole de Paris is one of the great designers who sticks to classics. Long before the debacle in France this talented Parisienne declared that she could create better hats in New York than in her native Paris.

Here she has done a new version of the perennial favorite, the tricorne. Made for the bright lights, it is of black vis-a-vis felt trimmed with silver and emerald stone pins. A black veil embroidered in silver enhances this model.

FASHIONS

SIZES 14 - 48

Bring out your best features in a dress that is really becoming. This easy-to-make style flatters the figure and slims the hips of the woman who wears a larger size. The plain, high neckline is softly becoming and makes a perfect background for your lovely necklace or clips. Loose three-quarter sleeves are comfortable and smart. The paneled skirt takes inches off your hips and the raised waistline makes you look as slim as your daughter. Dark silk or rayon crepe in one of the new browns or deep wine colors, with a hat to match is the most charming costume you could want.

Style No. 3151 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric for dress; 1⅛ yards for bolero included in pattern.

. . . Hearts of cauliflower, strips of carrots, celery stuffed with Roquefort cheese, rosy-cheeked radishes are crisp tidbits which, along with raisin bread slices, have what it takes to sustain vitality and "put the heart in you" in these busy days of organizing, of collecting, and doing so much volunteer mercy work.

If a bit of egg yolk gets into egg white, remove it by moistening the tip of a clean cloth and touching the yolk with it. The yolk will adhere to the cloth.

DOROTHY DIX

When You Attempt to Correct Their Faults or Discipline Them

Dear Miss Dix—I am a widower with two very fine boys and I am engaged to be married to a widow who has an utterly undisciplined son. My boys are good students, well advanced in their studies for their ages, well mannered and courteous. Boy Scouts, page boys in church and members of their church dramatic club. My fiancee's son is backward in his school work, far behind in his grades, has boorish manners, doesn't show people even common courtesy, and his sole ambition is playing with older boys and coming home with weird tales of juvenile acts of violence, such as cleaning out empty houses, gang fight, etc. When I speak to this boy's mother (my future wife) about why she does not control him to task for his faults, she brushes it aside by saying: "Why do you worry about it? He will learn to behave as he should in time." Or: "Never mind about Edward. I'll look after him when the time comes." When this boy comes under my care I am going to make him toe the mark and I realize it is going to be no easy task. Nor do I see how the three boys, who are all between 12 and 14 years of age, are going to be able to get along together. Now the question is: Should I go ahead with this marriage or wait until I see a decided change in the boy? If I marry the mother, will I have unrestricted control over my stepson, or will I be limited by the fact that I am not his father?—S. E. M.

ANSWER—I should certainly advise you against going into this marriage unless you are hunting trouble, because there will be nothing else in it but trials and tribulations from your wedding day until you rate a divorce or a funeral.

Surely a man of your age and experience must know that the boy of 14 who has been reared by a weak and foolish mother, who has not even taught him the decencies of behavior or controlled him in any way, cannot be disciplined by a stepfather.

The lad will resent your authority and flout it. His mother will side with him and think you are persecuting her poor darling when you try to correct his faults, and there will be bitter quarrels between you that will make your home a place of strife and your life a burden to you.

Mother Will Not Change

The mother has shown that she has no proper sense of how to bring up a boy, or else she would never have let him run wild as she has. Her only idea is to indulge him in everything he desires to do and to avoid friction with him by never enforcing obedience or crossing his will.

And so you can expect no help from her in your effort to change

Give your family Protection against TIREDNESS . . . NERVOUSNESS

"We are not getting enough Thiamin", say scientists. Modern refining of foods has caused a shortage of this precious element, absolutely necessary if we are to feel our best, look and think at our best. Thiamin (Vitamin B1) affects nerves, growth, digestion. It is needed for energy. In fact, acts as a "spark-plug" that helps turn food into energy.

Quaker Oats contains Thiamin enough to "spark" itself and twice as much additional food into energy.

Thiamin is not stored up in the body, like some other vitamins. You need a fresh supply daily. Make the delightful Quaker Oats breakfast a daily habit. Get a package at your grocer's today.

SCIENTIFIC FACT: OATMEAL IS NATURE'S RICHEST THRIFTY SOURCE OF THIAMIN (Vitamin B1)

Quaker Oats is food of special value for growing children, for Thiamin is necessary for normal growth. Oatmeal is rich also in food-energy strength-building proteins, and contains iron and phosphorous.

Where Italy Met Defeat

It is well always to try and secure as accurate a view as possible of war-time movements. One can in this case gather together all the accounts which have been received of the attempted move by the Italian invaders who left Albania to invade Greece and force their way on toward the Aegean Sea.

How long this movement has been under consideration is not definitely known, but accounts indicate that Alpine troopers had been in training for the expedition for eight or ten months. These men were picked and selected for their knowledge and experience of mountains—the Alpine Centaur Division to be exact.

These troops would be fighting on ground with which they were familiar; they would have studied it and would know the strength or weakness of every movement they might undertake. They would carry exactly the right equipment, and they would be the best possible men Italy could furnish for such an expedition.

In that way it is fair to conclude that it was a 100 per cent. move on the part of Italy. It would be the best in personnel, equipment and in leadership, so there is no room for excuse in failing to meet with some measure of success. It has not been confirmed, but reliable information is that the whole plan was discussed by Hitler and Mussolini at their several conferences. It was known when and where Mussolini would strike.

From there one goes again through all the reports. Greece had nothing like the equipment of Italy, and the Greek mountain troops went into battle with no special training in advance for that engagement, but they appear to have had splendid leadership and they had determined and resourceful men. They opened their defensive attack at the right time; they cut off supply lines essential to the invaders. They knew their mountains and they placed the invaders in an untenable position.

It is known prisoners have been taken, but the numbers do not appear impressively large. Word comes now that this famed Italian force has been annihilated. Whether that is so we do not know at the moment, but we do know that what remains of that army of invasion has been in retreat, and the retreat has not been orderly. Those who escaped have gone back with greater speed than they entered.

Meantime despatches tell us the weather has turned milder. The heavy snowfalls are turning to slush and mud and the use of mechanized force has been made impossible. That division of the Italian army has been bogged.

So taking a fair view of the whole thing indicates that the Italians have met with plain defeat and a decisive defeat in that area. The Greeks have shown plainly the weakness of the invaders, and it is evident that if the plan of invasion is to proceed it will have to be started entirely anew.

"A Grand Failure"

It is not necessary to search for descriptive phrases of the late Arthur Neville Chamberlain. His own words furnished the most adequate description: "I am a man of peace from the depths of my soul."

In the little Hampshire church close by to where he had died, the vicar said if Mr. Chamberlain's mission in life had been a failure, then "it was a grand failure." One might use many words and say much less because truth runs throughout that short phrase. It is so closely embedded that it cannot be moved.

We shall think always of Neville Chamberlain as an English gentleman, one with a clean mind and the desire to deal fairly with all people. It was that sincerity and simplicity which he took with him in his historic meeting with Hitler. It was his nature to trust people and believe what they said. How thoroughly he was deceived is something which is on the score of Adolf Hitler.

Neville Chamberlain was not a man of war. When he faced the stern chapter where he declared war on Germany he was entering a place where his competence to meet a situation was lessened because it was something for which the man had no heart. Nor is that to his discredit.

He was not alone in his desire for peace in our times, because he had public feeling behind him. Britain longed for peace and worked for it to the point of reducing armament and stores of war, and that after all is the most sincere gesture any nation is able to make.

So it is that the vicar in the little church in Hampshire has given voice to a feeling which may well be accepted as telling in few words the life of Neville Chamberlain. He was a man of peace, but peace was not to come. If he had failed then "it was a grand failure."

No, It's Not a Dead Thing

Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to Britain, has been in his own land recently, and the Boston Globe interviewed him. The most amazing thing the ambassador said was that "democracy is finished in England." He added to that the prediction that if United States got into the war the same thing would take place there. There was a fair amount of talk in the interview about the aristocrats of England trying to hold their position, and they were finding a strong upsurge from beneath and it was difficult to keep it in hand.

It all depends on what Mr. Kennedy means when he uses the word "democracy." It is easier to live under a democracy than it is to actually define the meaning of that word. Democracy is not a fixed quantity; it changes because there is need of change; it will do things today which twenty years ago it would not have considered. There was a time when democracy in our own province of Ontario would have shivered at the word "socialism." We would have none of it, but today we have a good deal of it and no person shivers. Our Hydro-Electric enterprise is actually socialism on a sound basis; our Mothers' Allowance Act, Old Age Pensions—every move of that kind is socialism, but we do no shivering about it. Democracy has brought those things into existence and operation because they were needed, and because they could best be done by collective action. Unemployment insurance is on the way, while in times past we held rather rigidly to the belief that it was a man's duty and privilege to look out for himself.

We refuse to become alarmed because Ambassador Kennedy says democracy is either out or on the way out in England. Democracy is doing things there today which have never been done before. It has shaken out a lot of people in high estate; it has tossed aside a large amount of rules of procedure. It has taken competent men and placed them rapidly in places where they have authority, the scope of which would have amazed England a couple of years ago.

Britain of today has been giving a demonstration of a democracy which is fired with life and determination. The whole people feel it and it has spread from the open to the shelters where people escape bombs. It is that strange thing which causes a woman to sit by her bombed-out home and sing as best she can something about there always being an England.

That strange force causes men to stay at their work in munitions plants after the alarm has been sounded telling that bombers are on their way. It was democracy in its changing mood which caught up and adopted the challenge of Churchill when he held out the promise of blood, of tears and of agony as the price of freedom.

We do not believe it is dying in England. It is moving and acting and struggling and hoping and fighting. But it is still democracy.

Something That Can Wait

D. King Hazen, M.P., has placed a question on the order paper of the House of Commons calling for a detailed file on exchanges between the Canadian and United Kingdom governments indicating Canada's attitude during the year preceding the outbreak of war. He will move also for a "production of copy of all correspondence, letters, cables and other documents exchanged between His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and His Majesty's Government in Canada from September 15, 1938, to September 15, 1939, relating to the attitude of Canada in the event of an outbreak of hostilities between His Majesty and any other power."

One can understand a member of Parliament being curious about such matters, but we doubt whether all such correspondence could be made public. It covers an entire year and there would presumably be much of it. Before it was released the permission of the British Governmental authorities would be as necessary as the assent of those at Ottawa.

Whether this is the time to begin raking through such matters is doubtful. We cannot think of any good service which would result even if all the correspondence were tabled. If Mr. Hazen is bent on doing some political gunning he might possibly come across something which would look to him like good ammunition. But again, of what use would it be at this time?

Right now the only thing that matters is the winning of the war, and doing spade work regarding Canada's attitude a year before the war is something which can well be allowed to stand in line and wait.

25 Cents An Hour

A member of the Associated Press staff in London was looking for material when he visited the roof of a building in one of the most bombed sections of the city. He had papers from proper authorities permitting him to enter the premises, but when he got inside the street door he found a man with a fixed bayonet waiting. It was then the use and value of credentials became apparent.

The correspondent found a little sandbagged place on the roof on which there was a sliding top, and there the air raid observers were at work. In this branch there is no mechanical assistance and no substitute for good ears. They use powerful binoculars, and can tell a plane 15 miles off; they get its range and keep up a running report to headquarters; they report if it has dropped its load, if it has been shot down or engaged in a fight.

The men who are doing this work are in an exposed position; a hit near them would finish their station. They work four hours at a time, day and night and for that they are paid 25 cents per hour.

A good observer is expected to recognize and identify 150 types of aircraft, and many of them become so adept that they can tell quite accurately by the sound of the motor. You may consider 25 cents an hour too little for work with such a degree of hazard attached. The answer is their own statement that if and when the money runs out they will keep on doing it for nothing.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It might have been difficult enough for the people in London to observe the two minutes of silence.

London, Ont., was going to vote on daylight saving time, but Ottawa settled all that by one simple order. And that is the only way that old muddle-headed question will ever be settled.

The newspaper which wanted to do something original on the day after the U.S. election would have come out without a picture of Roosevelt on the front page.

Judge in British Columbia says women ought to have more respect for their husbands. After looking over some of the husbands in the land we have concluded the ladies are doing exceptionally well.

Canada has been able to supply Britain's increased demand for cheese and the quality is excellent. The one weak point is that those who produce the cheese can't secure enough for it to show a profit.

Kingston township passed a bylaw to grant fixed assessment to a new industry by a vote of 475 in favor to none voting in the opposite way. We have seen a good many such bylaws voted on in many places, but can recall none where the vote was unanimous. So it looks as if Kingston township had made a record of some kind or other.

The Italian chief of staff is reported as having been sent to Albania to see if he can improve on what has been done there. It is said of him he was the man who succeeded in defeating the Ethiopians, a people who could defend themselves with spears because they had nothing else with which to fight.

COUSIN EZRA

(By A.R.K.)

¶ On fixing cars now Ezra's good, he makes them run like how they should, he thought he'd speculate; he bought a hack that looked like hash, he'd spend a little time and cash, then it would run first rate.

¶ He towed that ancient thing back home, it would not even snort or groan, it shivered as it moved; I laughed when I looked at the crate, but Ezra said I'd better wait, till it had been improved.

¶ Of dollars for it he paid thirty, and it was weak and very dirty, it wasn't even quaint; but Ezra started at the thing, he'd whistle for a while and sing, as he slapped on some paint.

¶ 'Twould cost him twenty-five he said, and he'd keep working straight ahead, he'd smooth its shakes and groans; he knew exactly what to do, he'd sell the thing he also knew, for just one hundred bones.

¶ Well Ezra worked there every night, to get the things adjusted right, put new parts here and there; he knew his motors and their gears, in him there camped no anxious fears, he'd cash in rather fair.

¶ He had a prospect down the street, he came with big expectant feet, nor were his motions slow; just one thing wrong so I have heard, when Ezra cranked why nothing stirred — he couldn't make it go.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

A NAZI BOMB has made Kensington Palace uninhabitable. Since 1689 this has been a favorite royal residence; beginning as a private mansion it was acquired in that year by King William III and was enlarged and re-modelled for him by Sir Christopher Wren, his Knight Surveyor of Works, and the architect of Saint Paul's Cathedral. King William and Queen Mary both died at Kensington. After the death of George II the house became a residence for members of the royal household, and among other occupants was the Duke of Kent, the father of Queen Victoria. It was at Kensington that the young princess received the Lord Chamberlain and the Archbishop of Canterbury at five o'clock on the morning of June 20th, 1837, when they came to tell her that she was Queen of England. It is of Queen Victoria that we think when Kensington Palace is mentioned, but other Queens have been born there; it was there that Princess May of Teck was born, later to become the consort of King George V.

C & B

Kensington Palace is a gracious residence. The State Apartments are very handsome, having been designed by Wren; the woodwork in them was executed by Grinling Gibbons, most famous of all English carvers, and the decorative iron-work is by Jean Tijou. In the gardens on the south side of the house used to stand a statue of William III which was a gift from the former Kaiser of Germany. But although it is filled with treasures and has great historic association, Kensington Palace has very much the character of a home; it is a quiet, retired place, very different from the exposed and somewhat institutional Buckingham Palace.

C & B

Another example of Wren's work has been damaged by bombing; it is the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, a home for soldiers "broken in war," as the earliest description phrases it. It was founded by King Charles II, at the request of his mistress, the celebrated Drury Lane actress, Nell Gwynn. It is a plain but dignified and beautiful building, giving the lie to those who think that a building must be ugly to be "functional." It is inhabited by the Chelsea Pensioners, old soldiers who wear distinctive scarlet frock coats with brass buttons. For every day they wear stiff blue caps, but on special occasions they turn out in handsome three-cornered hats and make a very impressive show. The Pensioners are a characteristic feature of London and are always to be seen about the street in Chelsea; in one particular public house, the Chelsea Pensioner, they gather every night (that is, some ten or twelve of them do) and regale the other visitors with tales of the days when war was war.

C & B

THE Duke of Wellington was laid in state in the Hall of the Chelsea Hospital. This famous room contains a magnificent portrait of the Founder, Charles II, by Verrio, and is hung with flags and other trophies of victory. In the chapel are flags taken at Blenheim, and Napoleonic eagles captured at Salamanca and Waterloo. Lovers of Victoria art will be familiar with Sir Hubert Herkomer's picture, "The Last Muster," which shows the Pensioners in their chapel; it is a somewhat sentimental picture, but it is difficult to look at these five hundred old men, still soldierly in bearing, though some of them have white whiskers, and one at least (Private Rattray of the Twenty-Fouth Foot) is a hundred years old, without a feeling of pride which may be sentimental, but is none the less pleasurable for that. On Restoration Day, May 29th, the Pensioners parade and decorate the statue of Charles II in the quadrangle with oak branches, in memory of his escape from Worcester. And long after the Nazi menace has passed, the Chelsea Pensioners will still be parading, and will still be the bravest and perhaps the most pathetic sight in London.

C & B

A lover of the art of Christopher Wren might almost accuse the Nazis of having made a dead set at that architect's work. Damage has been done to Saint Paul's Cathedral, though fortunately this has not been serious. Saint Paul's was the first great Protestant church to be built in England; it stands on the site of the older cathedral which was burned down in the Great Fire of 1666. The re-building of London after this disaster was a gigantic undertaking, and when was chosen for the position of Surveyor-General and Principal Architect; in addition to the building of Saint Paul's, which was almost task enough for one man, he designed fifty-one parish churches and a large number of private buildings. Sir Christopher had a plan for the reconstruction of the city which would without any question of doubt have made it the most spacious, convenient, and beautiful capital in the world, infinitely superior to Paris in its best days; but, alas, the desire of shopkeepers and other citizens to have their houses re-built exactly on their original sites was so strong that the plan came to nothing, and London grew into the picturesque but inconvenient and cramped city which it is today. It seems a pity that petty personal considerations could not have been overcome; Wren's plan was noble and magnificent.

C & B

It took a fire to make London clear out her slums in 1666; it has taken the Nazi bombing raids to do it a second time. London has some of the worst slums in the world, but slum-clearance has always been slow and difficult work. Oddly enough, the slum-dwellers themselves have always been opposed to measures designed to give them better houses, on the understandable ground that improvement meant raised rents. Now the invader has made necessary the re-building of much slum property, and an admirable chance has come to wipe out one of the scandals of London.

• A Citizen's Tribute To Walter Stocker

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir, — The community was shocked at the sudden death of Alderman Stocker, who will be missed for his love of flowers and trees.

He has left his mark on the waste places of the city, turning them into bowers of beauty, as reflected in his work around the Children's Shelter and along King Edward School grounds. The lovely flower bed on Water street at the Goose Pond, and many bare corners where briars and weeds gather all have been turned into spots of beautiful harmonious colors of spring and summer bloom.

Among the outstanding pieces of work is the James Stevenson Park with Tourist Camp and softball diamond seating many hundreds to enjoy an evening of play.

The levelling and planting of trees on the newly acquired land jutting out into Little Lake is already showing the care and attention bestowed on it, and will continue to improve as the years roll by.

I had the privilege of nominating Walter Stocker for Council, selecting him as a useful member to legislate for the city, and have been proud ever since of his election, which has been continuous each time he offered himself.

Walter was a diamond in the rough —outspoken. One always knew where he stood, but beneath it all a warm heart beat in his love for little children, as evidenced by the years connected with the Children's Aid Society, and the personal work given to build the Jackson Park Camp.

I wish to pay tribute to Alderman Walter Stocker, and suggest the latest piece of work executed by him at McDonald's Point be named The Walter Stocker Park, as a lasting memorial to him.

Yours respectfully,
J. J. TURNER.

• Lakefield's Famous Writing Family

LAKEFIELD is a beautiful, peaceful, little village, parts of it very much like an English parish, in the Kawartha Lake district of Ontario. Its earliest settlers were English families of social standing, says Senator W. A. Buchanan in the Lethbridge Herald. They put up with the hardships of pioneering and left their impress upon the countryside. One family, the Stricklands, is still well known in Canada. Recently Agnes Strickland, one of the connection who remained in England has been the subject of a volume entitled "Agnes Strickland: Biographer of the Queens of England."

The Stricklands had a marked literary instinct, for two of Agnes' sisters, who came to Canada, made contributions that have survived the years. Mrs. Susannah Moodie, one of these sisters, published in 1839 "Roughing it in the Bush" and it is about the most perfect picture of the pioneering days in Upper Canada that has been placed on paper. So good is it, that new editions have been brought out in recent years. It is a book that should be in every Canadian home; it would reveal that the present generation, the poorest of them, though complaining much, is living in luxury compared with the life those genteel English people experienced in the country north of the present Peterborough when it was first being settled. Then there was another sister, Catherine Parr Traill, whom this writer personally remembers, and she also wrote a number of books based upon her experiences as a member of this pioneer family. She was best known as a naturalist being devoted to the study of the wild flowers of the Lakefield and Rice Lake country. There was a brother also who cannot be overlooked for Major Samuel Strickland, who settled at Lakefield, was responsible for "Thirty Years in Canada West." Here, when we include Agnes, who never came to Canada, we have a family of unusual literary gifts. Politics we know runs in families in England and with the Stricklands book writing seems to have been contagious. A library possessing the works of Mrs. Moodie and Mrs. Traill is in an envied position, for no two women contributed as much about early Canadian life as these two Strickland sisters. They wrote well and what they wrote was a chronicle of life as it was lived in those hard days when homes were being hewed out in the forests of Ontario. Today the Lakefield countryside cannot be surpassed for picturesqueness, a rolling country in a land of rivers and lakes, it attracts thousands of tourists from all over North America. The Stricklands and other English families felled the first trees and tilled the soil, fished on the streams and lakes, hunted in the wilds and made it known to the world outside. Lakefield should not forget those pioneers, they deserve a cairn at least so that future generations will not forget them.

• Foreign Language Press In Canada

Many and still more help in the fight for freedom is the recurring theme of Canada's foreign language press. "Novy Shliakh" (New Pathway), Ukrainian semi-weekly of Saskatoon, puts it in these words: "Thousands of our brothers, sons and grandsons stand today armed in the British Isles, elbow to elbow with the hergic sons of Albion, like a living wall against hostile aggression. Our cents and dollars also constitute a part of Canada's war funds. We are not the last ones by any means, but our assistance should grow proportionately to the needs and the sacrifices of the people in the British Isles. It should grow and get mightier every day. Our poverty, which in normal times could be a sufficient excuse, would now be only a subterfuge. When the people over there are sacrificing their lives and everything they have,—we too must offer help from here in the spirit of complete unselfishness."

Der Courier, German weekly, Regina, presses on its readers the need for gratitude, gratitude that no aeroplanes are raining death over Western Canada, that Canada has been spared the epidemics which almost every war brings. "In spite of the war," Der Courier continues, "we are allowed to use our mother tongue and go about our business unimpeded. And still people complain; it has become the custom to do so."

"Der Nordwesten," German weekly, Winnipeg, in an editorial published in both German and English, observes that the foreign language section of our population includes some 500,000 German-Canadians and a much less but quite substantial number of Italians. "The vast majority of both," says Der Nordwesten, "are just as anxious to see the barbaric policy and methods of the leaders of their fatherlands crushed, as is the most ardent and heavily bombed Londoner. Such people deserve credit rather than the criticism which is often directed against them by ill-informed people . . . Hereafter we trust that everyone who has taken upon himself the responsibilities of our citizenship, and fulfilled its requirements, will be treated not as an alien, but as a full-fledged Canadian. The spirit of Canada is a mighty factor in the assurance of victory."

And a writer in "Keneder Adler" (Jewish Eagle) Montreal, describes how, on Broadway, he went to see the film: "London Can Take It."

The film showed England's capital was being bombed by Hitler's aeroplanes and how the King's pilots were fighting back. I noticed that the whole audience was receiving this, with the same feelings and emotions as I, a British subject. When the airplanes of the R.A.F. appeared, the whole audience applauded them, just as though to give them courage.

SAFETY FIRST

The announcement that Britain is to buy merchant ships in the United States, up to the value of $50,000,000, indicates that the British merchant marine of around 21,000,000 tons, is to be maintained at that level, and for every ship sunk by a Nazi submarine, there will be a ship for replacement. It is safety first, with all contingencies provided for.—St. Catherines Standard.

And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thod go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life: and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. —Gen. iii, 13-15.

CHOPIN IS BLAMED

The London Times adds one more to the tale of measures adopted by the Germans in their effort to crush the intellectual, musical and artistic spirit of Poland. With characteristic lack of humor, the order has been issued by the so-called Chief of Culture and Education, and it forbids the playing of any works of the great Polish composer Chopin at concerts and public gatherings. Also the works of the Polish novelists, Sienkiewicz and Zeromski, have been placed on the index and all their books are to be removed from libraries and reading rooms.

Thousands of Canadians who have read and enjoyed "Quo Vadis" and "With Fire and Sword," and find keen pleasures in listening to the mazurkas, nocturnes and sonatas of Chopin, will know how to appreciate this latest example of Nazi kultur.—From the Canadian Friends of Poland.

Poison Pancakes Kill Eleven; Hunt Ex-Cook

PITTSBURG, Nov. 12—(AP). — A poison, believed to have been a deadly roach powder baked into pancakes, killed eleven men yesterday and sickened fifty-two others who had eaten at a social service centre for transients and itinerant workers.

Dr. Robert Kooser, house resident physician at St. Francis Hospital where many of the victims were taken, said all who had eaten the pancakes were made ill and that the condition of "a good many" was serious.

Detective Inspector Walter Monaghan declared police seeking a former cook at the centre had located the man in Philadelphia and that he is being returned to Pittsburg for questioning.

The cook was dismissed several weeks ago. Asked why police wanted to question the man, Monaghan replied: "Because of some threats that he made."

Death struck with startling swiftness among the group of hungry men breakfasting on fried bacon, raisin bread, angel food cake and the pancakes in the Salvation Army's Lawrenceville centre where normally eighty men are guests.

Two men staggered from a table in the big dining room and fell dead in a dormitory across a hall. The others died in hospitals, where they were taken in automobiles and ambulances.

Many of the stricken collapsed on the floor of the dining hall, while others staggered about clutching at their throats or abdomens and crying for aid from hard-pressed doctors and nurses.

Hundreds of persons gathered outside the two-storey brick centre and volunteers sprang to the aid of the overburdened medical men and women.

Frantically, as the stricken kept coming in, the three hospitals receiving the victims tried various antidotes while city chemists raced through test after test to determine the precise poison the afflicted had eaten.

Taking personal charge of the investigation, Coroner P. J. Henney ordered all food in the centre seized for analysis by the United States Department of Agriculture. Later Deputy Coroner Anthony Sappo said chemists had discovered the pancakes contained a poison common to roach powder. It had not been determined, he said, how the poison—a white powder resembling flour—got into the pancakes.

Injured Hunter Dies In Lindsay

TORONTO, Nov. 12. — Although his wife, fearing an accident had urged him not to go, John J. Carnochan, Riverdale Avenue, went on a hunting expedition Saturday, and as a result died Sunday from gunshot wounds.

Members of his family Sunday recounted how his wife had protested against his going on the trip. They said she had a "feeling" that something would happen if he went.

Carnochan, accompanied by Robert Anderson and George Prior of Stanhope Avenue, East York, was hunting near Coboconk when the accident occurred, according to Provincial Police Officer William McBrien who investigated. Their dog roused a partridge and Anderson fired, the charge hitting Carnochan.

The 25-year-old man was rushed to Lindsay General Hospital, with shotgun pellets in his arm and stomach. Married only last May he is survived by his widow and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Carnochan.

Nov. 12 (AP)—A mischievious youngster 'phoned a radio station, introduced himself as school superintendent and asked it be announced that because of cold weather "There will be no school today." North Bay Couple Missing Month In Car

SUDBURY, Nov. 12. — Fears are mounting for the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. Kirk of North Bay, who have disappeared mysteriously following their departure from Sudbury on October 4 last on a vacation trip which was to take them to Winnipeg and back via Sault Ste. Marie. Mr. Kirk is divisional sales manager for an oil company with headquarters in North Bay. The couple visited Mr. and Mrs. John Newstead here on October 4 and left about 9:30 p.m. for Sault Ste. Marie. Before leaving Mr. Kirk filled has gas tank and had his car serviced, with the intention of driving through to Sault Ste. Marie, a distance of 202 miles, the same night.

He was believed to have been carrying about $100 when he left. Arrangements were made before the missing couple left that on his way back Mr. Kirk was to wire Mr. Newstead advising him the time of his arrival in Sault Ste. Marie, in about two weeks. When three weeks had gone by Mr. Newstead began investigating, and learned through customs officials at Sault Ste. Marie Mr. and Mrs. Kirk had not reached there. Mail which had been forward to Mr. Kirk from North Bay to Winnipeg had not been called for, and no answer was received to telegrams sent to them.

The possibility the blue sedan in which they were travelling had plunged off the road into a river was investigated, and highway officials informed the searchers not a single guard rail at such points was damaged or broken.

"There was no need of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk stopping anywhere along the road for gas," Mr. Newstead stated last night, "because he had plenty of gas to carry him through to Sault Ste. Marie."

The couple were in particularly high spirits when they left, and were anticipating keenly their trip to Winnipeg, where the mothers of both reside.

'I don't think he would pick up a hitchhiker at night with his wife in the car," Mr. Newstead said.

The disappearance is a complete mystery to the oil company officials, who stated Mr. Kirk was comfortable financially, with a fair-sized sum of money on deposit in a North Bay bank.

Hastings Citizens Honor Soldier Dead

HASTINGS, Nov. 12—(ENS).—A service of prayer and intercession and of remembrance for those who gave their lives in the Great War, was held at 10.30 a.m. Monday in the Hastings Town Hall.

Despite the inclement weather, a good attendance was present for the occasion. Ex-service men were present wearing their medals and berets.

The service which opened with the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers," was conducted by the Rev. J. E. Glover of Trinity United Church. Rev. D. K. Perrie of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church read the scripture lesson Rev. A. C. McCullum of St. George's Anglican Church, who served with the 20th Battalion and the Royal Air Force in the last Great War, was the speaker.

As the Tannery whistles and bells were sounded, a two-minute silence was observed, and the Last Post was sounded by Veteran Cyril Blackbourne.

Mrs. J. E. Glover sang as a solo, "O Valiant Hearts," as Miss Carrie Doxsee who presided at the piano for the hymns, played the accompaniment.

On account of rain, it was impossible to pleace wreaths about the cenotaph, but as the Rev. J. E. Glover read aloud the names of those who gave their lives in the Great War, Mrs. Iden Bonds Sr. placed the government wreath beneath the list of names recorded in the town hall.

The singing of "O Canada," and The National Anthem brought the impressive service to a close.

War Cloud Lining Brightens For Britain As She Is Assured More Aid

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP).—Thousands of young men of this generation have joined the first Great War dead sleeping in Flanders' Fields, where the guns rumbled into silence just twenty-two years ago.

Amid the carnage of a new and more terrible war, memories of the hopes of perpetual peace which thrilled all mankind that first Armistice Day came back as mocking echoes. Yet for Britain there are glimpses of silver lining among the war clouds.

Unquestionably, the German-Italian allies, having loosed their war juggernauts against British east and west, are further from complete victory than when France fell only a few months ago. Britain has survived the first shock of attack and is striking back. Her little ally, Greece, has turned the edge of an Italian flanking thrust in the Balkans, against all odds. That alone revises the war picture imponderably in Britain's favor.

To cap it, nature has taken a double hand in the conflict. Earthquakes in Rumania have wrought grave damage, according to first accounts, to the vital Nazi-Fascist oil resources there, and to the railroad facilities for transporting the fuel to the battlefronts. The onset of winter storms in the Greek-Albanian border terrain makes Italian efforts to subdue the Greeks doubly difficult.

It will take time to reoganize and renew the Italian attack, time that Italy can ill afford as winter closes down on the battle area to limit mechanized warfare and air operations. And if the earthquake causes any interruption in the flow of Rumanian oil to Germany it will be a serious matter for Berlin. The Danube water route of transportation soon will be closed by ice. Rumanian rail facilities are inadequate at best and may have been crippled by the earth tremors.

A Gloom Chaser

The recent announcement that the United States would increase its material assistance to Britain was another item in the war balance that helped strip this Armistice Day of some of its gloom for the bamb-blasted British people.

The natural disaster in Rumanian oil fields could prove the most important of these developments. The Greek stand, however, has more than a local significance. It dims Italian military prestige and renders the possibility of a native uprising against Britain in Africa remote. Instead, Britain is obviously preparing to take the offensive soon against the Italian invaders in Egypt.

By German invitation, Premier Molotoff of Russia has gone to Berlin to talk over Russian-Axis relations. It is notable, however, that predictions of great developments favorable to the Axis come from Berlin and Rome, not Moscow. That Molotoff intends to play the game in Russia's interest only cannot be doubted; and the happenings in Greece and Rumania put new trump cards in his hands before he even reached Berlin.

Russia is the great enigma in the war picture. German failure to draw her great eastern neighbor closer into the Axis orbit would be a critical diplomatic defeat at this stage. Hitler must have positive, not negative, results to show to offset developments unfavorable for the Axis elsewhere.

Fighting Chance To Swing Empire

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The New York Times, in an editorial: "Free France Still Fights," today declares that General de Gaulle still has a "fighting chance to make the French colonial empire a mighty asset to the British cause."

The editorial reads:

General de Gaulle and the cause of Free France has not let themselves be discouraged by the fiasco at Dakar. The Free tricolor now flies over Libreville, on the Gabon coast of French Equatorial Africa, after hard fighting on land with the help of ships offshore.

Libreville itself has not the strategic value of Dakar, which juts out a thousand miles farther into the South Atlantic. Dakar has a world importance because its possession or its use by the Axis would endanger British supply routes from South America or around the Cape of Good Hope. Libreville, in comparison, has only an African importance; it is useful strategically because it should strengthen British control of the midriff of Africa, where only 1,800 miles separate the Atlantic and the Upper Nile. With French Equatorial Africa in their firm possession, the British may yet find it possible to send airplanes eastward to harass any Italian drive against the Sudan.

But General de Gaulle's latest exploit cannot be measured in terms of strategy alone. It must be judged as a psychological step toward rallying other French colonies to his side. As the flag of Free France advances in Africa, from the Cameroons to Gabon and from Gabon elsewhere, it cannot fail to impress the commanders and troops of every French colony which is now cut off from food and supplies by the British blockade. The rumblings in French Indo-China, with the reported resignation of the Governor-General, and the speculation heard in Switzerland as to General Weygand's attitude in North Africa may be symptoms of a change under way. General de Gaulle still has a fighting chance to make the French colonial empire a mighty asset to the British cause.

J. HERBERT STOTTS

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 12 (ENS) —A great many friends from over a wide area paid final tribute to J. Herbert Stotts of Seymour township Monday afternoon. It's Nice To Know

TORONTO, Nov. 12—(CP).—E. T. H. Shaffer, author and editor from Walterboro, S.C., said in an interview here yesterday that pro-British feeling in the United States has developed to the point where 90 per cent of the people would be willing to take up arms in Britain's defence if active United States help suddenly was needed.

"You people don't need any men just now, but if you ever do, we have them."

Their Sacrifice Not In Vain States Massey

LONDON, Nov. 12 — (CP). — Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to London, said in an Armistice Day broadcast that the sacrifice of the men who died in the First Great War will not be in vain when the present generation completes its task.

"Their sacrifice will not be in vain when we, as we will, free the world from this black night of misery and fear," he said.

"We have the strength that comes of freedom, and it is an inexhaustible reservoir of strength."

Londoners had missed the usual peacetime Armistice services, curtailed this year because of the war, and without the customary silence.

"Guns and bomb craters, however, could not impair the true spirit of Armistice Day," Mr. Massey said. "It was with us just the same."

"And to-day the sons of those who fought in the last war have taken up the quarrel with the foe. The sword of those we honor could not have passed into worthier hands."

On this day, more than twenty years after the peace which ended the First Great War, the Empire was continuing the long struggle for freedom, he said.

"Can we find a lasting peace Need the scourge of war afflict each coming generation

"No. Not of we will it. If the sense of duty shown by those in time of war can be carried over to the tasks of peace, we need have no fear."

Mr. Massey said the sword held by the statue of Richard the Lion-Hearted in London had been bent by bombs, but had not broken. This was a symbol of victory.

"Free peoples may bend under attack," he said, "but they never break. In this flexibility lies their strength."

Timely Bump

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12 (AP) — James H. Newton and bride just bumped into the minister who married them. They dented his automobile fender, then left Newton's daughter-in-law to discuss the settlement while they went for a license. When they returned the traffic victim was introduced as Rev. W. I. Beboard. "What's a dented fender at a time like this?" he asked, invited them into his sedan and married them.

Baby Dies In Fire As Coboconk Rescue Fails

COBOCONK, Nov. 12 — A 6-months-old baby girl died in the flames which destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Mathewson here Monday. The mother and two other children, Kenneth, 3, and Donald, 18 months, are in Lindsay hospital, suffering from burns.

The fire razed the one-story frame house within a few minutes, and the efforts of the frantic mother and volunteers to re-enter the home were defeated by the flames.

Mrs. Mathewson, whose husband is a member of the 45th Battery, stationed at Petawawa, was in the backyard hanging out clothes when she saw flames break through the roof. Rushing indoors, she grabbed Kenneth and Donald, and tried to push the baby carriage containing the youngest child, Evelyn Hazel, to safety. Unable to move the carraige, Mrs. Mathewson ran outside through the flames with the two youngsters, and then attempted to go in again and rescue the baby. But the flames barred the entrance.

The mother and neighbors tried again and again to get into the house, but each time the flames drove them back. Mrs. Mathewson was burned about the face and arms. Kenneth also suffered burns, but Donald escaped unhurt.

Cause of the fire was not learned in the preliminary investigation.

M—Misconduct

Rink At Keene Is Discussed

KEENE, Nov. 12 — (ENS). — A group from the A.Y.P.A. met the members of the Otonabee Council to discuss possibility of having a rink at Keene this winter.

The old Keene Rink was not used for a number of winters, having been condemned, and it fell down last winter under the weight of a heavy snow storm.

After a lengthy discussion it was decided to release this site to the O.Y.P.A. Club which is to clear away the debris and make preparations for an open-air rink.

Crystal Shower.

Mrs. Thomas Hope entertained delightfully at a crystal shower for Miss Kathleen Nelson, bride-elect, at her home on Saturday evening. The evening was spent in playing euchre and high score was held by Mrs. Clarence Robertson.

Miss Nelson was presented with a large number of gifts. The bride-to-be thanked her friends. The serving of dainty refreshments brought the evening to a close.

Remembrance Day.

Remembrance Day was observed in Keene with a short service in the Hall. Rev. G. Murray spoke and a hymn was sung, followed by the National Anthem. All present then marched to the Cenotaph, led by the local boys who are members of the Prince of Wales Rangers, in uniform, followed by veterans of last war and the public. The usual two minutes' silence was observed. Rev. G. Murray led in a short prayer and J. J. Moore, veteran of last war, placed a wreath on the Cenotaph.

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Disheartened because she can find no work, Lona Ackerman, whose father is serving a life sentence for murder, finds some consolation after telling her troubles to Jim Claridge, an acquaintance she has decided to trust. Aside from Claridge, she is alone in the world, jobless and broke.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER EIGHT

FOR A MOMENT after Lona had told Jim Claridge about Hardy's threat to put her on a blacklist because she was a convict's daughter, Jim said nothing. His mouth had set into a stern line and she saw his fists go hard and white on the restaurant table. At the word "convict" he had whitened slowly with the sick, haunted look she had seen on his face last night when she had first told him about her father. Stricken, he looked.

"The damned bully!" he brought out, finally. "I'll punch his yellow face for him!" With sudden fury he half rose from his chair. "I'll mop up the floor with the scum! Where is his office?"

"Oh, no!" she cried out, sharply, then. "You mustn't, Jim!" In her excitement the name fell easily from her lips. "I didn't mean that I wanted—I couldn't let you get into trouble on my account!"

"Somebody's got to take care of you, girl." His lips were set. "Why didn't you call me this afternoon? I haven't worked since the rain started."

"I didn't know," Lona murmured, a hot, shamed flush spreading over her face. "I thought you were working," she lied. "And besides, now that I have the prospects of a job, you mustn't do anything—don't you see?" She was watching him anxiously.

"You're too hot-tempered," she told him. "All you men are alike. I don't think I could bear to be mixed up in another fight. You might KILL him the way Daddy did, and then—"

She shuddered and, relaxing, he leaned across the table and patted her hand.

"Sorry," he said. "I wasn't thinking. It made me see red for a minute. I don't want to make any more trouble for you, of course. But I sure would like to get in just one punch," he finished, smiling the little half-smile that Lona remembered from last night. Watching him light an after-dinner cigaret with deft movements of his capable looking hands, she recalled her bitter doubts of the afternoon with a wave of shame. How could she have thought she couldn't trust him? With his eyes, and that smile! You could always trust a man who smiled like that.

"Tell me about this — job of mine," she prompted, when he had finished the cigaret.

For answer he rummaged in his pocket and drew out an old envelop. "Scribbled it down here," he confided. "It's at 1168 Lothrop avenue. The Western Realities company, eighth floor, Drexel building. You're to bring your agency card, and ask for Mr. Sanders. How does that sound?" he asked, passing her the envelop.

"It sounds wonderful! I can scarcely believe it," Lona breathed, studying the penciled scribbles. "If you only knew—" She choked suddenly, and dropped the battered envelop into her purse as if it were a newly acquired treasure. What if she had made good her intention of hiding away, she was thinking. She would never have known . . .

"You don't think that he — Mr. Hardy—might go through with that blacklist?" she asked, as a sudden new fear startled her. "He couldn't keep them from hiring me, could he?"

"I'd break his neck if he tried it!" he assured her, his face going grim again for an instant.

Then, tossing his cigaret away, he leaned across the table with a boyish toss of his head. "Let's quit worrying and celebrate," he said. "I think we've both got a spree coming to us. How about hunting ourselves up a good show?"

A show! Lona could feel her own eyes brighten. It had been so many weary months since she had been able to afford even a movie.

"I shouldn't," she told him, trying not to sound regretful. "You've feel—"

"But I want to!" he protested quickly. "Unless there's something else you'd rather do. You see, girl, I'm lonesome, sort of. It's a long way from—California."

His voice was so forlorn Lona had to laugh. "If you put it that way it makes it a duty," she conceded, her voice gayer than it had been in weeks.

"Only," she added, ruefully, you'll have to wait until I change my dress. And I suspect my face needs washing." She laughed again.

"Two derelicts together," he said, whimsically, tucking her arm through his as they descended the steps of her new boarding house a half hour later.

At his touch Lona's heart contracted. She had been wanting to do that very thing. But she had been too timid. It was so sweet to be close to someone again. She wondered if he realized.

"How old are you, girl?" He looked down at her to ask suddenly, as they strolled, looking for promising theater signs.

"I'm 22," Lona told him.

That brought a surprised look to his rugged face. "Whew!" he exclaimed, boyishly. "And I thought you were about 16. . . . Why, you're grown up. Better watch your step, James!"

He pretended to pull away from her, and Lona laughed. Laughed with a lump in her throat. To be joking in the old, sweet way.

"Let's hunt up the gayest, giddiest musical comedy we can find," she said, with sudden upsurging recklessness. "Something with lots of girls, and snappy songs, and jokes —plenty of jokes."

As if in answer to her mood, a flashing sign a block away intruded upon her consciousness. A scintillating thing of winking blue lights that stood out in the thick dusk like jewels on a woman's hand.

"HAPPY DAYS," it called enticingly.

As they came nearer, a loudspeaker began to blare from somewhere beneath the sign.

"Happy days are here again!" a Herculean voice lilted. "Ta-ta—ta-ta—ta-TA-ti-tum—"

Lona looked at the man beside her.

"Here we are," she said, steering him toward the sign. "Come on."

Next morning, all the way across town on the street car, crowded with its quota of work-bound passengers, Lona kept reading over the scribbled note on the old envelop Jim Claridge had given her. "1168 Lothrope avenue. Western Realties,

Bowling Butcher Knows His Slices

DETROIT, Nov. 12 — (CP). — Karl Alder, a chubby Detroit butcher with a scant 126 average recently accomplished bowling feat more rare than a 300 game. Karl made the 7-10 split not once but twice in a single game. He accomplished the feat by sending the ball down the alley fast and slicing the No. 7 pin a mighty clip on the far side that sent it at the rear cushion at an angle. Back off the cushion came the pin to spill the No. 10 pin

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Decks were cleared for what is confidently expected to be a successful season last night when the Peterborough Hockey Club held its annual meeting, elected officers and made arrangements for the 1940-41 campaign. Most of the old officers were re-elected with President R. M. Glover again at the helm and the players well represented on the executive with Eddie Starr second vice-president, Harry Bun Kingdon, recording secretary and two other players to be added later to the executive committee. Frank Buckland, coach of last season's championship squad was unanimously chosen as manager and coach. He was the choice of the players and endorsed by the whole gathering as the most suitable pilot for this year's crew. The enthusiasm in sight at the meeting augurs well for a good year for hockey.

* * * * * *

One important question of policy was definitely dealt with. The meeting turned thumbs down on hockey program advertising this season. It was decided not only that the club would not sponsor such a venture but that it would refuse to endorse or recommend any program issued by any one else. The feeling was unanimous that the business men and industrial heads in Peterborough objected to this kind of advertising as high pressure stuff and the hockey club was anxious to disassociate itself from such efforts. At the same time it felt that many citizens would be quite willing to assist the club financially in view of the feat of the team in winning the Eastern Canadian intermediate honors last season. Hockey-loving citizens will be given an opportunity in the near future to make financial contributions to assist in giving Peterborough another winning team and officers of the club feel quite confident that the response to the appeal will be substantial.

* * * * * *

There was a glimmer of good news for Peterborough fans in the announcement made last night that Frank Jopling and Don Crowe, stalwart defence men of last year's Peterborough championship squad may again be available this season. Coach Frank Buckland pointed out that the two players had been temporarily shifted to Toronto by the C.G.E. to take a course and that they would be eligible to play here if they desired to do so. It was decided to communicate with Crowe and Jopling and ascertain their views. If they desire to play here this winter the club will immediately take up the matter with the O.H.A. Possible junior reinforcements too were in the offing last night. One of the staff at the military training camp here is McGregor, an Ottawa boy who is still eligible for junior and there is another lad in town who is young enough for the 'teen age division in spite of the fact he played senior hockey down east last season.

* * * * * *

Our old friend Knotty Lee, whose years of managership of the Peterborough ball club gave this city some of its most colorful baseball is already pointing toward another season and according to Charlie Good who usually knows all the numbers in baseball, Mister Lee may land back in Ogdensburg next year. Knotty had the Auburn club in the Canadian-American League during the season just past and there wasn't much gold in the hills, according to reports. He got along pretty well in Ogdensburg before but had some difficulties in regard to the ball park and decided to shift. Now Good says that the Ogdensburg fans want him back there again next season and that Henry W. Burns and Clarence Skelly of the Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce are in Toronto to contact the genial Mister Lee. The Toronto man has been in baseball a long, long time but he hasn't lost a fraction of his interest in the game. He'll talk baseball as long as he can get an audience — and even after that.

* * * * * *

At last night's meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club it was unanimously decided to send a letter of condolence to the relatives of Frankie Collins, whose services to hockey in Peterborough were generally recognized. Hockey fans recalling Frankie's career as a member of the Peterborough senior squad have been talking not only of the record-breaking goal he scored against London but of other exploits in the same season. It is remembered how in a game in Kitchener which meant everything to the Petes who had to win to stay in the running Collins scored the winning goal by rounding the Kitchener net and slapping one in before the Kitchener goalie could shift. More than that, on the same night, when three of the Petes went to the penalty bench almost together Collins and Bert McLeod with Joe Dwyer in the cage held the whole Kitchener team at bay for almost two minutes until the offenders got back on the ice.

Canadian athletes have always been in the forefront in the Marathon game and even in these days when most folk take an automobile if they have to go a block to post a letter there are still a lot of good long distance runners bobbing up in this country. One of the latest and perhaps one of the greatest is a sturdy little French-Canadian named Gerard Cote from St. Hyacinthe, Que. Cote trotted home in front of a big field the other day to win the Yonkers' Marathon and thus became the first long distance runner who ever won both the Boston Marathon and the A.A.U. Marathon. Not even Longboat was able to accomplish that feat and the performance places Cote high in the list of long-distance runners. There was a time when he would have been the toast of Canada. Nowadays the Marathon game seems to have lost its hold on popular imagination and Cote's great triumph has not received the acclaim its importance justifies.

Biggest baseball deal in some time was completed Monday when the Brooklyn Dodgers, evidently determined on buying themselves into the National League pennant next season, if possible, purchased that fine pitcher Kirby from the Phillies. All the Dodgers had to pay for the sensational righthander was Pitchers Vito Tamulis and Bill Crouch, Catcher Livingstone and a little matter of $100,000 in cash. Pitching for a tail-end club Higbe won fourteen games and lost nineteen. With any luck in the world he should hang up at least twenty wins for the Dodgers next season and another heaver with 20 notches on his gun would have meant the pennant for the Brooklyn club this year. Higbe is young, perhaps not yet at the peak of his form, and with a good club behind him should be pointing to a high mark in 1941.

Oshawa G-Men are still looking for their first win in the senior group. Mariboros moved into the Motor town Monday night and emerged victorious by a score of 5 to 3. The result was a disappointment to the G-Men who hoped to begin their home stand with a victory over the classy Dukes. Mariboros, however, rattled home three goals in the first period and that was enough to carry them through to a win. Roy Covert scored one of Oshawa's three goals and Gar Peters, who has often played here for Oshawa junior squads got his first senior marker. In the other senior game of the night Port Colborne went into first place in the league race by defeating St. Catharines 3 goals to 1. The Sailors have won three games in four starts and look to be one of the strongest clubs in the senior division.

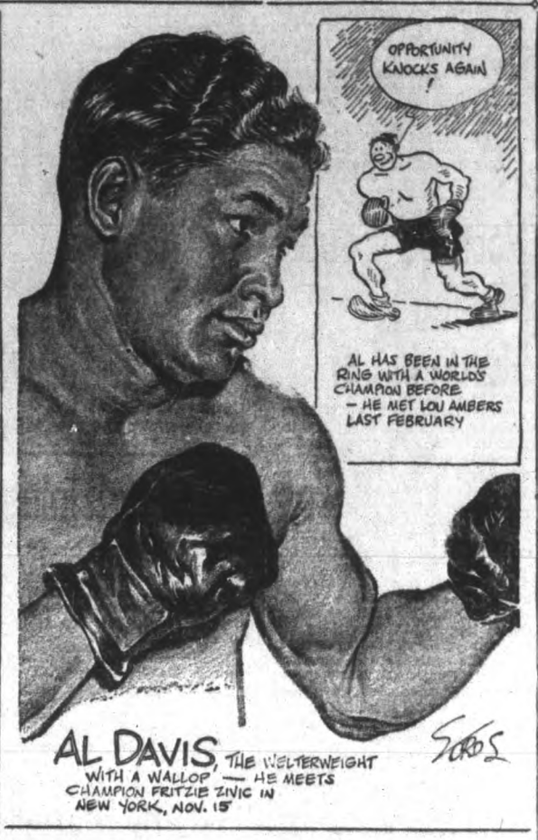
Sporting Chili Con Carne: Kirby Higbe, sold to the Brooklyn Dodgers will ask a $15,000 salary. It's nice work if you can get it. . . . Jo-Jo Graboski is playing coach of the Glace Bay Miners and he showed the boys how to do it last night by scoring the winning goal to beat North Sydney Victorias. . . . Syd Howe is leading the N.H.L. scorers with four points. However a good night for any one of a couple of dozen other players would change the standing. . . . The Houston club of the Texas League wants to eliminate the playoff system and have the club which finishes on top of the regular schedule the champs. It's a sensible idea, but not so good for the box office. . . . Don Crowe's bad shoulder was bruised a little Saturday but he will be ready for the playoffs. . . . George Pace after being knocked down twice in the first round by Jackie Callura got off the floor and went on to get a draw. That's the stuff real champions need.



Flying Fritzie Zivic's Bank Roll Will Allow Steak Diet Now

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—It looks as though the coffee-and-cake days are just about over for Fritzie Zivic.

From here on in, provided some fellow doesn't come along and knock his ears off, the youngest of the five Flying Zivics figures to mix a little steak and possibly even a spot or two of caviar in his fistic diet, particularly in his Friday night party with Al Davis, cut off Brooklyn's Brownsville section, in Madison Square Garden.

For 10 years, Fritzie has been knocking around the game, even making the whistle stops. But the pay days were strictly nothing to call armored car about. Even when he whipped gallant Henry Armstrong some weeks back to take the world welterweight championship, it didn't do much to cure the anemia with which his bank account has been suffering, because he took the challenger's end that night.

But in his first New York showing since putting the crown on his slicked-down blond hair, Pittsburg Fritzie is rolling a seven in the matter of an opponent. Al Davis has been one of the strongest gate attractions in Pa Knickerbocker's bailiwick for a year now. Simply because the cash customers are willing to pay to see "Bummy" get his block knocked off.

He is probably the most cordially disliked fellow in this business of bashing beaks today. Win or lose, the boos he gets, if placed end to end, would still be a lot of noise. And the fact that the fans climb all over themselves to pile into the Garden hoping to see him collect cauliflower, doesn't peeve him, Promoter Mike Jacobs, or, in this case, Fritzie Zivic.

The third member of he colorful DiMaggio family moved into the spotlight of sport a year ago today when San Francisco Seals sold Dominic DiMaggio's contract to Boston Red Sox. Young Dominic, whose contract cost the Sox an estimated $50,000, was one of Boston's leading outfielders last season.

Decoys Worked With Big Fish

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(CP)—Fish decoys used to lure fighting tarpon to the surface of the water may be a development of the future in the real of sports fishing. Although the use of decoys to entice ducks and other wild fowl is a device long familiar to huntsmen, use of a decoy is not so common among fishermen.

Development of the tarpon decoy in experiments which should prove of interest to game fishermen was brought about through investigations by Dr. Arthur Schlaifer, former New York Aquarium scientist, at the Wood Hole, Mass., biological laboratory of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Schlaifer observed that the air-gulping rise of the tarpon is often induced in one fish by the rising of another. He used fish-shaped models. Following the leader like sheep, live tarpon rose to the surface.

Frank Buckland Is Appointed Coach-Manager

R. M. Glover was re-elected president of the Peterborough Hockey Club at the annual meeting of the organization held in the Chamber of Commerce Monday night. The session was notable for the number of players in attendance, including Bun Kingdon, Honey Tompkins, Ray Harding, Eddie Starr, Bill Creighton, Les Burton and Jack Jopling.

The meeting passed a resolution of condolence to the relatives of the late Frankie Collins who services to hockey in Peterborough were eulogized.

Officers Elected

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Honorary presidents—Hugh Campbell, Verne Dawson, E. H. Howson, C. S. Cummer, H. Keefer, C. A. Salmonsen, R. E. Cutting and J. H. Vernor.

President—R. M. Glover.

First Vice-President—Wes Champ.

Second Vice-President — Eddie Starr.

Corresponding Secretary — Fred Scates.

Recording Secretary—'Bun' Kingdon.

Treasurer—Max Glover.

Executive committee—Ed. Riley, Bert McLeod, L. R. Mitchell and F. D. Craig with two players to be added later.

It was unanimously decided, with the motion moved by Honey Tompkins and seconded by Bun Kingdon that Frank Buckland should be appointed manager and coach, combining the two positions. The question of a junior manager and coach was left over until the first meeting of the new executive.

There was considerable discussion over the question of an advertising program and the meeting was unanimously opposed to anything of the kind this season. It was the feeling of the meeting that the club should not sponsor a program itself and that it should not endorse or recommend a similar venture by outside parties.

Appeal for Subscriptions

"After what the team did last year citizens should be glad to make a contribution this season" said Wes Champ when the question of finances was under discussion. It was decided to appeal for subscriptions and this item of business was entrusted to Wes, Champ and Ed. Riley.

President Glover, as a life member of the O.H.A. will attend the annual meeting of that body and it was decided that a couple of players to be selected among themselves should represent the club at this meeting.

An executive meeting will be called in the near future to take up the matter of practising in Oshawa and other business.

CUT FINE FOR ROLLING YOUR OWN

It's queer, but when I was young I never seemed to have time to enjoy anything. Now I can take everything easy—and smoke all I want. I remember how good a pipe of Old Chum used to taste when I was a young fellow—whenever I found time to snatch a smoke. It tastes still better today. That's the wonderful thing about Old Chum—the longer you smoke it the better you like it. And that's why I say, "There is no other tobacco just like Old Chum."

Golden Gophers Add Cornell To Victim List

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP). — Minnesota's Golden Gophers, who don't win by much but don't let that stop them from winning, gained another close decision to-day when they added Cornell to a list of victims that already included Washington, Nebraska, Northwestern and Michigan.

The Gophers ousted Cornell from the lead in the fast-closing race to determine the No. 1 college football team of the United States. After Cornell had been on top for four successive weeks in the Associated Press ranking poll, the tide swung Minnesota's way this week as 55 out of 148 experts from coast to coast put Minnesota at the head of the list and one other split the honors among Minnesota, Cornell and 1939's top team, Texas A. and M.

These three placed in that order—Minnesota first with 1,314 points; Cornell second with 1,260; the Aggies third with 1,202. Fourth place went to Stanford, only other team to poll more than 1,000 points, with 1,066.

The standing (points figured 10-9-8-7-6, etc. basis): 1 Minnesota, 1,314; 2 Cornell 1,260; 3 Texas A. and M. 1,202; 4 Stanford 1,066; 5 Tennessee 698.5; 6 Michigan 585.7; Notre Dame 581.8; Boston College 548.5; 9 Georgetown 352.5; 10 Northwestern 276.

Bruins All Set For Home Bow Against Hawks

(By the Canadian Press.)

The Bruin team that Manager Art Ross has called the best ever to represent Boston in the National Hockey League takes up the fight again tonight after a nine-day layoff.

Bruins last were in action on November 3, when they played a 1-1 overtime draw in Montreal against Canadiens. They make their hometown debut tonight against Chicago Black Hawks, who lost 1-0 to New York Americans in their opening encounter but defeated Canadiens 3-1 last Sunday night.

So far this has been one of the N.H.L.'s best seasons in the matter of predictions by coaches and managers, who seldom are reticent anyhow about the possibilities of their clubs.

Ross doesn't mind saying that Bruins look like a good bet to finish at the top of the standing, and the same goes for Manager Lester Patrick of New York Rangers. Most observers rate the Hawks as likely to finish in fourth place, but not Manager Paul Thompson. He thinks they'll finish third.

Even the usually silent Dick Irwin, the coach of Canadiens, figures that his charges will finish in fourth position, despite the fact that the team is heavily stocked with rookies.

Irvin is particularly intent right now, however, in grooming his charges for their game Thursday night in Montreal against Toronto Maple Leafs, the team he left last season after coaching for a good many years.

Defenceman Alex Singbush may be missing when Canadiens go up against the Leafs, because of a shoulder injury suffered in the game against the Hawks. It was reported last night that Irvin is likely to use Tony Graboski, who starred last season with Sydney Millionaires, in place of Singbush. Graboski did not see action in the first two Montreal games.

Broda and Kerr Two Of The Smartest Net-Minder In The National Hockey League

Two of the smartest goalies in the National Hockey League are Toronto Maple Leafs' Walter "Turk" Broda, LEFT, and New York Rangers' Dave Kerr, RIGHT. Broda is quite frequently known as a "sucker" for the easy one but can bear down on the hard ones in a pinch. All through his career as a net-minder he has had the happy—or unhappy—faculty of making the easy ones look hard and the hard ones look easy. Dave Kerr can be rated just about tops in any man's league and his brilliant work in the net has helped the Rangers out of a tight spot on many occasions.

Kirby Highe Is Purchased By Dodgers

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP).—There was a new note of exuberance tonight in the Brooklyn baseball fans' perennial chant: "Wait until next year." What could stop their Dodgers now, with Kirby Higbe added to a team that finished second in the National League in 1940 and needed only a twenty-game winner to finish first?

Larry Macphail, club president, announced today he has acquired Higbe, a great pitcher with a last-place club, from the Phillies in exchange for Pitchers Vito Tamulis and Bill Crouch and Catcher Thompson Livingston, plus a little matter of $100,000.

"We paid plenty, but it was a 'must' deal from our standpoint," said Macphail. "Our greatest need was a top-flight pitcher—a twenty-game winner—and a young fellow with great stuff who could stand hard work. Higbe was the only fellow who met the specifications. We had to outbid other clubs, but we were successful because we had the money and the players.

"We've been studying Higbe for two years and we don't think he has reached his peak, and he should be good for ten years."

Higbe broke in with Muskogee in the Western Association in 1933, and was with Atlanta, Portsmouth of the Piedmont League, Columbia of the South Atlantic, and Moline of the Three-Eye before going to Chicago Cubs in the fall of 1937.

The Cubs farmed him to Birmingham in 1938. He went back to Chicago in 1939, and on May 29 of that year the Cubs sent him to Philadelphia with Joe Marty and Ray Harrell in exchange for Pitcher Claude Passeau.

He has been a sensation with the last-place Phils. He won twelve and lost fifteen in 1939, and this year he won fourteen and lost nineteen, pitching twenty complete games and leading the league in strikeouts with 137.

Higbe is 26. He is a righthander with great speed and a good curve. In ten of his losing nineteen games this year his opponents scored three runs or less, and eight defeats were by one-run margins.

Tamulis, a southpaw, was acquired by the Dodgers on waivers from St. Louis Browns in May, 1938. He previously had been with the Yankee farm system. His 1940 record was eight victories and five defeats.

Crouch was purchased from Nashville in the fall of 1938. He was with Montreal in 1940, winning fourteen and losing eleven. Livingston was drafted by the Dodgers this fall from Springfield of the Eastern League, where he batted .282.

H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News: "Being the most publicized football player in the country has placed Tom Harmon in an uncomfortable position....He finds himself in the same position Babe Ruth was in several yers ago and that Joe Louis is in to-day....When no long touchdown runs materialize, Harmon's customers are disappointed....The public expected Ruth to hit a homer in every game and it expects Louis to flatten every opponent."

Cattlemen Quilt Big Deer Areas

CONCONULLY, Wash., Nov. 12.—(CP)—One of this Pacific coast state's happy hunting grounds, the Sinlahekin Valley, is a sort of deer haven for the deer while they're still alive.

To oblige the deer, and hunters, too, the state game department is now chasing the ranchers and cattle out to make it still better.

Officially it's the Sinlahekin Deer Refuge. To state game protectors, it's a rich valley of 17,000 acres of rolling, timbered hills, lower lands covered with browse and green, well-watered bottom land, set down between two towering mountain ridges.

It's ideal winter country for deer, driven by cold and the snow-covered ground out of the hills and mountains. Better still, the department hopes it will solve the problem of the annual battle of Farmer vs. Deer.

Each year orchards are destroyed and feed and haystacks raided by deer desperate for food during the long winter months. Even with this "loot" they are underfed and a decimated deer population moves back into the hills each spring. The department expects more deer will move into the valley and leave orchardists and farmers alone, and live well meantime.

Some of the 25 ranchers are already moving out, lock, stock and barrel. New cattle-proof passes will be built at the few passes where cattle or other livestock might wander in.

An estimate puts the valley's winter deer population at 1,000 deer. Game department officials say the number may be greatly increased.

It's such a good hunting area that this fall many men shot their bucks within an hour after daybreak. The hunting season lasts three weeks.

May Succeed Vitt

Charley Gehringer has been offered the managership of Cleveland Indians, according to the latest baseball gossip. Gehringer was considered for the Indians' post three years ago, but lost out when Oscar Vitt was selected. He was also mentioned as manager of the Detroit Tigers when Mickey Cochrane was removed, but was also passed over at that time. The new manager will be announced to-day.

Sailors Trounce St. Kitts 3-1; Dukes Win 5-3

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—(CP)—The two-team senior Ontario Hockey Association leadership was broken last night when Port Colborne Sailors, victorious 3-1 over St. Catharines, vaulted over the idle Hamilton club. It was the Sailor's third in four starts.

Toronto Marlboros also took advantage of Hamilton's open date to take over the second spot, one point up on Dofascos. Marlboros spoiled Oshawa's home opening with a 5-3 decision.

At Port Colborne the Sailors struck victory blows in the second period after a scoreless opening 20 minutes. Thompson, on a neat combination play with Shuttleworth and McKelvie scored at 13:30 mark and four minutes later McLeod stole the puck inside the Saints' defence zone and tallied the second goal.

Roy Heximer reduced the count 10 minutes after the third period opened after a steady offensive. Shuttleworth clinched the game with Port Colborne's third goal two minutes from time.

Eddie Powers' Marlboros ran up 3-0 first-period lead and from that point on held their own against the bottom-placed club although Mortimer in the Toronto nets had many close calls. Ezeard opened the scoring on a pass from Davidson, Kerr flipped a pass to Dunbar for the second counter and King scored the final first-period goal with assists going to Davidson and Imlach.

Covert netted on a pass from Cooper to make it 3-1 on the first Oshawa rush of the second session and Peters made it 3-2 five minutes later on a pass from Edmison. Toronto erased this pair when Shamlock and Imlach scored before the period ended.

Thompson ended scoring at 18:59 of the third period.

Hamilton Boy Shows Class In Smart Fight

TORONTO, Nov. 12 — (CP). — Jackie Callura, hard-hitting young fighter from Hamilton, Ont., is feeling justly proud of himself today after holding Georgie Pace of Cleveland, former world bantam champion to a 10-round draw. He thinks he could beat Pace in another go.

The Pace-Callura battle was featured attraction at a boxing show here last night.

Callura had his opponent down twice in the first round, for counts of three and nine, and Pace, never before knocked off his feet, was wobbly when the round ended. He came back strong during the rest of the fight, however, and earned the draw with his clever infighting.

Callura weighed in at 127 and Pace at 125¾.

Harry Hurst of Montreal, 136, knocked out Lloyd Lasky of Philadelphia, 140, in 59 seconds of the first round of their preliminary bout.

Angelo Callura of Hamilton, 126¾, won a six-round decision over Dusty Brown of New York, 134. Scotty Ramage of Toronto, 120, won another six-round decision over Danny Webb of Montreal, 124. Joey Bagnato of Toronto, 137, won the six-round decision in the semi-final over Mickey La Marr of New York, 135½.

Halifax Cheers Margaree Survivors Home

HALIFAX, Nov. 12—(CP).—Nova Scotians who survived the sinking of the Canadian destroyer Margaree arrived in Halifax last night, their sadness at the loss of their ship and more than 140 shipmates tempered by happy reunions with their families and the prospect of thirty days' leave.

Eight of the nine seamen had lived through the sinking of the H.M.C.S. Fraser off France last June. All of them had plenty of experiences to tell the eager families who met them as they came off the train that carried them from the east coast Canadian port where they landed from Bermuda Sunday night.

For most of them it was their first sight of home in eight months. Steward Gerard McKenny of Halifax summed up their sentiments: "It feels like nothing on earth to be back. We're happy as the devil to be here."

Leading Seamon Harry Leggett of Halifax chuckled as he recounted how he spent last night—his first ashore—in a police station cell. He and another survivor were celebrating their arrival on Canadian soil with an impromptu football game—using a hat for the football—when his companion fell and gashed his head.

It was near an army first-aid post, and a military officer ordered him inside and into bed. Leggett, protesting his friend's incarceration too strenuously, was ordered billeted in jail for the night.

"I sort of liked the idea," he laughed. "It was rather a novel experience spending your first night ashore in the lockup."

Freighter Like Mountain

Leggett was on duty on a searchlight platform when the Margaree was rammed by a freighter in convoy, October 22.

"I didn't hear a thing until the crash," he said. "When I looked around the side of the big freighter looked like a mountain towering over us. Like the others, I grabbed a ladder that was thrown over the side of the freighter and started to climb.

"There was no panic, no yelling," he said. Others of the survivors agreed with him.

Steward Earl Brown received a special welcome from his family, for his name did not appear in the first survivors' list, and his relatives did not know he was safe until some days after the disaster.

Brown, who gave up his bellhop job here to join the navy when war broke out, was in the Fraser sinking. He had to swim for it that time, he said, but he caught a ladder when the Margaree sank.

Steward Gordon Martell of Halifax said he swam one and three-quarter hours in oil-covered water when the Fraser went down. But he had no trouble leaving the other destroyer.

Engine-room Artificer Allan C. Kent of Halifax was greeted by his wife and 2-year-old son Bill, who had learned to walk since his father's last visit home. He, too, was on both ill-fated vessels.

Kent was on duty in the engine-room when the Margaree was struck, but managed to grope his way to the deck.

prisoners taken by British forces in the Atlantic, naval circles said it was impossible to prevent some undersea craft from slipping past Gibraltar because the Strait is 10 miles wide and more than 300 fathoms deep in its deepest part.

Mines cannot be laid deep enough to block the passage completely, it was pointed out.

Naval circles recalled that in the last war British submarines got through the strongly-guarded Dardanelles and into the Sea of Marmora—through a passage only a mile wide.

Marmora Honors Its War Dead

MARMORA, Nov. 12—(ENS). — The Marmora company of the Non-Permanent Active Militia took part with Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion in their observance of Armistice Day.

The first-named unit fell in at the Agricultural Grounds at 10.30 a.m. and, led by the Boys' Bugle Band, proceeded to the Memorial Hall where Legionnaires joined them.

Col. A. Y. Yates, M.C., took charge of the ceremonies. Following the two minutes' silence, a short service was held, with Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell and Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher officiating.

Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell offered prayer and Dr. Fletcher gave a short address, and the assembly joined in the singing of the hymn, "Fight the Good Fight."

Wreaths were placed beneath the tablets by Wilbert Mumby, president of the Legion; Reeve W. R. Linn, and Lieut. W. Dickson. George Brooks sounded the Last Post and Reveille.

Suspension Bridge Blown Away

This photograph was snapped at the actual instant the central span of the new $6,000,000 steel and concrete Narrows suspension bridge at Tacoma hit the waters of Puget Sound. The bridge crumpled under the impact of a southwest gale. And the central section fell more than 300 feet into the sound. Just a few minutes before the bridge collapsed all travel had been halted by state patrolmen as the span swayed more than 30 feet in the wind. One motorist abandoned his car and crawled to safety on his hands and knees, being unable to walk erect against the wind—his car can be seen on the bridge.

Britain's Friend Taken By Death

RENO, Nev., Nov. 12—(AP)—Key Pittman, 68, chairman of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and champion in the United States of the British cause, died in hospital here early today.

The veteran legislator, who might have entered the Senate six years earlier than he did but for his observance of a gentlemen's agreement, suffered a heart attack early Saturday.

Although Senator Pittman was not in vigorous health when he came home to campaign successfully for re-election, it was not until last Saturday, when he failed to appear at a political rally here, that his illness became known publicly.

Monday night—election eve— he was taken to the hospital and his physician, Dr. A. J. Hood, disclosed that he had been in bad health throughout the campaign.

Senator Pittman, first elected to the United States Senate in 1912 for an unexpired term of four years, defeated Samuel Platt, Republican, in last Tuesday's election—his sixth successive victory for that office.

Governor E. P. Carville, expressing deep regret at the Senator's death, said he had given no thought to a successor. Pittman's unexpired terms ends in January.

"Nevada and the nation has suffered a great loss in the death of Senator Pittman," the Governor said. "He had been one of the outstanding Senators of the West for many years and I deeply regret his passing."

The Senator's wife, Minosa Gates Pittman, was at his bedside when death came. His brother, Dail Pittman, Ely, Nev., newspaper publisher was en route here.

Key Pittman, who never ran for any office except that of United States Senator, sought that office in 1906, the year Nevada decided to try the direct primary as an experiment. Prior to that time Nevada Senators had been appointed by the State Legislature.

Pittman, at that time an attorney in Tonopah, made a gentlemen's agreement with his opponent, George Nixon, Republican incumbent, that the man who received the majority of the popular vote should have the Senate seat. Nixon polled 9,729 votes, Pittman 8,624.

Mine Foreman Held On Charge

TWEED, Nov. 12—(ENS).— William Poole, of Cooper, foreman of the Madoc Marble Mine, was arrested on charges of uttering threatening letters on Sunday, with intent to intimidate contrary to section 516 of the Canadian Criminal Code. Poole, who vigorously protested his innocence was arrested by Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond, at the Eldorado Marble Mines, where he was employed by Karl Starkloser, the owner.

Stockloser acquainted Constable Dymond with an anonymous letter he received through the mails recently, the contents of which threatened to blow up the mine of a certain employee was not discharged. It was following a two-day investigation by Constable Dymond that Poole was arrested while at work in the mine on Sunday.

The accused man was lodged in the county jail, being refused bail.

Hurt in Smash.

Ambrose McGonegal of Flower Station, near Tweed, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital early Monday after receiving severe injuries in a motor accident near Tweed shortly after midnight Sunday night. Dr. M. G. Dales of Tweed, took the injured man to Belleville, where Dr. J. J. Robertson announced the extent of injuries sustained were a fractured ankle and leg lacerations.

Orville Richardson, 61, of West Lake, is in critical condition in Prince Edward County hospital, as a result of a car accident. He was pulled from his burning automobile by two truck drivers and taken to the hospital, where he was found to have suffered a punctured lung and several broken ribs.

Salutes Officers.

Molotoff took off his hat every time he passed an officer. Unlike other state receptions, when bands have played the national anthems of visiting diplomats, the band lapsed into silence as soon as Molotoff had finished taking the salute.

There were no flags decorating the streets along which Molotoff was driven to Bellevue castle.

Men and women watched curiously from windows of buildings opposite the station, but there were no shouts.

A crowd was gathered in the square before the Reich's Chancellery, but no cardboard flags were distributed as was the case when the pact between Germany, Italy and Japan was signed here Sept. 27.

Informed sources said the ceremonies to-day were patterned upon those attending Ribbentrop's state visit to Moscow.

At Bellevue castle, Molotoff was welcomed by Dr. Otto Meissner, chief of Hitler's presidential chancellery.

The Russian statesman was accompanied here from Moscow by a staff of 33 experts on foreign affairs, commerce, aviation and industry Also with him was German ambassador to Moscow, Count Friedrich Von Der Schulenberg.

May Change Setup

The possibility of far-reaching decisions affecting Russia's relations with the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo partners was indicated by the Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, frequently the mouthpiece of the German Foreign Office.

This commentary declared close ties between Germany and Russia have "promoted relations between the U.S.S.R. and the friends and allies of Germany."

"All four major Eurasian powers," it said, "are ready today to respect each other's vital interests."

(The Tokyo newspaper Asahi, commenting upon Molotoff's trip, said it was necessary for Germany and Italy to "obtain full Soviet support for the establishment of a new world order." Asahi suggested that "it would be most advisable for Germany and Italy to come to a full political understanding with the Soviet Union, so the latter could not be won to the side of Britain and the Unied States.)

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt stressed German efforts to isolate Britain diplomatically and said Molotoff's visit to Berlin could be viewed as "a heavy blow to the Anglo-Saxon nations."

It suggested that in view of developments the United States should ask herself "whether it isn't a historical necessity to recognize the changing times and act accordingly."

Raiders

Places raided included the London area, southeastern and eastern England and the southwest.

The press, meanwhile, rejoiced over the Royal Air Force's victory yesterday over Italian planes which attacked shipping in the English Channel.

The bannerline in The Daily Express read:—

"Thirteen Italian raiders (made of wood) hurricaned. Ancient Rome's Ancient planes."

One British fighter pilot reported he shot down an Italian bomber, then attacked an Italian fighter. His guns jammed at this point, he said, so he rammed into the Italian's wing, sending the latter down. The R.A.F. pilot landed unhurt.

The Air Ministry's score in yesterday's air fighting was 26 Axis planes—13 Italian and 13 German—against the loss of only two British, both lost in combat with Germans.

During last night's attacks on the London area, doctors and nurses crawled through debris of a printing plant, bombed during the day, to aid trapped men and women.

Remembrance Day Is Challenge To All To Work For Peace

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 12. — (ENS). — Soldiers of B Company, Midland Regiment, joined with other citizens of this town in observing the traditional two minutes' silence at eleven o'clock on Monday morning as more than five hundred stood with bowed head in tribute to the dead of two wars while the cloud-filled sky poured down a deluge of rain. It was a most impressive Remembrance Day service. The parade was led by the Midland Regiment band, and was composed of members of the Legion, Council, Boys' Brigade, Girl Guides, I.O. D.E., and Midland Regiment. All lined up around the Cenotaph for the brief ceremony which included placing of wreaths and lowering and raising of the flags.

On completion of the Cenotaph ceremony the whole assembly paraded to St. Andrew's Church, where Adjutant K. Graham of the Salvation Army, recently transferred to Campbellford from Woodstock, N. B., delivered the principal address. Classifying it as a service for all people, Rev. B. Simpson Black extended a cordial welcome.

For his text Adjutant Graham chose the words "Be at peace among yourselves." He exhorted the congregation to look on the day as a challenge to everyone to work for peace, and recalled that it was only out of sacrifice and suffering that the greatest things in the world grow. "To-day," he continued, "we honor those who made that sacrifice." Adjutant Graham spoke of Britain's cause as the cause of right "and right will eventually triumph."

"Though we want peace and will have peace....it will only be peace with honor.

"We thought a few years ago that wars were over and that peace would prevail, but this was not so, and since it isn't, I urge you to be at peace among yourselves, be at peace among your churches, your various racial groups, your neighbors."

Also assisting in the service was St. Andrew's choir, led by Albert Hazel, and Sergt. F. Castle, who rendered the solo "In Flanders Fields." Rev. G. N. Maxwell and Dr. C. S. Reddick also assisted in the service.

In Those Days They "Took Chances"

WHAT a thrill it was in the old days to watch a skilful telephone lineman spur his way to the top of a "big stick". Sometimes he put on quite a show—regardless of his own safety . . . accidents each year ran as high as 60 per 1000 plant workers.

But those days are gone forever. Carefully planned accident prevention methods have been adopted, "safety first" preached. Today accidents per 1000 have fallen to one-sixth their former figure. Telephone men realize that accidents are costly—to themselves, and to telephone service.

What's more, over 90% of all Bell outside plant workers are skilled in First Aid. Working along our highways, they have been on the spot when many accidents have occurred; their expert ministrations have resulted in saving precious lives.

Records over past years illustrate what can be achieved when workmen are conscious of the need for avoiding unnecessary risk, and of being competent to act wisely when accidents do occur.

MANY INTERESTED

So high is the interest in the special school of instruction at the Prince of Wales Rangers, that one bookstore alone has sold over 50 copies of a military book, "Corporal to field officer." The sum of $38.62 from the sale of rags and papers during the city Salvage Campaign has been turned in by Bert Withers, and 7,000 good magazines taken from the scrap paper collection of the Girl Guides' and Boy Scout Associations last Saturday, will soon be en route to soldiers in Iceland and England. The vacant store at 397 Water street, opposite The Examiner, will remain open all week from four o'clock until five-thirty p.m. for the reception of scrap paper and magazines.

It Pays To Look After Your Health

Keeping your nervous system functioning properly is a great aid to the health of all bodily tissues.

The vital organs are supplied by nerves which leave the spinal cord through openings between segments of the spinal column.

Here constriction may occur and when it does a portion of the nerve energy is shut off from the tissues supplied by those constricted nerves.

This means weakness, disordered function and disease in those tissues.

Spinal manipulative treatments pay good dividends in health, strength and productive energy.

Veterans Honor War Dead At Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 12 — (ENS).—Captain T. Magladery, president of the Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion, was guest speaker at the Lakefield Remembrance Day services in the Memorial Hall. He was introduced by Lt.-Col. Max Sloan, District Commander, who accompanied him from Peterborough.

"My comrades and friends, we have nothing else in mind but to pay tribute to those who have served overseas and here at home. It is a feeling we should all have on Remembrance Day," Capt. Magladery said.

He spoke of the men who left their various occupations to serve and of their vain attempt to obtain work during the years of their return. He hoped that the men who had left in the present war would be used in a different manner on their return.

"Those who gave their lives for their country gave them in the firm belief that their task was done. Our backs are again to the wall, but we are filled with a firm determination and so again we turn to Him Who has never failed us."

The service opened with the Last Post, followed by the two minutes' silence, and Reveille by Sub-Lieut. P. Carr-Harris and Midshipman J Agnew of the Grove School Cadet Corps.

"O God, our Help in ages past" was sung, after which Rev. G. F. Kelly led in the Lord's Prayer Prayer for Our King and Empire was offered by Adjt. Buckley of the Salvation Army. He also gave a short address.

Mrs. Alice Kennedy presided at the piano for the hymns and "O Canada." Rev. W. B. Walker pronounced the benediction.

Present on the platform, other than the speakers, were Chairman Ellis Simpson, J. F. Harvey, J. A. Porter, J. R. Hill.

Following the program wreaths were placed on the Cenotaph by representatives of the following: Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, Senior Women's Institute, Village Council, School Boards, Lodge A.F. and A.M., Oddfellows, Citizens' Band, Firemen, Canadian Legion, Province of Ontario, and by Mrs. T. B. Marling.

In the evening the annual banquet of the ex-service men of Lakefield and district was held in the Lakefield Inn. Thirty-two comrades sat down at the table with President Ellis Simpson as toastmaster for the following program:

The toast to The King, proposed by the chairman; A. H. Clarke proposed the toast to "The British Empire," and was replied to by Magistrate O. A Langley, K.C.; "To Our Fallen Comrades," proposed by Eric Grier; "To the Candian Legion," proposed by Walter Chappell and responded to by J. R. Hill.

Following the banquet the gathering adjourned to the Memorial Hall for entertainment.

Collins' Death Probe Be Held Wednesday

An inquest of the death of Frank Collins who was instantly killed by an Imperial Oil Company tank-car explosion at Belleville Saturday morning was adjourned until Wednesday evening. Fire Chief Williams said the cause of the explosion could not be determined. It occurred a moment after Collins had removed the dome from the top of the tank-car. After the preliminary investigation the car was sealed and sent to the headquarters of the company in Toronto where a search for potential causes of the blast will be made by experts.

No clues were found by Fire Marshall McCaskey, Toronto, and company engineers in their examination Saturday afternoon and Sunday. Belleville electricians were also reported that no "shorts" or other causes from which electricity could be blamed were evident.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, November 13

JUDGING BY the lunar transits of this day it may prove more lucrative and happy to "go it alone" rather than to cast your lot with any sort of groups, organizations or "collective bargaining" ideas. Such are under rule of a destructive rather than productive vibration, and in this disruptive direction there may be some rather ruthless, drastic and uncomfortable activities. Nevertheless, joining with the "upper brackets" may advance the financial status as well as enhance position, prestige and pleasure.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which their best interests may be promoted by working in cooperation with "higher ups," with those of financial, business and social standing, rather than joining forces with groups, whether political, diplomatic, fraternal, or for collective ideas of social service. These latter are under expansive, productive, generous and pleasant auspices—ambitious, fruitful and promising for business as well as personal objectives.

A child born on this day may be expected to be easy-going, pleasure-loving, generous and kindly, making its happiest success in connection with kindred souls rather than uniting with others for uplift and social progress.

Orphan Before Birth

HALIFAX, Nov. 12—(CP)—A boy born in Halifax will never see his father, Gilbert Gordon, one of the 10 Halifax men lost with the minesweeper Gras d'Or. The baby was born Nov. 1, three days after the mother, the former Cecelia McNeil of Iona, a Cape Breton village, received the news that her husband was missing and believed drowned.

Inspectors Hold Conference At Normal School

An important and interesting regional conference of inspectors was held at the Normal School on Saturday. The Department of Education was represented by V. K. Greer, Chief Inspector of Public and Separate Schools; Dr. J. B. MacDougall, Assistant Chief Inspector; Dr. C. E. Stothers, Director of Auxiliary Classes; R. Fenwick, Director of Music, and Mr. Keefe, Chief Attendance Officer.

Among the inspectors were Messrs. Copp and Downey of Peterborough County; Mr. Wightman of Peterborough City; Mr. Stouffer of Minden; Mr. Lees of Lindsay; Mr. Devell of Bancroft; Mr. Martin of Brighton; Mr. Brown of Picton; Mr. Birkin of Napanee; Mr. Pickering of Belleville; Mr. McGuire of Tweed; Mr. Thompson of Sharbot Lake, and Mr. Hayden of Toronto, whose inspectorate includes the Separate Schools of Peterborough and its vicinity. A pleasing feature of the gathering was the presence of three former inspectors, now retired, Mr. A. Mowat of Peterborough; Colonel Snider of Port Hope, and Colonel Odell of Cobourg.

On the invitations of the inspectors, and to promote the close cooperation between them and the Normal School which has always been a strong feature in this area, Dr. J. A. Bannister, principal; Dr. A. J. Madill and Mr. M. Park of the Normal School Staff were also present

Two busy and profitable sessions were held. The representatives of the Department of Education presented various phases of educational work which were discussed freely. Problems of inspection and administration were considered, and developments in the methods of teaching Science and Social Studies were presented by Dr. Madill and Mr. Park.

Mr. Downey, as president of the inspectoral group, which arranges for local meetings for discussion, expressed the thanks of the inspectors to the departmental officials for their hearty co-operation, and from the helpful and inspirational messages and addresses they had brought.

Rambling Reporters

PRAYERS

In the spirit of Remembrance Day, a little Peterborough girl, Diane Copping who is only six years old summed up in only nine words what is in the hearts of millions.

Diane was spending the night at the home of her grandfather, Gray Copping, and before she went to bed she knelt down to say her prayers. She began with her dog, Tony, and asked God to bless all of her family, and a few friends. Finally the little head turned to world affairs and she said,

"Please God, stop the war, and kill Hitler—tonight."—JWH.

FAST SERVICE

A lady on Weller street and her maid both forgot that yesterday was Remembrance Day. They were coasting along with preparations for dinner when suddenly the whistles started to blow. Immediately all was confusion, the roast was taken out of the oven, a can of peas were opened post haste and the maid almost tossed the dishes on to the dining room table. They had done about 30 minutes work in the short two minutes when the whistles blew again, marking the end of the two minutes of silence.... Then it dawned on them....dinner time was still an hour away.—McG.

Canada To Fill All British Timber Needs

OTTAWA, Nov. 12—(CP).—Canadian forests now supply almost all of Britain's timber requirements, Munitions Minister Howe said today.

In a statement, Mr. Howe said purchases in Canada by the British Timber Controller will amount to about $45,000,000 this year. The British orders include airplane spruce, birch logs for making aircraft plywood, box shooks, pit props, and lumber for general repair and building purposes.

About 75 per cent. of Great Britain's pre-war requirements were supplied from the Baltic countries, France and the Danube Valley. With these sources cut off by war and with purchases from the United States limited by need for conserving foreign exchange, Britain now was largely dependent on Canada.

H. R. MacMillan of Vancouver, Timber Controller for the Department of Munitions and Supply, had taken extensive measures to assist the British Controller in obtaining supplies, and also to conserve and regulate wood products needed in Canada's own war effort. For instance, the Controller purchased the 200,000,000 feet of dry lumber required for the entire Canadian Government building program, before the program was announced, thus avoiding competitive purchasing by the contractors and consequent increased prices.

Some Savings Made.

Motor manufacturers had been shipping trucks to England, each encased in 1,500 feet of Alberta and Manitoba spruce, readily saleable in the United States. A new type of crate was developed which would save $1,135,000 in the cost of crates required during the next few months and would also release 37,500,000 feet of spruce for sale in the United States for about $1,250,000 in American funds.

Mr. Howe said the Timber Controller also had taken steps to reduce importation of lumber for purposes which could be served economically and acceptably by Canadian lumber, and there had been many instances in which wood had been substituted for steel in construction, with a consequent saving of U.S. funds.

New Responsibilities Face Legion Veterans Of Last War Are Warned

Veterans of the Great War gathered in the Legion Hall Monday night at the annual Remembrance Day dinner, to honor memories of friends lost in battles years ago. The speaker of the evening was Capt. Tom Magladery, president of the Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion, and former M.P.P. Lt.-Col. Max Sloan introduced the speaker, whom he called the "Dynamo of the North," for Capt. Magladery's home is in New Liskeard.

The speaker told of the organization of the Legion in peacetime. It had accepted certain responsibilities, and, now with another war in progress, the Legion has taken onto its shoulders other duties, in connection with the men who are fighting in this war. The work of the Legion before the war must not be neglected, Capt. Magladery said, and the organization must do both jobs.

That these responsibilities of the new war are ones of considerable proportion, was brought out when the speaker told of the large number of men of the new army who have already been discharged because of physical unfitness or for some other reason, and they have, to a great extent, become the responsibility of the Legion.

The speaker pointed to the accomplishments of the Legion, and contended that no other large association had done so much for the returned man. Such legislation during the last 20 years that has been favorable to the returned man, he declared, was largely due to the efforts of the Legion.

Get Better Chance.

The Legion has resolved to give the men returning from this war a better chance than the members of the Legion had at the conclusion of the Great War. It is endeavoring to attend to the needs of the veterans of the present war, and also of the widows and children of those who have already died in the service.

Few of the members of the Legion, Capt. Magladery said, are able to serve in the C.A.S.F., and the Legion supplies an excellent outlet for the patriotic feeling and desires of these men. Make the Legion strong, he said, and "make it an added arm of the Empire."

Captain Magladery referred to his personal politics. He said, "I am a Conservative, but, thank God I'm British first," and said that the Legion would support any governmental motion designed to beat Hitler.

In referring to the War Service Bureau of the Legion, he called it the baby of the Legion.

The speaker confidently referred to the certainty of an ultimate British victory, and said he had faith that the young men of today will drive the Hun back and to his knees, just as did the soldier fighting for Britain in the last war. With a tribute to Winston Churchill and his strength, the speaker said England and the Empire will again restore right to the smaller nations, and never will she allow the Union Jack to occupy any other than the position that it deserves.

Fire Chief George Gimblett, president of the Peterborough branch of the Legion, spoke briefly on Poppy Day. He explained that the popples and the wreaths are made in Christie Street Hospital, by disable veterans. The receipts this year have exceeded $1,500, and Chief Gimblett expressed gratification at the response given the venture. The sale of the poppies and wreaths, and some of the proceeds from the sale of Canadian Legion cigarettes goes toward the support of the veterans of the Great War.

Mel Morrow, the president of Peterborough's Red Patch Club, spoke briefly to the members, and thanked the Legion, on behalf of the Red Patch Club, for past favors, and said that the two organizations have a great deal in common, and that in many ways are as one.

The officer commanding the E Ontario Squadron of the Frontiersmen, Capt. Preston, spoke a few words. He said he and the local president, Fire Chief Gimblett, had served overseas in the same unit, and spoke highly of Chief Gimblett's ability as a soldier, a leader and a worker.

A $94 Lump

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Nov. 12 — (AP).—Wilbur Wells lost a lot of sleep for three nights, then complained to his wife a "hard lump" in his pillow was the cause of it all. The "lump," Mrs. Wells discovered, was $94 in bills placed there by her mother 38 years ago.

Jack Chamberlain Joins Toronto Scottish When He Finds His Old Home Been Bombed

Jack Chamberlain, red-headed boxer and former employee of the Canadian General Electric Company has joined the Toronto Scottish.

The war came too close to home, for Jack's peace of mind and when he received a letter from his mother in London, England, he lost little time in getting into uniform.

Jack had been working at the John Inglis Company in Toronto, one of Canada's vital war-time industries. In the letter from England he learned that a raiding Nazi bomber had unloaded a stick of high explosive bombs on his parental home in the heart of Old London. Fortunately the family was safe in an air raid shelter. Now his mother who is 58 years of age is driving an ambulance and wearing the uniform of a women's auxiliary war unit. His brother is still in an English hospital slowly recovering from wounds received in the battle of Dunkirk where he was almost crippled by shrapnel.

And so to young Jack, safe in Canada, it was too much, he was needed by his family to help stem the Hun tide, and the John Inglis people while sorry to see him go, sent along a recommendation that made it easy for him to join the Scottish. He is married.

License Plates On Sale Starting Today

Car owners can purchase their 1941 car markers at the Chamber of Commerce today, and must have them before January 1st if the car is in use.

The sale was ordered a month and a half before the 1940 permits expire not only as a convenience for the ordinary purchasers of motor equipment, but also for that of firms using huge fleets of trucks in the transportation war materials. Purchases must coincide with the calendar year. The new markers have green letters on a white background.

A regulation has been introduced this year which prevents car purchasers and dealers from saving the one dollar transfer fee.

For instance under the old system, if a man bought a used car from a dealer in the fall months he could go to the Chamber of Commerce and get the new markers, thus neither the purchaser nor the leader would have to pay the one dollar transfer fee.

Renewal of motor vehicle and trailer permits and plates may only be issued now on presentation of the previous registration permit and in the same name as shown on such permit. It will be necessary for an applicant who has lost or destroyed his previous registration permit to secure a duplicate by completing form A-17 and forwarding same to head office together with the fee of fifty cents. If a change of ownership of the vehicle has occurred, the applicant must secure a transfer in the usual manner before applying for the registration for the current year.

Sixty-Five Gale Flattens Trees, Buildings

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—(CP)—Canada took time today to stand beside her neighbor United States and survey widespread destruction caused by Remembrance Day storms which raged up through the southern and middle western states and drove into the heart of Ontario.

Although damage in Canada was reckoned in tens of thousands of dollars in preliminary estimates, there were no casualties reported.

Canada did not feel the full force of the storms which lashed the United States but wind at velocities as high as 60 and 70 miles an hour disrupted power and communication lines, tore trees from the ground and caused widespread damage to buildings and shipping.

The high winds came after the nation had observed Remembrance Day in a wide variety of weather conditions. Fair weather and relatively cool weather prevailed on the Pacific Coast and in the mountains. Alberta had clear, crisp sub-zero weather and the thermometers in Saskatchewan ranged around zero with softly-falling snow in some sections and little wind.

Blizzard Clogs Roads

Manitoba early in the day shared some of the high winds and snow which swept the northern states and a blinding blizzard clogged highways and damaged lines in southern areas of the province.

Temperatures in Northwestern Ontario generally remained above the freezing point but rain and snow turned to sleet over a large area. Ice-coated communication lines proved easy victims to high winds and with the snapping of wires communications between Central and Western Canada were disrupted for several hours.

Early in the day heavy rains and overcast skies completed the weather map from Ontario through Quebec to the Maritime provinces.

Later, when the fury of the southern storm struck, gales raged over the entire Great Lakes area as far east as the Upper St. Lawrence Valley but no severe storms were reported in the Maritimes and Quebec.

Western Ontario received the main storm blasts with damage centred in the London district. Trees were blown down, stroe fronts crashed in, tree branches snapped off and went ripping through power and telegraph lines.

On the Great Lakes only the largest vessels put out from port in the face of the storm. For the most part shipping was storm-bound and little damage was reported. In Port Stanley, near St. Thomas, Ont., a scow broke loose and damaged three fishing tugs before it was safely tethered again.

Police were called out in Kitchener, Ont. to form a cordon about a danger point when steel sheets torn by the gale from buildings of an industrial plant cut high tension power wires.

At the new Port Albert Navigators' school at Goderich, Ont., roofing was torn from newly-constructed hangars but damage was not high according to reports.

Lake Skipper Dies

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12 — (AP) — Capt. Thomas E. Murray, 83, who had served as master of nearly all the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company lake ships, died Monday at his home here. He retired in 1932, he also was captain of the steamship May-Eppa, Lakeside, Garden City and Columbian and for two years he was a St. Lawrence river pilot.

Mayor Elected For 1941 Remains In '42

The mayor-elect of Peterborough on January 1 may remain in office two years according to the Local Government Extension Act passed by the Ontario Legislature last February.

One of the clauses of that statute affirms that every member of a municipal council in office on the 1st day of February, 1941, and elected or appointed to office for the term of one year or part thereof, shall continue in office for the further term of one year and until his successor is elected or appointed and the new council is organized.

This change is restricted locally to the office of mayor for the reason that this election is held annually and only for one year. Legal opinion intimates that whoever is elected mayor of Peterborough in January is permitted to retain the position until the end of 1942.

Peterborough's municipal system departs from the annual feature in its election of five aldermen for two years, one member of the Utilities Commission for three years, and for the Board of Education five trustees are elected in one year and four in the next, alternatively, and for two-year terms. Application of the new Act would conflict with this plan, and on that account it is held that the war-time legislation applies only to the election of mayor, and will come into effect with the 1941 incumbent.

Apparently the township councils elected in January will be chosen for two years unless the ratepayers vote against that change of the customary annual plan.

Clause 7 of the Act is as follows: "The municipal council may, on the polling day for the election of members of such council for the year 1941, submit to a vote of the municipal electors the following question:

Are you in favor as a war-time measure under the Local Government Extension Act, 1940, of the municipal council elected for 1941 holding office for the term of two years?

or if a petition signed by at least five per centum or 5,000 of the total number of persons whose names appear on the last certified voters' list for use at municipal elections, requesting the council to submit such question, is filed with the clerk not later than five weeks before such polling day, the council shall submit such question to a vote as aforesaid.

eighth floor, Drexel building. Ask for Mr. Sanders."

Funny, she found herself thinking, that such a worn, dirty, discarded thing could give her so much hope. She had read countless business addresses printed neatly in the want ads and they had never meant anything but just—more refusals. But this! An almost illegible scrawl—Jim was a terrible writer, she observed—and it meant new life! . . . or did it?

A host of doubts assailed her as she stepped, finally, from the elevator and saw across a darkened corridor the gold-lettered "WESTERN REALITIES," of which she had dreamed last night in her sleep. Suppose Jim had misunderstood the message from the agency. Suppose this were only a try-out and there would be four or five or a dozen others here to compete. Suppose this Sanders turned out to be another Hardy. Or—what really worried her most—suppose Hardy had made good his threat of a black-list and she would be turned away again. "No, no!" she kept telling herself, reassuringly. "He couldn't do that. I'm crazy to be afraid."

But it took all her courage to fling open the frosted door and step inside. To the sandy-haired office boy who bobbed up at her entrance she proffered her hesitant request to see Mr. Sanders with a grateful glance at the empty room. She was, so far as she could see, the only applicant. That fear, at least, was groundless. She squared her shoulders as the office boy motioned her toward the inner office and went forward steadily to meet whatever was in store for her.

him from a little hoodlum into a little gentleman. And you will get from her will be reproaches for your harshness to a poor little fatherless child, and bitter words that you will find hard to forgive when your purpose is so good.

Even at its best it is hard to amalgamate two sets of children and only a hopeless optimist would try it. In this case, where your boys are so different in every way from the spoiled brat you are proposing as a stepbrother to them, it is an impossible thing to do. They will fight continually, and their respective parents will spend their time also fighting in trying to stand between them.

My earnest advice to you is not to marry this woman. It will bring you nothing but misery and regret. If she has all the virtues and the charms of combined femininity, they would be offset by the brat of a boy.

PRETENDING LOVE IS BAD BUSINESS

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have a son who is just about to marry a girl whom he does not love. She is a very fine girl, and I would gladly welcome her as a daughter were he marrying her because he loves her, instead of marrying her because she is in love with him and he thinks it is the right thing for him to do.

He is within the draft age and if he marries and then has to be away for awhile he may get an entirely different outlook on the situation and see how foolish and quixotic he has been, and there will be two young people's lives just ruined. I am a distraught mother and do not know what to say to stop my son from committing this folly.

A MOTHER.

ANSWER—Probably there is nothing that any one could say that would stop him, because he has the idea in his head that he is being noble, and he is having such a fine time admiring himself for making this heroic sacrifice to save the happiness of a poor, weak girl that he does not realize that instead of doing her a kindness he is doing her the greatest wrong that a man can do a woman.

In the old romantic days it may have been thought chivalrous for a man to marry a girl out of pity, or from a sense of duty, or for accommodation when she flung her heart at his head. But nowadays we simply consider it idiotic and think that the mushy youth should be incarcerated in a nice padded cell until he can get a grip on his commonsense and see that when a man marries a woman he doesn't love she is the martyr, not he.

Because no man can be a good husband unless he loves his wife, unless he married her because he cared so much for her that he thought he couldn't live without her.

It takes a lot of affection to make a man put up with all of any woman's peculiarities and adjust himself to her ways, and unless he can see Mary through rose-colored glasses that make her funny little ways adorable just because they are hers, she gets on his nerves and turns him into one of the sour, disgruntled husbands who are hard to live with.

Furthermore, no man can put on an act about pretending to love a wife he doesn't love without her knowing it, and of all humiliated women none has her pride so dragged in the dust as the woman who knows she was married for pity instead of love. Of all unhappy women none is so unhappy as the one who is starving for the love her husband cannot give her.

DON'T WRECK ANOTHER'S HOME

Dear Miss Dix—I have been a personal secretary for the last 15 years to a very fine gentleman. He wants to divorce his wife and marry me and I don't know what to do, as I don't feel that I could be happy with him, knowing that I have taken him away from his family. What shall I do? J. M. D.

ANSWER—You know very well what to do. Get another job and tell your philandering employer to go back to his duty. Don't have a hand in wrecking another woman's home. DOROTHY DIX.

Not All Arctic

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—(CP)—Mrs. A. M. Oliver, wife of a Manchester, England, university professor, said at a welfare meeting yesterday that before coming to this country her "whole picture of Canada was very much like a map of the Arctic before it was properly discovered." She urged Canadians who have British evacuee children in their homes to send the children's parents postcards, snapshots or anything depicting Canadian life to show the children are living in a civilized atmosphere and not a barren wilderness.

Peckinpaugh Chosen To Manage Indians

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12—(AP). Roger Peckinpaugh has been chosen manager of Cleveland Indians of the American Baseball League, it was announced today.

In taking the job Peckinpaugh becomes a baseball rarity—twice manager of the same major league club. His previous tenure, started in 1928, ended with his discharge in midseason 1933.

"Peck," who is 49 and was once a star shortstop, succeeds Oscar Vitt, released after he led the rebellious tribe into second place this year.

Ava Bradley, the club president who fired Peckinpaugh seven years ago, announced Peckinpaugh signed a two-year contract.

Good Dancers Practice—Learn Steps at Home

Diagrams Show How to Tango

The good dancers — the girls who never lack partners, the men who never hear excuses like "I'm tired, let's sit this one out" — how do they dance so ravishingly?

There's no mystery. To shine in the tango and other smart dances, you must really know your steps. Learn them at home from diagrams, expert pointers on leading, following, posture. Then you'll never be one of the stumblers, the blunderers good dancers avoid.

You can easily learn a dance in one evening, with diagrams such as the one given for the Tango Three-Step. Try it, remembering that in the tango you step crisply, definitely lifting your feet.

No hesitations, no tangled feet, if the man gives the lead with a firm pressure of his right arm, if the girl knows she should step a split second after him.

Brush up on all the popular dances. Our 32-page booklet diagrams basic steps and variations of the waltz, fox-trot, Westchester, rumba, Conga, tango and shag. Gives pointers on smooth leading and following, graceful posture.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SEE THE LITTLE CARDS

IN THE DAYS of Whist it was a great saying that a fine game depended on the use made of the little cards, that "the big ones take care of themselves." In contract this is equally true. There is not such a great difference in the way players use the big fellows, but a tremendous one in their employment of the spot cards.

Louis J. Haddad, great Chicago player, admits he bid his hand in somewhat unorthodox fashion, but he played it in a way which would delight the cockles of an old Whist expert's heart. After West led the diamond Q and he studied the dummy, he saw that his chance might lie solely in the fact that dummy had the heart 8, which was higher than his 7, as otherwise he might not have had a good way to get into the dummy.

After winning the diamond lead, he cashed his two top spades and led the heart 10. This perfect play assured success. If West played the J, dummy would play the Q. If East did not cover that, he would be in dummy to cash the spade Q and try the club finesse; if East did cover, the heart 8 would be set up for an entry. Actually, West refused to cover, so the heart 5 was played from dummy. If East took this, the Q would be set up. So he ducked to make it tough. Mr. Haddad then led the 9, prepared to cover in dummy if West played the J, but he did not, so dummy's 8 was put on.

It is plain that if East covered now, the contract would be made; if he ducked, his heart K could be dropped and Mr. Haddad could afford the loss of a club trick. It was nice work.

Several families in this city can boast of more than one son in the army, but Mr. and Mrs. G. Pakenham, 737 Water Street, has three sons now wearing the battle dress of the Canadian forces. Mel Pakenham was the first to enlist. He joined the Hastings-Prince Edward unit and was well known here as an amateur boxer. Ivor Pakenham, formerly with the C.G.E., then joined the same unit. Norwegians Open Training Base In Ontario

TORONTO, Nov. 12. — Camp "Little Norway" was opened officially here yesterday when the flags of the Royal Canadian Air Force and Norway fluttered to the tops of separate masts before high-ranking officers of the R.C.A.F. and the Royal Norwegian Army and Naval Air Forces.

Hoisting of the colors symbolized the completion of the training centre behind Maple Leaf Stadium where several hundred Norwegian fliers will prepare for the day when the return to England to combat the invaders of their country.

Following an inspection by Gen. W. Steffens, commanding officer of the Norwegian forces in Canada, and a short address by General Steffens, the flag of the R.C.A.F. was hoisted as their band played "O Canada."

A minute later, while the Norwegian national song was played, the flag of Norway, dark blue cross superimposed on white against a red background, broke out at the top of a nearby mast. It marked the establishment in the New World of an outpost of an Old World democracy, a democracy that had been beaten but not broken.

General Steffens summed it up in his speech: "These two banners form the symbol of the friendship between Canada and Norway, a symbol of the ties which bind us together in the work for our common good. The Norwegian flag represents the creation of a little Norway, a tiny part of our beloved country, saluting the free, untainted flag of Norway."

Air Vice-Marshal Lloyd S. Breadner and Air Commodore G. E. Brookes, represented the R.C.A.F. while, besides General Steffens and the several hundred officers and men, Norway was represented by Major Bjarne Oen, head of the Army Air Force, Capt. H. Riiser-Larsen, commander of the Naval Air Unit, and Consul Carl J. Printz.

Commodore Brookes replied briefly to General Steffens after the officers commanding had added their expressions of gratitude to the Canadian people to those of General Steffens.

While planes of the Norwegian command dipped in salute above, the ceremony closed with the band playing the Canadian and Norwegian National Anthems, and a prayer in Norwegian by the camp padre Rev. B. Overland.

In his speech General Steffens told of the brutal invasion of his country by the Germans after the Nazis had given the most solemn assurances that Norwegians had no cause for anxiety.

"We Norwegians who are present have no more our homes....our dear ones whom we left behind us in Norway live under tyrants. But we stand here to-day resolved to play our part in liberating Norway, and we know that this will happen.

"But until victory is achieved, and we again can return to our own country, our own homes and our dear ones, all our strength must be directed against breaking the chains of Nazi enslavement and restoring freedom to the world once more."

Bethany Red Cross Holds Party

BETHANY, Nov. 12—(ENS)—Mrs. J. J. Hunter was hostess for a Red Cross bridge and euchre party on Tuesday evening, Nov. 5th. Funds totalled $11.25.

At 8 o'clock the large living room and dining room were completely filled and eight tables of bridge and two for euchre were kept happily entertained until ten o'clock with keen contestants.

At the conclusion of the bridge and euchre games a contest numbering twenty questions had also been arranged by the genial hostess. Words containing the word 'cat' puzzled the guests for another ten minutes.

Prizes were awarded to the following guests, viz., High score for bridge Miss Laura Morton was the lucky lady. Highest number for contest won by Mrs. Roy Jarvis. High score for euchre games was won by Miss Helen Stark.

Lucky card for bridge claimed by Mrs. Jerry Staples. Others who secured equally nice souvenirs were Mrs. W. L. Rowan, Mrs. Morgan Bigelow, Mrs. Padghrain and Mrs. G. Foster.

A bevy of young ladies cleared spaces for the circle of guests and served delightful and very dainty refreshments.

Mrs. Hamilton in well chosen words thanked her guests for the splendid response for the Red Cross cause, and made a thrilling appeal that those of homes available and suitable in dimensions, might during the winter meet once a month and combine socially, with others helping with arrangements, with smaller dwellings and turn the social evening at this particular time to help in this extreme struggle and sorrowing in the old land. The appeal met with general approval by those ladies present.

Mrs. Albert Johnston of Victoria, was the guest of Mrs. Richard Johnston and Harry this week.

Mrs. Jas. Turnbull and son Jimmy of Monaghan Road, were guests of Mrs. Turnbull's mother, Mrs. H. H. Ryley and Mr. A. B. Ryley this week.

Few Weeks On Syntona Made Big Difference In This Lady

No Longer Suffers With Stomach Pains, Acid Indigestion, Gas, Dizzy Spells and Sick Headaches. Couldn't Sleep; Felt Nervous and Rundown.

MRS. ERIE COSBY

All around us are grateful men and women who have used Syntona and found it to be just what they needed to put new energy in their rundown system and to relieve common ailments of the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. Syntona produces these results by cleansing the system of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and by promoting assimilation of food to build strong, healthy nerves and sound bodies. The following report of Mrs. Erie Cosby, Smithville, Ontario, is a typical example:

"Three or four years ago my stomach started giving me trouble and, although I used many diferent medicines, I kept getting worse until almost everything I ate would sour in my stomach and cause gas and cramps. My stomach got sore and painful and for weeks at a time I was hardly able to eat or sleep. I was subject to spells of dizziness and sick headaches. My nerves were bad and I felt tired out and rundown.

"I kept reading about Syntona and finally decided to try it and it has helped me wonderfully. Now I have a keen appetite and I can eat what I like without any stomach distress afterwards. All that gas and indigestion is gone. I can sleep soundly once more and I feel rested and better able to do my work. My nerves are better and I am free of those sick headaches."

Let this grand herbal tonic help you, as it has hundreds of other local men and women. Syntona is pleasant to take and it contains no harmful drugs or depressors.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Liner Reaches Canada Safely After Fighting Off U-Boat

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, Nov. 12 — (CP). — Hitler's prowling surface raider remained aloof, but two other units of the German war machine made it a dangerous Atlantic crossing for a 6,000-ton British vessel that made port here yesterday.

Not once, passengers said, did they see the pocket battleship which, allegedly, has been terrorizing Atlantic shipping. But, in a zigzagging voyage of two weeks, they came safely through a diving raid by a Nazi bomber and were saved from a submarine attack by the "superb" efficiency of the officers and crew.

They had been at sea about a day and a half when the bomber swooped down on their convoy. Their ship escaped unscathed, but two others were less fortunate.

A bomb severely damaged the fore part of one vessel and she turned back. The passengers said she made port in England safely. Crewmen conquered a fire aboard the other and she defiantly continued on her way.

Purser a Hero.

About five days out a storm blew up, their ship wandered from the convoy and the submarine put in an appearance. The seas were snarling and dusk was falling when a warning came from the lookout.

From then on, one passenger related, the officers demonstrated "perfect British discipline and seamanship."

The purser, a "hero," crisply took charge of the passengers, who had been sleeping in their clothes for days. Revolver in hand, he bluntly warned that any man trying to scramble into the lifeboats before a woman or child would be shot.

None did. Without a sign of panic, they took up positions along the rails and awaited developments.

Aft, crewmen quickly stripped the gun for action. The alarm had come in the nick of time. The U-boat was in perfect position for a shot and was slowly emerging for just that purpose.

Even as she was breaking surface, about 1,500 yards away, a shot rang out from the ship. Three others followed in quick succession, bursting near the undersea craft but failing to sink her.

Then, as the delighted gunners congratulated themselves, the sub vanished into the depths without firing a single torpedo. She never bothered them again.

Not In Danger Again.

Although she failed to make contact again with her convoy, the British craft finished out her voyage without further signs of danger.

To Joseph Williams, a Montreal engineer, this was an "ordinary" trip. He has crossed the Atlantic six times since the war broke out, has been fired on "times out of number" by U-boats, but has yet to be on a ship that went down. This wasn't his first experience with a bomber, either, but he admits they are "less frequent visitors than the subs."

Williams and two English youths left ship here, but the other 140-odd passengers will continue on to Boston. Majority of them are Jewish refugees from the European Continent, but there are a few English women and children.

Leaving the ship here were John Parry Evans of Liverpool, who will go to St. Thomas, Ont., for the rest of the war, and J. E. Dart, who will be the guest of his grandmother, Mrs. F. H. Dart of Halifax.

2,000 Greeks Routed 20,000 Of Italy's Finest Mountaineer Troops

MAX HARRELSON, ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER, GETS FIRST-HAND STORY OF GREAT BATTLE IN THE PINDUS MOUNTAINS FROM 37-YEAR-OLD CAPTAIN WHO WAS WOUNDED IN FIGHT.

ATHENS, Nov. 14—(AP). — Some 20,000 of Italy's finest mountaineer troops who marched gaily into Greece on October 28 were cut to pieces and routed by a comparative handful of 2,000 Greeks in an eight-day battle which began on the 30th, a wounded Greek captain declared today.

The captain, 37-year-old Panos Kyriakou, propped up in a hospital bed to tell his homeric tale, said his men toiled 54 miles through the Pindus Mountains in a continual downpour of rain for two days to make victorious contact with the invaders.

The Italians were caught flat-footed, he said, and from that moment the story was one of deadly Greek bayonet charges up craggy slopes, of close-quarter combats with rifles and machine-guns in ravines and passes, and of a panicky Italian retreat. On November 6, Greek reinforcements took over the job and the weary 2,000 got a rest.

"The encounter took place on October 30 in the early morning on Mount Goumari, a peak 5,900 feet high, west of Mounta Smolika and six kilometres (about 3¾ miles) northeast of the town of Samarini.

"The Italian forces consisted of the Third Alpine Division, two battalions of Bersaglieri, two battalions of Grenadiers, and two independent companies, supported by mountain artillery, 10 howitzers, 12

Give Molotoff Taste Of Air Raid

Smash Berlin Points In Dirty Weather As Red Chief Leaves

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(CP).—From hard-hit Taranto, at the tip of Italy, to Berlin, the Royal Air Force's bombers struck last night, pressing home the offensive which has crippled half of Mussolini's battleships and given the Empire's combined sea-air power prestige throughout the world.

At Taranto, where three battleships and four other warcraft of Italy's hoared battle fleet were reportel crippled by naval torpedo lanes flying in from aircraft carriers Monday night, planes of the R.A.F. bomber command followed up. The Ministry of Information said that they successfully attacked both harbor and docks, and that all returned to their bases (perhaps Malta or Crete).

In Berlin, British bombs burst in answer to Hitler's newest stroke of diplomacy. They gave Russia's Premier Molotoff his first taste of what an air raid is like. The Air Ministry said that the raiders bombed a railway station, freight yards and other objectives in mid-Berlin, despite miserable flying weather.

There was evidence, too, of aggressive British preparation for defence of Far Eastern bases and possessions.

An air marshal, Sir Robert Brooke Popham, was made commander-in-chief of the Far East with headquarters in Singapore and it was discosed that reinforcements had reached British bastions in the Orient.

3 Aircraft Carriers There.

Something of the nature of the Monday night raid on Taranto was disclosed last night by the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, when he paid tribute to the forces involved—including the captains of the aircraft carriers Eagle and Illustrious.

That meant that planes from at least three British aircraft carriers now are operating against Southern Italy. For the Ark Royal has been named in accounts of the bombing of other objectives.

The aircraft carriers Courageous and Glorious were sunk earlier in the war, and the action against Southern Italy is the first known instance of the use of this type of warship in a major action since the Norwegian campaign. The Glorious was sunk off Norway; the Courageous in the wetsern part of the English Channel.

Mr. Alexander singled out for special tribute Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean fleet; Rear-Admiral Arthur Lyster, head of the fleet air arm, and Captains Bridge and Boyd of the Eagle and Illustrious respectively.

Ironically, Capt. Lyster was appointed a cavalier of the Italian Order of the Crown for services in the first Great War. He commanded the Glorious before she was lost off Norway.

Major Retreat Looms On Greek Front With Sea Lines Cut

ATHENS, Nov. 14 — (AP).—The Italians were reported to-day to be withdrawing large numbers of troops from the Yugoslav frontier, and speeding them to Southern Albania in an attempt to halt the Greek advance in that sector.

The shift in the Italian troops was regarded as an indication not only that the Italians are on the defensive, but that the British and Greek air attacks on the Italian naval base at Taranto and other Italian and Albanian bases had held up the transport of reinforcements from the Italian mainland.

Counter-attacking Greek forces were reported to have driven a new salient into the centre of the sagging Italian lines.

Mopping up operations were proceeding further south in territory abandoned by the Italian right wing.

Advices from the front said the Greeks were now in a position to dominate the important road leading south-westward from Koritza.

A despatch from Ioannina said that the Greeks not only were systematically penetrating Albanian territory, but were seriously threatening vital Italian communications lines and that an Italian retreat 'on a major scale" could be expected.

Greek aircraft, however, bombed that important Italian invasion base yesterday, the high command said, destroying "a considerable number" of Italian aircraft on the ground and blowing up a large building.

Egypt's Premier Dies Reading Throne Speech

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 14 (AP) — Egyptian Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha collapsed and died today as he was readying the speech from the throne at the opening session of parliament.

The premier was carried from the chamber and the reading of the speech was continued by the president of the senate.

Strangely, the words of the speech were much the same as those Sabry Pasha used in the first royal statement read by him as new head of the government last July.

Then he said: "Egypt, who is anxious to maintain her integrity and independence is equally anxious to fulfil her obligations toward her great ally, Britain, and to carry out her alliance of friendship in the letter and spirit."

Today the speech said the country had "executed the treaty of alliance and friendship with Britain with complete sincerity, both in letter and spirit."

Egypt, it said, is jealous of her sovereignty and independence and is "striving to conserve her security and maintain her integrity."

The premier undertook the task of organizing a coalition cabinet last summer after Italy entered the war. Previously he had served as minister of communications and minister of marine and war.

15 For The Day

London, Nov. 14 (CP)

ROYAL AIR FORCE fighting planes roared to battle off the southeast coast today and shot down 13 German dive bombers and one fighter seeking to cross the Channel for daylight raids on Britain.

In all 15 enemy planes were destroyed, the air ministry said.

Two light formations of Nazi planes tried to attack London, but were repelled by defence fighters before they could reach the capital proper.

100 Non-Military Centres Bombed

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(CP).—The Ministry of Information in a denial of German statements that German air bombings were directed only against military objectives today listed more than 100 non-military objectives damaged in the last nine weeks by Nazi bombs.

Ten hospitals and 24 churches were included. The list included:

Hospitals: Charterhouse, Great Ormond street, London, Queen Mary's, St. Bart's Medical School, St. Thomas's, Swiss Relief Centre, Ford's Hospital at Coventray, American Ambulance Unit at Tunbridge Wells.

Churches: Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, Canterbury Cathedral, St. Martin-in-the-Fields, St. Clement Dane's, St. Giles' Cripplegate, St. Swithin's in Cannon street, St. Augustine in Watling street, St. Bonifacen in Adler street, St. Dun-

Million Britons Will Be Drafted Into Munitions

LONDON, Nov. 14—(CP Cable).—An industrial speed-up has been ordered by the Government which will involve the drafting of 1,000,000 men and women into the production of munitions by August, 1941.

The object of the scheme is to place Britain's output of war essentials by the end of the second year of war at a pitch reached in 1918, four years after the outbreak of the First Great War.

Of the 1,000,000 new workers to be drafted to wartime essential industries, 500,000 will be women. The Government will comb the non-essential industries for trained workers who can be transferred to the production of planes, tanks, warships and other implements of war.

Hint Molotoff's Trip Of Concern To Turkish Stand

MOSCOW, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Red Star, Soviet army organ, said today the visit to Berlin of Premier Molotoff would bring "a strengthening and development of Soviet-German relations in the interests of both countries."

This was the first Soviet comment on the Premier's trip since a communique on Nov. 9 announced his acceptance of the German invitation to visit Berlin.

The newspaper, commenting on the visit, said:

"German and Italian newspapers emphasize that Molotoff's trip is an event of first-rate political significance. There is no doubt that the renewal of personal contact and a friendly exchange of opinions with leaders of German policy will make for further strengthening and development of Soviet-German relations in the interests of both countries."

Fantastic, Rome Says Of U.K. Taranto Claims

ROME, Nov. 14—(AP). — British bomber formations, seeking out the seat of Italian naval power in an effort to deliver crippling blows, again attacked the strongly fortified fleet base at Taranto and raided the southern port of Crotone, the Italian high command admitted today.

At the same time British announcements of the damaging of half of Italy's six battleships and two of her cruisers in a Monday night aerial attacks were claimed to be "fantastic."

(A British communique, describing the new raid on Taranto naval base, said docks and harbors were hit in a "successful attack" Wednesday night).

The Italian communique said only that "some damage" was caused to dwellings, three persons were killed and 12 injured.

The bombs at Crotone, across the Gulf of Taranto, were claimed to have fallen in the harbor.

(The British communique did not mention Crotone).

In a supplement to its regular communique the Italian high command said:

"Yesterday Mr. Churchill gave out a version in the House of Commons of what took place which, in large part, is fantastic.

"Occasion will not be lacking in the next few days for a final, detailed statement, not only on the Taranto episode, but on the whole naval warfare and air and naval situation in the Mediterranean."

Puppet Rule Protests On Lorraine

Protests On Expulsion Of Frenchmen Denies Backing Move

VICHY, France, Nov. 14—(AP).—The Vichy Government announced today it had protested to the German Armistice Commission concerning the expulsion of French-speaking residents from the Province of Lorraine.

A communique, issued after a cabinet meeting, declared the Germans had given French-speaking Lorraine residents the choice of being expelled to Poland or France.

Since all chose France, the communique declared, the residents were being transferred into the unoccupied zone of France at the rate of seven trains daily.

The Germans were accused of telling the Lorrainers that the action was being taken as the result of an alleged accord between Vichy and Berlin.

"The government issues a most formal denial of this allegation," the communique said.

Vice-Premier Pierre Laval, who returned to Vichy this morning at Chief of State Philippe Petain's request, gave the government a first-hand account of conditions in the German-occupied zone—of which Lorraine is a part.

The population transfers from Lorraine to the unoccupied zone were said to have begun November 11.

After denying that the French were in accord with the Germans on the transfers, the communique said there never had been any question of measures of this kind in recent French-German conversations.

"As concerns the fact of the expulsion, the French government protests to the German Armistice Commission," the communique said.

Laval's return, interrupting negotiations with German authorities in Paris, was regarded here as abrupt. Political observers expressed surprise, since he had not been expected before Saturday at the earliest.

R.A.F. Taranto Stroke Stirs New Fears

LONDON, Nov. 14—(CP).—The triumph over the Italian fleet by torpedo-carrying aircraft of the British fleet air arm has altered the balance of power in the Mediterranean area on land as well as at sea, naval sources said today.

With one stroke, they said, the fleet air arm has:

1. Eased the task of convoys reinforcing the British armies in Egypt and Palestine.

2. Released powerful naval units for service in the Far East, where the appointment of Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham as commander-in-chief points to a strengthening of the Empire's Oriental forces.

3. Allowed Britain's battle cruisers and lighter ships armed with eight-inch guns to join in the search for a German commerce raider in the Atlantic.

4. Boosted the British Empire's prestige with the Turks, Greeks and Moslems of the Eastern Mediterranean area.

5. Reversed the ratio of capital ships in the Mediterranean from six-to-four in favor of Italy to four-to-three in favor of Britain.

British authorities said torpedo-carrying planes of the fleet severely damaged two Italian battleships, "probably" knocked a third out of action; and wrecked two cruisers and two auxiliary warships in an armistice night raid on the Italian naval base at Taranto, in Southern Italy. They declared the only battleships Italy still has in action are of first Great War vintage.

They also saw in the attack proof that airplanes operating from aircraft carriers at sea can sink a battleship with their one-ton torpedoes, if not with bombs.

The man most affected by the British victory is Lt.-Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, who expects to find it easier to reinforce his armies in Palestine and Egypt, facing Italian forces estimated by neutral sources as two or three times stronger numerically.

British naval and military circles said, however, that Italy's always-difficult problems of reinforcing her legions in North Africa now verges on the "impossible."

Japs To Grab All Indo-China?

New Demands Want Troops At Saigon—Threat British Malay

SHANGHAI, Nov. 14. — (AP)—Foreign circles expressed belief today that Japan was preparing for another move in the near future against French Indo-China, possibly ending the shaky sovereignty of that French colony.

Chinese newspapers contended Japan was aiming at permanent occupation of all French Indo-China.

Chinese reported new Japanese demands on the colony included the right to land troops at the southern port of Saigon, circulation of Japanese military yen throughout the country and "loans" of 500,000 Indo-China dollars a month to finance exports to Japan.

Foreign sources lacked information whether such demands actually had been presented but said current developments did point to another Japanese move against Indo-China in the near future.

The Japanese already have won air bases and other military concessions and stationed troops in Northern Indo-China.

Foreign officials saw another immediate source of danger to Indo-China in the current tension with Thailand (Siam). It was held likely that any serious clash between the two might be used as a Japanese pretext for landing troops and "restoring order."

Some colonial leaders, including a number who favor the Free French movement of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and who oppose yielding to Japan are gathered at Saigon, but they lack the forces necessary to put up a successful fight.

British strategists are known to be deeply concerned by the likelihood of Japanese control of Southern Indo-China, for Japanese troops there could move unopposed across Thailand and blockade the Malay Peninsula in the event of a British-Japanese conflict.

India For Reds In Nazi Plans

May Toss In Turkey, Iran In New Space Allotment Shuffle

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(CP). — A Berlin dispatch to The Associated Press from its chief of bureau in the German capital, Louis P. Lochner, today said that according to German sources Hitler and Molotoff agreed upon a Russian "grossraum"—or vast space domination—extending through British India to the world's oceans.

The dispatch quoted these sources as including Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan and British India in this Russian sphere, with Germany and Italy "allotting" the rest of Europe and Africa to themselves.

Here's Lochner's report of the picture of the newest ambitions as developed from inquiries in quarters which he termed "always reliable on matters of foreign policy."

"1.—Russia will have her 'grossraum,' or vast space of domination, just as the Axis and Japan arranged to have theirs by the terms of the three-power pact they signed September 27.

"2.—This 'grossraum' will not be created at the expense of parties not involved in the present European conflict. In other words, no further slice will be taken out of Finland nor will the Dardanelles be taken from Turkey, provided she behaves in a matter no inimical to the Axis and Russia.

"3.—Turkey must make up her mind definitely and finally anent her place in the future scheme of things. Germany, Italy and Russia all feel confident that Turkey will, in due time, seek an anschluss with the totalitarian powers.

"If any further argument is needed to convince Turkey where her bread is buttered, Russia, with her friendship pact with Turkey, is the obvious partner to present the additional arguments.

"4. Whatever compensation Russia may desire in return for her support of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo arrangements must come from a 'bankruptcy inventory' of the British

Chamberlain Rests In Abbey

Ashes Are Placed Beside Those Of Bonar Law

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(CP).— The ashes of the former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain were buried to-day beneath the grey stone floor of the nave of Westminster Abbey, resting place of many of Britain's historic figures.

At the close of the 40-minute Anglican service, Mrs. Chamberlain, heavily veiled, knelt on the floor, took chrysanthemum petals from her handbag and dropped them into the two-foot square, purple-lined crypt.

Prime Minister Churchill, clad in a long black coat with an astrakhan collar, stood intent among the cabinet ministers throughout the service at the graveside.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP). — Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, suggests that United States industry supplant the five-day with the six-day week as a means of increasing production "when the slack of unemployment has been taken up."

Addressing the Academy of Political Science last night, Sloan asserted the key to national defence "is the strongest, most virile, the most aggressive economy that the creating genius of America can devise."

"Output can be increased 20 per cent by working six days a week in place of five days. It seems clear that this would be the first step,

Red Commissar Heads Home "In Agreement With Nazis Upon All Important Topics"

British Attack Lends Touch Of Excitement To Russian's Final Night In Berlin After 2 Days Of Dashing Parley To Parley

LONDON, Nov. 14 (CP)—British bombers heavily attacked objectives in the centre of Berlin last night, the air ministry announced today.

The attacks on the German capital were carried out during "widespread operations" over Germany in the face of "extremely adverse weather," a communique declared.

Among the targets listed as bombed in the Berlin area were the Schleisischer railway station and the Grunewald freight yards.

Molotoff Moscow-Bound.

BERLIN, Nov. 14—(AP).—A communique issued at the close of Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff's visit to Berlin today said Germany and Soviet Russia were of a single mind "on all important questions of interest" to them.

Molotoff and his retinue left Berlin at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EDT) after two days of conferences with Hitler and other Nazi leaders.

The communique issued soon after his departure said:

"During his visit to Berlin on November 12-13, 1940, Chairman of the People's Council and Foreign Minister Molotoff had talks with the Fuehrer and Reich's Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

"An exchange of views was carried out in an atmosphere of mutual trust and led to mutual accord on all important questions of interest to Germany and the U.S.S.R."

Molotoff was accompanied to the station by Foreign Minister Ribbentrop with whom he had a final conference of several hours last night after a formal reception at the Russian Embassy.

Soviet Ambassador Alexander Schwarzew boarded the special train with his chief, who departed with the mystery which has surrounded his visit unrelieved by any immediate disclosure of the nature of his talks with Nazi leaders.

British aircraft lent a touch of excitement to the Russian statesman's last night in the German capital by raiding the city for the first time since his arrival Tuesday morning.

Fires were started in the outskirts of the capital, German authorities said.

Swiss Bag Nazi Plane.

(Zurich, Switzerland, had a brief air raid alarm at 11.45 p.m., 6.45 p.m. EDT—and a German plane later crashed in a neighboring canton).

Molotoff had his second meeting with Hitler yesterday afternoon—a four-hour conference which followed talks with Marshal Goering and Deputy Nazi Leader Hess.

It was believed unlikely that any announcement concerning the outcome of the talks would be made here until Molotoff returned to Moscow and reported to his chief, Joseph Stalin.

The Nazi press, avoiding speculation on the nature of the Berlin conferences, devoted considerable space to a purported analysis of European history which, it said, gave a basis for future co-operation between Germany and Russia.

Digging Way Back.

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt mentioned German-Russian co-operation during seven-years' war in the Napoleonic era and discussed family relationships between the Hohenzollerns and the Romanoffs.

(The last ruling Hohenzollern was Kaiser Wilhelm II, who abdicated just before the close of the First Great War and was exiled to Doorn, Holland. The Romanoffs, Imperial family of Russia before the revolution, were killed by the Bolsheviks who laid the groundwork for the present Stalinist regime.)

While maintaining silence regarding the subject of the talks between Hitler and Molotoff, German official circles watched with keen interest the reaction of the foreign press and radio.

(The official Turkish radio declared last night that the Axis powers were in a hole because of Italy's attack upon Greece and said that Berlin, "having failed to win help from France and Spain, is now trying to win aid from Russia."

(A high Turkish official in Ankara, meanwhile, said that should any decision be taken at Berlin "unfavorable to Turkey, this nation will not be taken unaware.")

It could not be learned whether the fleet would merely pull in at Oran in North Africa to keep an eye on Gen. Maxime Weygand's North African activities or whether it might risk running the gauntlet at Gibraltar to get to an Atlantic port in Africa.

Gen. Weygand was sent as both military and political chief to North Africa. His failure to return to Vichy recently aroused speculation in foreign circles that he was showing an independent attitude toward recent Petain-Laval negotiations with Hitler.

Official statements at Vichy denied Weygand had been summoned home as a result of German displeasure at a statement France would not cede an inch of African territory.

The French steps to counter Gen. De Gaulle were reported taken after the Germans and Italians had warned that if Vichy could not defend its own empire, the Axis would be forced to step in and do the defending.

An urgent Cabinet meeting was said to have been held today and hurried conferences held among the colonial, war and nay Ministers.

Strictly from a naval viewpoint, adherents of air superiority declare the British victory at Taranto sounds the death knell of massive fighting ships, too costly to be risked in action unless they have heavy superiority in guns.

Neutral naval sources termed huge German submarines carrying 20 torpedoes and operating as either underwater or surface craft "a menace more dangerous than any pocket battleship."

These undersea craft, larger than any in the world except the French "Surcouf," usually attack from the surface at dusk. They have a surface speed of 19 knots.

What Is Germany Saying?

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(CP Cable)—The balance of world sea power was "decisively altered" by the Taranto action, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, said Wednesday night in a broadcast.

Declaring that this is the "most important week in the history of naval operations of this war," Mr. Alexander said that the Taranto action, in which aircraft of the fleet air arm surprised and bombed the Italian battle fleet, "provides a clear answer to repeated assertions of the Nazis and their supporters that democracy is decadent."

"The results which flow from the action at Taranto must be far reaching. It is not only that the situation in the Mediterranean has been transformed in a single, swift naval action, but the balance of sea power throughout the oceans of the world is decisively altered."

Germany's surface ships have not always avoided action with British craft, the First Lord said, but the results have been such that the Nazis have been forced to place some reliance in the Italian fleet.

"What is the condition of that fleet today?" the First Lord exclaimed. "It would be interesting to know the comments of the German admiralty."

Referring to the British promise to do all possible to aid Greece, Mr. Alexander said: "Here at Taranto is the fulfillment of that pledge."

Black Italian Week

The action at Taranto was the "climax to a black week for Italian arms," Mr. Alexander said.

"Their defeat at Galabat, their retreat and the destruction of divisions of their crack troops in Greece, the bombing of Italian bases in Albania and Italy, and blows inflicted on each and every arm of the Italian forces have reached their peak with the action at Taranto."

The Italian fleet had "carefully avoided" the action which the British had always sought in the Mediterranean, and had "remained immobile behind the defences of their harbors."

"Even these defences, however, have failed to protect them," Mr. Alexander said. "Within their inglorious shelter, the Italian battle fleet has suffered a defeat."

"I once ventured to say that the Italian admirals regarded their capital ships as a capital investment, and appeared determined to emerge from the war with their capital intact.

"Today we have imposed a severe levy on the Italian navy."

Mr. Alexander compared the success at Taranto with the "No less glorious fight of the Jervis Bay—a fight against overwhelming odds."

"The Jervis Bay," he said, "secured the escape of the vast majority of the convoy in her charge."

In contrast to this tribute was Mr. Alexander's reference to a raid recently made by British light surface forces on four Italian transports in the Straits of Taranto. In this action, he said, the escorting destroyers fled from the scene when the attack began, and one was damaged by gunfire. One transport was sunk; two set on fire, and one heavily damaged.

Mr. Alexander also paid tribute to men of the fleet air arm for their work in the bombardment of Taranto.

machine-guns to each battalion, automatic rifles and a multitude of other equipment of all descriptions.

"The Italians were taken completely by surprise.

"They were marching in four columns of three battalions each. As soon as the fight began and the first machine-gun bursts were fired, the Italians were thrown back and started retreating in a northeasterly direction.

"In a ravine locally called Prionia, we took our first 11 Italian prisoners without resistance. They raised their hands and shouted 'Viva Grecia.'

"At 3 p.m. my battalion attacked, pressing around Distrato. A fight developed in the ravine while I was trying to climb Mount Smolika to gain a dominant firing position.

Thrown Into Ravine

"A night attack launched by more battalions drove the Italians back north of Smolika and threw them into the ravine.

"There the fighting continued for six days. The Italians, being chased back from hilltop to hilltop, managed to take advantage of the terrain to circle about.

"At 1 p.m. on November 5 I received orders to attack and occupy a strategic height with one company of infantry. The height was held by about 400 Italians with full equipment. They were supported by batteries on a hill 1,000 yards away, but by 2:10 p.m. the height was taken, with the Italians driven back, leaving behind 64 dead and wounded and 27 prisoners.

"I was wounded in this engagement. The Italians, fighting in small groups of about 25, retreated in panic. My forces carried on the fight through November 6 when reinforcement arrived. My men were so enthusiastic that I could not hold them back.

"On November 6 the Italians still were being hotly pursued in the direction of Koritza when the retreat developed into an irregular flight; the Italians throwing away their equipment.

"Up to eight o'clock that night, we had taken about 800 Italian prisoners and killed about 1,100.

"On the snow-covered summit of Mount Smolika, which is 8,500 feet high (highest in that region), about 250 Italians were killed by bayonet charges and machine-gun fire.

Cavalry Column Routed

"At 9 o'clock on the night of November 6, an Italian cavalry column coming from the direction of Koritza to assist the retreat was held and dispersed and itself retreated in disorder.

"Panic spread to the whole column. They threw away everything they had in order to flee more quickly.

"We tied our prisoners together with ropes in groups of 18 and led them back, each group being escorted by two Greeks.

"They made no resistance. On the contrary, they seemed pleased at their capture.

"Throughout the fighting, Italian planes with Greek colors machine-gunned and bombed the Greeks. During the first day they flew as low as 1,000 feet.

"Practically all the prisoners we took were young men 20 to 25 years old, many of them wearing beards like that of the lat Italian Marshal Italo Balbo."

The figures given by Kyriakou did not cover the period since November 6, during which the government has announced annihilation of the greater part of an Italian division.

ferences beyond the communique issued after Molotoff's departure, informed sources indicated that it was now up to Turkey to decide whether she would join the forces creating "a new order" in Europe or whether she would stand aside from or even oppose them.

(As the Russian-German conferences began, there was widespread speculation, never confirmed in Berlin, that the talks would centre largely upon the role of Turkey, friend of Britain, in the Near Eastern phase of the war).

Informed sources expressed the opinion that new developments would result from the conferences, not only in Europe, but beyond the European continent. They doubted, however, whether these developments would become visible immediately. They intimated that immediate action resulted usually only after Hitler conferred with Mussolini.

Karl Schnurre, head of the German economic delegation to the U.S.S.R., returned on Molotoff's train to Moscow, as did the German ambassador to Moscow, Count Friedrich von der Schulenberg. The German delegation had been in Moscow for some time before Molotoff's visit.

It is believed possible that the speed-up will involve requisitioning industrial property under government management. This principle is already in operation in many branches of wartime prodeution, the Government taking control of factories falling behind in production or where a change of management is thought to be preferable.

The scheme will be operated in collaboration with Britain's powerful trade unions which have in effect surrendered their rights and privileges for the duration of the war to work in co-operation with the authorities in wartime production.

It is impossible to show what increase the speed-up will mean in Britain's industrial army because the Government stopped publishing figures on the outbreak of war.

A fresh page was written in the glorious history of the Royal Navy when the armed merchantman Jervis Bay, ABOVE, sacrificed itself so that 38 vessels of a convoy might have a chance to escape from a heavily-armed German raider which attacked the convoy off the coast of Ireland and the Jervis Bay immediately rushed to the attack, laying down a smoke screen to enable the convoy to break up and escape. Battling against desperate odds, the Jervis Bay, with guns blazing, kept the Nazi raider occupied until, a blazing hulk, she plunged beneath the sea. In the meantime at least 30 of the 38 ships of the convoy were able to escape. Capt. Stomach and Kidney Troubles Gone; Praises Syntona Tonic

MR. ROBERT THOMBLISON

How many times have you said you would give ANYTHING to be able to eat three good meals a day without getting that heavy, bloated feeling in your stomach that almost makes you gasp for your breath? Those cramps, dizzy spells or nervous headaches; pains in back and limbs caused by excess acids and impurities in the system. Do you know that EVERY DAY reputable men and women who have suffered with one or more of these distressing ailments tell how Syntona has relieved them after everything else they tried had failed? Here, for example, is the experience of Mr. Robert Thombilson, well-known Burlington man, residing at 5 Caroline Street West, as reported only recently:

"I suffered with a gassy, upset stomach and cramps after every meal, and I had to take strong laxatives for constipation. When I would stoop over or get up quickly I would get dizzy spells and I was subject to frequent severe headaches. At night I had to get up at all hours to relieve my kidneys, so I felt tired out and weakened right from the beginning of each day. Then, rheumatic pains set into my shoulders and joints.

"I had tried every treatment I ever heard of, but I couldn't get any satisfactory results, and I often wondered if I would ever feel any better. It was my son who first got me started taking Syntona. He brought some home one day and suggested I try it. Well, I could tell it was helping me right from the first bottle. I liked the way it acted on my stomach and bowels, so I took a full treatment and it fixed me up fine. I soon got so I could eat regular meals and my food digested well. Then, the kidney trouble and rheumatic pains left me. It surely was a great relief, and I would take Syntona any time if my system gets upset again."

If you live in Peterborough or vicinity, go to Elliott's Drug Store, 393 George Street, and get yourself a treatment of this pure herbal compound that is being so widely recommended. Remember the name Syntona, and avoid disappointment. —(Advt.)

Toll Is 7,200 Germans Against 410 Britons, 815 Planes

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(CP)—Two light formations of German planes stabbed at London today but all were turned back by defence fighters before reaching the capital proper.

The Royal Air Force reported it cleared the skies in less than half an hour.

The two formations tried what appeared to be a pincer movement, attacking from two directions.

The first wave of about a dozen bombers, escorted by three high-flying fighters. Crossed the Kent coast and headed for the capital at the same time as another wave of about 20 planes approached from the mouth of Thames.

Some raiders also were reported in the vicinity of the northeast coast during the morning.

Signals wailed an alert in London shortly before noon and Axis raiders were reported over several Midlands towns as air attackers began their second year of assaults on British soil.

The "raiders passed" signal sounded only after a brief time in the capital and one German bomber was

CONVICT'S DAUGHTER

By RUTH RAY KANE

READ THIS FIRST:

Disheartened because she can find no work, Lona Ackerman, whose father is serving a life sentence for murder, finds some consolation after telling her troubles to Jim Claridge, an acquaintance she has decided to trust. Aside from Claridge, she is alone in the world, jobless and broke. Jim gives Lona a lead for another job and she applies at the office of the Western Realties company. Lona likes her new work, sees more and more of Jim evenings.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER TEN

IN THE DAYS that followed, Lona was to learn how difficult it is to shake off the memory of deprivation. Often she recalled the days when, as a child, she had lingered too long on the sled track, unmindful of the cold until the pressure of numbed feet, tingling hands and cramped body could no longer be denied, and she would have to run, in tears, for home and the kitchen stove. Her mother would wrap her in a blanket, peel off her stiffened stockings, scold her gently, make her a hot drink, and in a few minutes she would be toasting before the fire, comfortable and drowsy. But each time she moved, somewhere deep inside of her there would be a shiver. As if she couldn't quite soak up enough heat to wipe out entirely the stinging cold.

It was that way now. After all those desolate, lonely months, to find herself suddenly possessed of a job and a friend. It was too wonderful to last. Something would happen, she kept telling herself. Something was bound to happen. Ever so often in those first few days her fingers would falter on the typewriter keys, and she would remember Hardy and his threats with a little inward shiver. If she could only be sure he wouldn't make good his threat, she would tell herself wistfully, looking about the big, cheery office room that had come to be so familiar to her as to seem almost like home. If only she weren't so afraid.

When her first payday arrived she waited with bated breath. If anything turned up, if Sanders had found out anything about her, surely now was the time for it to come out. But he handed her her check at the end of the first Saturday morning with the short, "Good work, Miss Ackerman," which she had learned to know passed for praise with him, and she had taken heart. Perhaps, after all, her luck HAD changed.

She spent that Saturday afternoon shopping. Out of her twelve dollars she put aside room rent and lunch money and two dollars to be given to Jim Claridge as a first instalment, and still managed a new hat. A cheap hat, of necessity. She had to shop diligently to find a becoming one that would fit her pocketbook. But it was such fun. And the hat, when she found it finally, gave her, despite its flimsiness, the biggest thrill she had ever had from a mere hat. It was a saucy little thing, gray with a tiny blue feather, and a flying wisp of veil from which her blue eyes looked out merrily.

It made a new woman of her, that hat.

"You're a knockout, girl!" Jim Claridge, waiting for her in the stuffy boarding house parlor, acknowledged it admiringly, his eyes reminding her more than ever of Tiny's when she had done something to please him!

"Like it?" she asked, prolonging the moment as long as she could. It was so wonderful to have someone giving her compliments, someone to whom she could talk without being on her guard, someone who understood, as Daddy used to understand.

In the week since she had met Jim, she had realized all over again how terribly lonely she had been. He had fallen into the habit of stopping at the boarding house and taking her out to dinner with him. Because he was lonesome, a stranger in a strange town, he told her. She had been suspicious the first few times that he was really doing it out of pity for her. Then she had come to realize that he really wanted her, liked to talk to her, needed her. They had seen two shows together since that first one. And tonight he was taking her to another when they had finished dinner.

"Can't help but like it," he assured her in his husky drawl. "It sort of—looks like you somehow." He was studying her as she fumbled in her bag a little self-consciously, now that she had drawn his attention to herself. "You're such a little thing. But what's this?"

He drew back as she thrust something into his hand.

"The first payment on what I owe you," she explained.

"But, see here, girl!" His voice was dismayed. "I can't take this. Why, you'd be robbing yourself!"

"But you—you're spending so much on me!" cried Lona, her money sense, quickened by the times she had been through, rearing its head. "I feel ashamed."

He laughed. "You're the first girl I've run across who didn't take all she could get and ask for more," he approved, and the admiration in his tone brought a flush to her cheeks beneath the new hat. It was so good having a friend. As he pushed the bills back into her hand she thought swiftly of the way she had doubted him that first terrible day and her heightened color turned to a flush of shame.

"I'm going to tell Daddy all about you the next time I write," she told him, slipping into step beside him as they went down the street.

He looked down at her, then, with surprising earnestness. "You mustn't do that!" he cried, so vehemently that she searched his face, startled. "You mustn't say a word about me." His voice was almost stern.

"But why " Her tone was wondering.

"A fellow's letters mean so much to him in a place like that. Don't you see that you mustn't tell him about—people you meet? He reads them over and over. Every word

How Shall We Be Aroused?

Prime Minister King and Conservative House Leader Hanson spoke at length in the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne. Apparently both of them were in what is referred to as good form, because Mr. Hanson used about two and a-half hours and in the evening Mr. King did not conclude until 10.30.

Mr. Hanson is not satisfied that people know enough about what has been taking place under the general heading of our war effort. He fears the Government has been sending out a good deal of propaganda for the purpose of making people believe that things are all right when they are far from it, and he wants two committees named to examine and cross-examine responsible parties. He desires that our people shall be fully awake to the seriousness of the situation.

Mr. King answered Mr. Hanson point by point, and that took time, and after that he went ahead with giving a summary of all that had been done, including negotiations with United States on the plan of joint defence with United States, something which seems to have only a faint appeal to Mr. Hanson. He said that at all times the British Government had been kept informed of what was taking place, and approved entirely of what was being done.

Through the debate there appeared to be that one idea — the people must be aroused to realize the seriousness of the situation. And when those who are doing the arousing are at it we believe they are under serious obligation to confine themselves pretty much to known facts so that they may not tilt over too far and land in the company of the defeatists.

So that brings it down to a case of dealing with facts; facts which are known or should be known. If that is to be the basis on which to keep the people properly informed—and it should be—then how many people are there who will take part in the debates at Ottawa who will be able to measure up to that standard and make acceptable contributions?

We are quite certain that newspapers have been doing what they can to keep people informed. They have not been hiding news or sheltering ugly facts. We state that because we do not fully understand what is meant by that oft-used phrase about arousing the people. The people of Canada are intelligent; they know full well that everything they own, hold dear or have reason to hope for is at stake. There is no dividing line between those who are ready to go the whole distance and those who are not. Realizing that we find it difficult to see just what should be done by Ottawa, or the people who gather there, to arouse us. Is there information which has been and is being withheld? Are the members in possession of information which has been hidden from us?

We firmly believe in the supremacy of Parliament, but we expect from our Parliament and its members plain and reasonable evidence that there has been something left undone to accomplish this business of arousing our people. Hinting at it is not sufficient; in fact we regard that method as dangerous. The House has not time to trace down or deny rumors; the country is in no frame of mind to listen to gossip, but it will stop and listen to facts. Now then, let them proceed on that basis.

It's The Worst Month

The Great Lakes are bad business for lake carriers when a storm such as was whipped up on Monday night strikes. That wind storm as it reached our district had evidently lost most of its severity and power for damage, but over Lake Michigan the gale was measured at 78 miles per hour.

Five lake vessels are reported to have foundered; four are aground; four are missing and two are reported in distress. There is a good system in operation to give lake carriers warning of coming storms, and as a rule it works well. In this case it appears to have failed or the storm came on so rapidly that there was not time to run for shelter.

We recall having heard a competent marine engineer discuss the lake carriers in relation to their ability to stand rough weather, and he was not much impressed with their chances. They are slow moving things at best; they carry tremendous loads; the engine is in the rear and the vessels are of very considerable length. When they run into bad weather and high seas it is not possible to manoeuvre them quickly into positions of advantage against the waves, and the engineer's claim was that they are apt to be driven off their course.

November days are those when navigation is drawing to a close for the season. After such a storm as that of Monday details are coming in and such shipping centres as Owen Sound, Midland, Collingwood, Goderich are informed that some of their lake-faring men have gone. There are bad and anxious days when the November gales stir the mighty waters of the Great Lakes.

Not a New Word Here

A writer in the St. Thomas Times-Journal is not going to change his method of pronunciation just because some of the folk from England, now resident here, have a way of their own. We gather the whole business centres about the word "eat" and its varying tenses.

An English girl referred to the meal she "et" the previous evening; a Canadian companion was sure she should have referred to the meal she "ate," and then the argument was on. It was carried, conveyed or wafted to the city hall where some one took time out to look it up in the Oxford Dictionary and came to the conclusion that according to that book it was "et."

But that pronunciation is not new in this country. Jim Curran of the Sault Star has been using it for years. He has long been offering $100 to the person who will walk into his office and claim that he has been "et" by a wolf. We consider that way of using the word as being proper in Algoma. Being "et" by a wolf has a harsh and fitting sound; there is something tragic about it, as though a bone had snapped. Being "eaten" by a wolf fails entirely to convey tragedy; it strips the event of that which is shocking and somewhat uncomfortable; it would not make even a timid person shrink or tremble.

The English visitors did not bring the word "et" into this land. Jim Curran turned it out in his workshop years ago.

Training Pilots In Winter

There have been numerous reports to the effect that a good many pilots now training in Canada will proceed to points in United States where they can go ahead with their work without being interrupted by the conditions prevailing in a hard winter. We have noticed the report which states that there is no official or any other kind of objection in United States, and it is pleasant to find such a feeling existing.

As we understand it the training scheme developed in Canada was to be an all-year business, embracing good weather and bad weather, heat and cold, ice and sunshine, and undoubtedly there is wisdom in that plan.

There are frequent despatches from Europe which tell of R.A.F. pilots going on expeditions over Germany, encountering snow and extreme cold at high altitudes, and that being the condition in the field of war then it follows that training should be done under similar conditions.

What The Bankers Think

The Canadian Bankers' Association is in session in Toronto, and this is the 49th annual meeting. As a rule we do not bother a great deal about such an event, but after fourteen months of war the view of the bankers should be informative. These people deal with money, with loans and such matters and financing a war is something which comes close to the banking business.

H. T. Jaffray, president of the Association, had a good deal to say about it in his address. "A nation's war effort must in the final analysis be governed by its finanical strength." That is especially true in a democracy where there is no forced or free labor.

Our mines are producing new wealth at a highly satisfactory rate, and governments would do well to offer them encouragement and not regard them as sources for increased taxation.

During a year of war bank deposits in Canada have increased by $46,000,000, and at the beginning of September, 1940, stood at $3,142,000,000, indicating that as a people we are in a good position to absorb a number of war loans, and engage actively in the purchase of war securities of all kinds.

Mr. Jaffray was certain this country had the financial power to carry its war program. We found more interest in that than in reading figures about note circulation because we are going in for expenditures on a scale which we have heretofore not known, and some timid folk are certain we can't stand it. So here is the considered opinion of the president:

> "I am firmly convinced that Canada can handle its war effort, limited only by the volume that can mechanically be produced, and without upset to our national economy."

That means we can pay our way and the only limit placed on our effort is our ability to produce mechanically as much as we desire. And there is something here which we are apt to overlook. Just this: We are spending heavily but a good deal of that which we are paying out is going into the pockets of our own people as wages and in that way is placed in circulation. Mr. Jaffray does not favor extreme taxation. At the present rate the manufacturer or the wholesaler has small margin of profit left. As the volume of business increases he will have to increase his stock (or inventories as the bankers call it) and if at the end of the war he is left with a large stock on hand and with nothing in the way of cash to set over against it he is going to be in a bad way, and so are the people who are depending on him for employment.

Interesting to find that Mr. Jaffray refused to grow excited about the enormous amount of wheat we have in this country. He did not moan nor did he wring his hands. Rather he called it a blessing, and stated plainly: "In the long run every bushel of grain that we grow will be needed." What's more the president of the Bankers' Association is certain we are going to win the war, no matter how long it takes. So we know now what is in the mind of the bankers and we find it sound and sensible.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is said that Hitler offered Molotoff everything except the moon. Just why he held out on that we do not know, as it wouldn't cost him anything.

Germans from 14 to 18 years of age are promised butter this winter, but at the moment they are still getting along on small doses of margarine.

In the six months ending with September there were only 207 immigrants reaching Canada from Northern Europe, and that could hardly have been because they did not want to come.

Italian battleships of latest design have been put out of action before they ever engaged in it. The hopeful view of it is that the loss will not be a serious one because they were not taking any part in the war.

Police in Istanbul have been called into action frequently to stop fights between Turks and Italians, and there must be a strong hope on the part of many Italians that the police would interfere to take the Greeks off.

AND SO . . .

(By A.B.K.)

¶ John Henry saved each coin he got, and then he found himself a lot, it thrilled him to the bone; he kept on saving year by year, and felt the time was coming near, when he would have a home.

¶ He laid aside all foolish taste, he put an end to human waste, his coins he soaked with glee; he'd proudly walk around his lot, and see erected on the spot, the home that was to be.

¶ Contractors came and dug a hole, the sight stirred deep John Henry's soul, he watched them every day; he watched them pouring in cement, asked what each gadget in there meant, grew surly at delay.

¶ John Henry and his wife moved in, and sweet content fair smothered him, within his eyes new light; he told his friends to come on in, they'd have no trouble finding him, he'd be there every night.

¶ John Henry bought a little car, 'twould travel fast and very far, and he toured here and there; he joined a lodge, he joined a club, he'd be no isolated dub, he liked the social air.

¶ For bridge his wife is rather keen, she winks at ace and king and queen, at games long hours she'll park; and so the windows in the place, toward which so long he turned his face—at nights are mostly dark.

CAP and BELLS

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

FLEET STREET, the centre of London's newspaper world, is bombed, but still going strong. In or near this half-mile continuation of the Strand is the head-office of every London newspaper of any importance except the famous Times. The association between Fleet Street and printing is a long one; the first printer to set up shop there was Wynkyn de Worde, the assistant of Caxton, who is popularly credited with having introduced the art of printing into England. Wynkyn de Worde died in 1500. It was in Fleet Street that the first English daily newspaper, The Daily Courant, was published in 1702.

C & B

Fleet Street is full of memories. Samuel Pepys, Oliver Cromwell, Nell Gynn, Izaak Walton, Dryden and Oliver Goldsmith are all intimately associated with it. But beyond any doubt the patron saint of Fleet Street is Doctor Samuel Johnson, and there is likewise no doubt that if the great doctor were alive at this moment he would have something to say to any Nazi who dared to bomb his sacred precinct that would amaze and horrify Herman Goering himself. Johnson dearly loved London; he could never understand why his friends wanted to make excursions into the barbarous country; but of all London he loved Fleet Street best; it was his kingdom.

C & B

Johnson is a man who is frequently misjudged. He is known today chiefly as a master of the moribund art of conversation. The wise-cracks of Samuel Johnson have never been equalled for force and aptness; they were as sharp as knives and were delivered like the knock-out punches of a great boxer; they admitted of no reply. When Johnson crushed a man, he stayed crushed. We have a storehouse of Johnson's pungent wit in the great Life of him written by his admirer James Boswell. But as a result of this conversational gift unthinking people are apt to discount Johnson's true greatness; there are even people who say that Dr. Johnson would be forgotten today if he were not the subject of the finest and most entertaining biography in our language. This is nonsense; Johnson's fame is not built upon his wit, but upon his immense work on behalf of English criticism. His greatness rests upon his Dictionary and upon his fine edition of Shakespeare, one of the most sensible treatments of that poet which he has ever been accorded by a critic; Johnson's work in this direction was what made it possible for him to dominate the thought of an era, and to leave posterity no choice but to call his day the Age of Johnson.

C & B

Another Fleet Street ghost is Oliver Goldsmith, one of the most charming and most feckless characters in all the history of British letters. All his life of forty-four years he spent in poverty and overwork, for he had no talent at all for financial matters. Many times Johnson was a good friend to him, and the story is well known how Johnson called one day to find Goldsmith in danger of eviction from his house; hastily the good doctor went to a bookseller with one of his friends manuscripts and sold it for enough to keep a roof over Goldsmith's head; in this strange manner the Vicar of Wakefield was given to the world.

C & B

THIS brief return to the eighteenth century brings to mind the habit of snuff-taking which was so prevalent then. It was by no means always the elegant practice that sentimentalists like to imagine. Toward the end of the eighteenth century an advertisement appeared in a London paper for a Patent Snuff-Gun which could be applied to the nostrils and which would force enough snuff into them to last the user for several hours! With many people snuff-taking was an incessant and rather dirty habit. It was said of Voltaire that if his head had been opened his brain would be found to consist entirely of snuff. Doctors preached in vain against the dangers of the habit, but snuff was the rage, and was quite as common as smoking is now.

C & B

Perhaps some readers may not know exactly what snuff is. It is made from tobacco which is moistened and then mixed with salt and scent, such as attar of roses; this mixture is then allowed to dry and to ferment, after which it is ground into powder. The strength of the snuff depends upon the type of tobacco used. Maccaboy is the gentlest snuff; it is a fine brown powder and is usually expensively scented. Rappee is a stronger snuff, and is coarser ground. There is also a variety called Irish snuff which is exceedingly strong, and is beyond the endurance of all but the most hardened and unregenerate noses. Snuff is inhaled through the nose, and causes a pleasant tickling, which many people enjoy; its effect as a stimulant is more immediate and shorter-lived than that of smoking. The habit is not a hard one to acquire, though the beginner usually takes a cold because of the unwonted stimulation of the mucous membrane.

C & B

Snuff-taking is by no means a thing of the past. In 1939, in the United States alone, thirty-eight million pounds of snuff were manufactured and consumed. Consumption in Canada is considerable. One tobacconist in Toronto sells over a ton of snuff every year; most of it, he says, goes to older men and women, many of them Continental Jews who have brought the habit from their homes in Europe, but quite a lot of it is sold to young people who prefer the habit to smoking, or whose work is of a nature which prohibits smoking. Probably Canada's most eminent snuff-taker is Professor George Wrong of Toronto University, the well-known authority on Canadian history; his snuff-boxes have been the wonder of several generations of students. Snuff may also be chewed, like plug tobacco, but the true and traditional snuff-takers regard this, perhaps with some justification, as a dirty habit and in no way connected with their own.

"Carrying On" In Britain

THE Christian Science Monitor has received a large number of letters from England, both directly and from the writers' friends in America, describing daily experiences under aerial bombardment. From these the editors have culled material which seems to supplement the news-column reports.

Manchester.

The destroyer-bases deal with your country seems to have bucked everyone up over here. It makes you seem a bit nearer....

We are beginning to notice the shortage of some kinds of foods, but they are what one would call luxury foods and we are by no means going hungry. We cannot get lemons except at about sixpence each; eggs, too, are going very dear, and all kinds of tinned milk. Soon no more of it is to be made and all milk is to be used in its natural state and special concessions given the poor or people with children.

E—— and I are groaning at the income tax increase. I have to pay now about three times as much as before. Income tax is to be deducted from our wages weekly soon by the firms for whom we work.

People are being simply marvelous. One quite poor woman I met in the train whose house and all she had were destroyed by bombs remarked to me: "Herr Hitler may be mighty, but God is All-mighty," and she went on to tell me how she was going to rebuild her life....It is just that something about the British that Hitler will neither be able to understand nor cope with.

Some of the big shops—Lewis's and Affleck & Brown, for instance — are letting their workpeople come in at 11 o'clock two mornings a week, so that they can have extra sleep.

Most cinemas and theaters are starting earlier in the evening and finishing earlier, because people do not want to be caught in town and perhaps have to spend all night in a shelter....

It was reported in the papers the other day that when a train drew into the station with an air raid in progress, a porter helped an old lady into the underground shelter, when she turned to him and said: "An ancient Briton returning to her cave."

I had a short session with the London Defense Brigade. We had our guns out on the Wimbledon Common, but the most "common" thing about was Jerry planes; they simply ....med about, and we got cracking quite a bit. We don't know for certain if we did any good, as most of our firing was at night. Brooks fireworks is like a penny rocket in comparison to the barrage that the London sector is putting up.

As you know, London has taken quite a dusting, but my hat is off to the people. It's amazing how they have taken it, and are carrying on. Nothing that has been written in the papers is "flowery" enough.

HAROLD.

LONDON.

Here at Y.W.C.A. headquarters we have two shelters. At first we lost much time by going down at the wail of the "banshee," as Mr. Churchill calls the siren. (By the way, the East End calls it the Syreen, and an infant born in a shelter has been christened "Syreen").....

The big gym has become a Public Air Raid Shelter. It has rows of benches and holds hundreds. Also it has the gym piano and the public sings heartily through hours of waiting. As I write, I hear strains of "Pack Up Your Troubles," following "There'll Always Be An England," the very nicest song this war has produced. They will also "Roll Out the Barrel" and likewise "Run, Rabbit, Run," and then they'll go back to ballads of the '90's.

One Saturday afternoon there was an odd mixture. Dr. Darke, the conductor, has been carrying on an open chorus every Saturday since January. On this particular Saturday there was a warning and down they came, a hundred of them, proposing to continue their practice on Brahms' Requiem. The other hundreds got bored and in a pause a high Cockney voice from the other end piped, "Who killed Cock Robin?' Dr. Darke took the hint, asked if they would like to sing and when I wandered around, there was this famous conductor in blue shirt sleeves with perspiration pouring down his face, conducting the whole roomful in "John Peel." They did a Mendelssohn anthem and then they also "packed up their troubles" and smiled, smiled, smiled.

Our big shelter has become famous. A small restaurant near by has a sign "3 minutes from London's nicest air-raid shelter."....

Tragedy has come very close. Every night we have some pathetic case brought in—to be comforted and fed. The most moving story I've yet heard is from Violet Tritton. Down at the docks there is a club, started by her and now run by us. They have been taking in hundred of people, homeless through the great fires. There was no food and they needed a meal, so the workers went round the neighborhood, and the poor gave of their little stores—a few potatoes, a bit of this and that, and a pork butcher gave 300 sausages, and somehow that great crowd were fed amply, a hot meal—a modern feeding of the multitude.

CHARLOTTE.

HOMING CANARY

INCREDIBLE as it may appear, there is ample proof that a tiny canary flew from San Diego to Los Angeles, a distance of over 125 miles.

When Mrs. Edith Arris moved to Los Angeles, where she had formerly lived with her eight-year-old canary named "Pat," she left the bird in care of Mrs. Lillian Williams of San Diego. In mid-July the bird escaped from its open cage and disappeared.

About two weeks later Pat was picked up in Los Angeles by a kindly woman only a few blocks away from his former home. Bruised and weakened after his heroic ordeal, he was taken to a pet shop for treatment. A few days later Mrs. Arris visited the shop on an errand for her neighbor and had her attention called to the crippled bird. Recognition was mutual between Pat and his mistress.

ONE HUN THE FEWER

ONE of our most implacable enemies, Captain Eberhard Spiller, until the outbreak of war resident at the German Embassy at Carlton House Terrace as an air attache, has been shot down by a Spitfire while on a spying tour of London in a Nazi machine. His body was riddled with bullets.

A former special branch officer who knew Spiller intimately told an Empire News representative that Spiller's was the guiding brain behind the bombing of London.

Very high in the councils of the Nazi party in London—situated just before the war at Cleveland terrace, Bayswater—Spiller made no secret of his hatred of everything English and of his hopes one day to decimate London.—Empire News, Manchester.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?....When a righteous man turneth away from his righeousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die. Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye.—Ezekiel xviii, 23, 26, 27, 31, 32.

THREE TEAMS ARE TIED FOR TOP PLACE IN THE SENIOR O. H. A.

Hamilton Whips London 8-2; Dukes, Falls Tie

TORONTO, Nov. 14. — (CP).—Three teams were tied in top place in O.H.A. senior hockey to-day after the tumult and shouting of last night's two uproarious league games died away. Hamilton and Toronto Marlboros joined Port Colborne at the head of the class when Hamilton trounced London 8-2 at London and Marlboros held Niagara Falls to a 4-4 overtime deadlock at Toronto.

It was the second time this season that Marlboros and Niagara Falls failed to reach a decision, and brought forth some rather conclusive evidence as to at least one of the lads who should be in close running for league scoring honors this season. Bobby Walton, clever centreman on Niagara Falls' first forward string, got three of his team's goals, including one that tied the score in the third period Sy Allen got the other Niagara Falls goal. Cooper assisted in two of Walton's goals.

Eddie King was the big shot in Marlboros' attack with two goals Murray Ezeard and Drummond scored the others.

Plenty Of Action.

But the Hamilton-London fracas supplied most of the extra-curricular action. Jack Eley, Brandon-born goalkeeper, who has guarded nets from that Manitoba city to the Maritimes, started the monkey-business in the second period when he tripped fiery little Red Geddes after the London winger made a rush.

Geddes and Eley started throwing punches after the trip, and after game officials stopped the battle Geddes was given a five-minute penalty, Eley a two-minute stretch, leaving Hamilton without a goalkeeper for that time. London didn't score, however, and Eley got back to his nets just as the period ended. Officials had been forced to stop other minor outbreaks of high feeling.

Trent Group To Meet

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 14 (ENS) —Hockey will get its first go of the season this Friday evening at a meeting called to promote Midget and Bantam classes. Harold Dunk, a member of the Ontario Bantam and Midget Hockey Association executive arranged the meeting, to which 16 schools in the district from Trenton to Marmora have been invited to send representatives who it is hoped will return to form teams that will result in some lively competitions during the coming winter for the Trent Valley section.

Sea Drive In Spring

LONDON, Nov. 14—(CP).—A very powerful German effort to wreck the British convoy system in the Spring was forecast today by Ronold Cross, Minister of Shipping.

He told the House of Commons, however, that British strength would improve until "we achieve mastery of attacks on convoys both by sea and by air."

He warned that Nazi agents in ports throughout the world are working to ruin British shipping.

Not Telling

LONDON, Nov. 14 — (CP). — Demands for the bombing of Rome raised to-day in the House of Commons, met this reply from Capt. H. H. Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air: "It would be wrong for the Government to give away strategic plans for raiding enemy objectives."

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown when it comes to big league managerial berths. It's nice work while you can get it—and hold it—piloting clubs under the big top but there are few other occupations in which so much in the way of production is demanded. And those who fail to produce pennant-winners, in some cities at least, can expect nothing but a speedy separation from the pay roll. The latest manager to find that out is Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs. Phil Wrigley, president of the Chicago National League, has announced that Hartnett's contract will not be renewed when it expires at the end of the present year. His successor has not yet been named but it is intimated that those under consideration for the post are already under contract with other clubs and the Cubs will have to negotiate with their present employers before any dealings with the men themselves can be put in motion.

* * * * * *

Gabby Hartnett was once one of Chicago's hero s and he has given the Cubs long years of good service, first as one of the best catchers in the game and more recently as manager of the club. It will be recalled that he replaced Charlie Grimm as pilot during the season of 1938 and that he was successful that season in leading the Cubs to the National League championship. Next season, however, the Chicago club did not do so well and had to be content with four place. In the 1940 campaign the Cubs slipped again and when they finally wound up out of the first division altogether Hartnett had to take the rap for the downfall of the organization. Chicago fans had howled that with the material available the club should have finished higher up the ladder and now the Cubs' owner has put his manager's neck on the block in answer to the popular clamor.

* * * * * *

Along with Hartnett's case comes another announcement that should help to convince young players in all branches of sport that the hero of today is the bum of tomorrow. Manager Jack Adams has told the world that Scotty Bowman, well known Red Wing defence player has been released outright by Detroit and that he has been waived from both the National and American Hockey Leagues. Only yesterday, it seems, Bowman was a recognized defence star commanding a good salary as a regular with the Red Wings. Now there is no place for him either in the upper crust of professional hockey or in the minor pro organization. He had joined the Detroit club in 1935 and was one of the regulars of the team last season. The quickness with which fortune changes should help to keep younger stars from getting swollen craniums.

Peterborough, apparently, is not the only sporting centre to report a dearth of men of the right calibre who are willing to devote a little of their time, experience and financial assistance to the promotion of minor league sport. Belleville which operated a successful 4-club juvenile hockey league last winter is sending out an S.O.S. to that kind of leader just now. "Such an organization," says the Quinte sports commentator "needs the supervision of adults, especially of business men. A few interested business men would add considerably to the prestige of the local minor league sponsors." There is no doubt of that fact and the statement is true in a lot of other places besides Belleville. Incidentally as a proof of how important is a good juvenile league as a producer of hockey material it is announced that at least five graduates from last year's Belleville juvenile league are expected to make the grade with the Belleville junior O.H.A. squad this season.

* * * * * *

From Belleville, too, comes a report that Squadron Leader Tommy Laurence may soon be back at the Trenton Airport again and that his arrival may mean another smart team of puck chasers representing the R.C.A.F. Squadron Leader Laurence was one of the moving spirits in hockey at Trenton and led the Fliers a long way along the championship trail in 1937 when they had the strongest team that has yet represented them in organized hockey. Peterborough players and fans will hope that the report is true for they would like nothing better than to have the R.C.A.F. back in this group again this season with a battling squad. The rivalry between the Petes and the Fliers has been a great thing for the group. There has been keen competition but the two organizations have always had a considerable amount of respect for one another and so far as the Petes are concerned they would miss the battles with the airmen.

* * * * * *

The Belleville intermediate squad is beginning to take form and the Van Horne Memorial series in Kingston will give a good opportunity to get a line on the strength of the outfit. According to Ken Colling the Belleville gang are still angling for a goalkeeper and it is intimated that they may secure the services of Sergt. Laurie Gibson of the R.C.A.F. for the series. Harry McCreary joined the Belleville team over the week-end and will be used on the defence with the perennial Speedy St. Louis, one of the promoters of the club and Donohue a newcomer who played down east last season. It is reported there are several new faces on the lineup but who they are and how good they may prove to be will have to wait for a while. It would be good news indeed for Peterborough to learn that the Fliers are back and that the Belleville team is stronger than for some seasons. Plenty of competition in the group is the stuff upon which good seasons are built.

First Goal For Calladine

Bill Calladine shot his first goal in professional hockey last night when he registered the only marker scored by the Philadelphia Ramblers in their American League game against the Hornets in Pittsburgh. The Hornets won 2 to 1. Roubell scored for them in the first period when the Ramblers were short-handed and Calladine tied it up early in the second session when he fooled Goalie McAtee, Kuntz and Judza getting assists on the play. Soon after, however, Currie scored the winning goal for the Hornets unassisted and there was no further scoring. Calladine has been on the starting line for the Ramblers in the last two games and has a score of three scoring points to his credit.

It is to be imagined that Mister Morrison of the Niagara Falls Brights had a tough time on the return trip to the Falls last night in getting anyone to talk to him after a game with the Marlboros. The Brights succeeded in getting a draw with the Dukes which probably wasn't a bad night after all but the reason Mister Morrison is in the doghouse was that if he had not had the misfortune to score a goal in his own net the Cataract team would have gone home with a win and two points instead of one. Morrison's tough break came after a Duke attacker had fired a wide shot in the general direction of the Niagara Falls' net. The puck hit the back board, bounded out in front and Morrison scrambling to clear knocked it past Goalie Carey. There wasn't a Marlboro player anywhere near him when he netted the rubber.

Grey Fox Purchased By Mrs. J. B. Johnston

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 14—(AP). —Mrs. James B. Johnston of Detroit purchased Grey Fox, yearling full brother of Greyhound, the world's fastest trotter, for $6,100 yesterday at the annual Indianapolis trotting and pacing horse auction sale.

This was said to be the highest price of the fall season for a yearling standard-bred horse. The successful bid actually was made by Sep Palin, Greyhound's mentor ever since he was sold here in 1933.

Palin will take the colt and prepare him for his two-year-old form. Others who bid for the much-heralded youngster included Dr. H. M. Parshall of Urbana, O., Harry Short of Columbus, O., and C. M. Saunders of Toledo, O.

Vic Fleming, noted Grand Circuit reinsman from Syracuse, N.Y., gave $1,800 for the yearling Hal Dale pacer Manners, the highest price of the day for pacing colts. Five yearlings by Hal Dale averaged $1,005.

Indebted To Canada

SYDNEY, Nov. 14 (CP Cable) — The Sydney Morning Herald said today that the empire is greatly indebted to Canada for furthering cooperation with the United States. What the empire owes to Canada's vigor, her diplomatic as well as material energy, cannot justly be assessed, the newspaper said, referring to Prime Minister Churchill's and Prime Minister Mackenzie King's recent statement on the empire's relations with the United States.

Dick McMahon of Lexington, Ky., retired manager of Warren Wright's thoroughbred nursery, Calumet Farm, and who gained fame as a harness-horse driver by winning the 1932 Hambletonian Stake with Calumet Butler, got back into the sport by bidding $475 for Provident, by Spencer, a former Hambletonian winner, and $1,000 for Uncle Scott, by Volomite.
